FIRST AMBASSADOR OF BELGIANS SAILS.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

BRUSSELS, Aug. 30.—Baron Emil de Cartier de Marchienne left Brussels yesterday for Washington as the first Belgian Ambassador to the United States.

Baron Cartier de Marchienne had, since February 1, 1917, been Belgian Minister at Washington, the office having been raised to the rank of an embassy recently.

REPUBLICANS AVOID TARIFF LEGISLATION.

PLAN IS TO LET ISSUE ALONE UNTIL AFTER ELECTION OF 1920.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—There will be no tariff legislation at this special session or the regular session of Congress. That at least is the agreement among the Republican leaders, who have decided to kill all popgun bills designed to grant protection to special interests. This will apply to California beans, tungsten, magnesite and manganese, as well as scores of other manufacturing and raw products that need or appear to need assistance in competition with foreign products.

The one and possible exception to this rule will be fertilizers, chemicals and fine instruments from Germany. This will probably be in the shape of a rider to one of the supply bills, or some other general legislation and will get through the gauntlet of Republican censorship on the ground it is a war measure.

Most of the leaders like Senator Penrose, who, as head of the Senate Finance Committee, is responsible for all tariff legislation, want the tariff left alone until after the election in 1920 when they expect to bring in a new tariff bill which will correct all the ills at which these separate bills aim. If the Republican plans do not miscarry the President in office at that time will be a Republican, and he will not oppose a tariff with some protection in it.

Western producers of metals like tungsten, will be hard hit by this decision. In the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee of the House, the western men had made a good case and had proved that it was impossible to continue profitably without protection from foreign competition.

PART OF FAMED FIRST DIVISION COMES HOME.

TENTATIVE ARRANGEMENTS ARE MADE FOR BIG PARADE IN NEW YORK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Nearly 1800 officers and men of the First Division, the first members of that outfit to return home after more than two years' service overseas, arrived today from France. Maj.-Gen. Edward F. McGlachlin, Jr., commander of the division, his staff and detachments of the Twenty-eighth Infantry and First Engineers were on the transport Orizaba, while nineteen officers and thirty enlisted men comprising the advance section which is to make arrangements for the division's reception, returned on the transport Pastores.

Tentative arrangements have been made for a parade of the division on Fifth avenue, September 10.

BACK FIRE ON TREATY

League's Foes Plan to Follow Wilson.

Johnson may be Chosen to do the Detraction Act in Speaking Tour.

Owen Accuses Lodge of Partisanship in Covenant Opposition.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Republican Senate leaders today discussed plans for sending speakers behind President Wilson during his tour of the West next month in the interest of the peace treaty, but final details were not decided upon.

Senator Johnson, Republican, California, probably will be the principal speaker and the proposal under consideration is to have a special car cover the same territory the President does with the Republicans speaking in many of the same cities a few days after the President.

In preparation for the task before him, President Wilson has been advised by his personal physician to give most of his time before Wednesday to recreation and rest.

Replying in the Senate to arguments presented by Chairman Lodge of the Foreign Relations Committee, against unreserved ratification of the peace treaty, Senator Owen, Democrat, Oklahoma, declared Mr. Lodge had been blinded by partisanship and by a distrust of popular institutions.

Referring to the committee chairman's parallel between the League of Nations and the ill-famed Holy Alliance, Mr. Owen said the argument had overlooked the intrigue and autocratic selfishness which surrounded the alliance.

"The fact that wars followed the treaty of the Holy Alliance," he continued, "was because this treaty was between military dynasties made by monarchical autocracies, each controlled by intrigue.

"The trouble with the Senator from Massachusetts is that he really believes in the rule of the few over the many. He does not believe the people ought to have the right to initiate laws they want or veto laws they do not want. He looks upon them with less confidence than he did upon the military autocracies, for the Senator favored a league in 1915, when the autocracies were in full power.

"He is not, as he thinks, waging a war against Woodrow Wilson. He is waging war against the decrees and the hopes of all mankind. Let him beware of throwing himself and his blinded partisans across the path of the righteous judgment of mankind."

NELSON ATTACKS KNOX.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Senator Nelson of Minnesota said tonight relative to the proposal to reject the treaty:

"The repudiation of the pending treaty of peace as advocated by Senator Knox of Pennsylvania in the Senate Friday is an open invitation to Germany to attack France in the event that the policy advocated is adopted. The nonparticipation of the United States in the League of Nations would isolate France and leave her exposed to German attack on the east.

"Senator Knox takes the position that all the United States is called upon to do is to declare by resolution of Congress a status of peace. He ignores the fact of American leadership, of pledges given the world of unselfish purpose in that leadership, and he does not recognize the truth that the family of nations, stricken by this war, is leaning on the strong arm of this nation today.

WOULD-BE DESERTION.

"He would have us take on the ignominy of deserting the stricken world in this hour of its crisis. He would have us, after we have come to the rescue of mankind at the crucial time and saved France from coming under the iron heel of German militarism, leave the ruins of that France we have saved, to be gathered up by her enemy, an enemy whose hatred and evil purpose have not been changed by the enforced signing of this treaty."

BORDER :: MYSTERY :: DEEPENS.

Nothing Yet Heard from the Lost Flyers.

Lieuts. Frederick Waterhouse and (top) Cecil B. Connelly, United States Army aviators in patrol service on Mexican line, who disappeared in the wilds of Lower California twelve days ago.

HOPE IS GONE FOR FLYERS.

Search for Lieuts. Waterhouse and Connelly will not be Abandoned.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 30.—All hope of finding Lieuts. Frederick Waterhouse and Cecil Connelly, missing aviators, has practically been abandoned. While Rockwell Field officers will go on with their search, they are decidedly pessimistic. The two flyers have been absent for ten days now. It has been positively learned that they were seen near San Quentin, Lower California, on August 20, the day they were lost.

The navy tug Challenge, carrying supplies, spare parts for airplanes and army officers and men, steamed last night for San Quentin. The Challenge being equipped with wireless, will be able to maintain communication with Rockwell Field.

Maj. Theodore Macaulay of Rockwell Field is still at Trinidad, Lower California, awaiting gasoline which has been sent to him. Several other army fliers are also in Lower California. Field bases have been set up for the needs of the men.

The message received here from U. S. Consul Sidney Smith at Ensenada dispelled all hope of the aviators being with Mexican forces. The only hopes held out here for the safety of the men are that they are either at some out of the way mining camp or with an Indian band.

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 30.—Renewed activity in the search for Lieuts. Frederick Waterhouse and Cecil B. Connelly, missing Rockwell Field aviators, was started today when it was learned the report that they had been found was erroneous. Lieut.-Col. H. L. Watson, commanding at Rockwell Field and under whose direction the search is being made, announced that the combined efforts of the flying school and naval air station would be united in the hunt.

At a conference between Col. Watson, Maj. Barthoff, adjutant at Rockwell Field, and Commander E. Spencer of the naval air station, held last night, it was decided to dispatch the submarine chaser No. 306 for Ensenada early this morning. The tug Challenge, which arrived at Ensenada yesterday, was ordered back to San Diego this morning to take fresh supplies south as it was decided to make Ensenada the chief base on the coast side of Lower California. It is expected that several other submarine chasers now anchored in the harbor will be mustered into the service and will be dispatched south with fuel. Col. Watson announced this morning that it was intended to establish several other bases along the coast and that aviators would work inland in the search.

STATEMENT ISSUED.

The following statement was issued by Lieut.-Col. Watson this morning, regarding the condition of affairs in the matter of the government hunt for the two lost aviators.

"Word was received late Friday night from the American Consul at Ensenada that the report that the lost aviators Waterhouse and Connelly had been found was in error and that no trace had been received.

"During the interim in which the aviators were supposed to have been located, planes and searching parties had been endeavoring to obtain further trace of them in Mexico. Furthermore, all arrangements were made for continuing the search in case the report was ultimately proven to be erroneous.

"Further telegraphic information received at 9 o'clock Saturday morning from the American Consul at Ensenada confirmed the statement that the report of the finding of the missing aviators was in error. This report further stated that every effort had been made to locate them in addition to verifying the report of their discovery, but up to date without success.

"The search will be continued at points more than 200 miles below the border by establishing airplane bases at Ensenada, San Quintin and other points as may appear advisable."

CONSUL MAKES REPORT.

The following telegram from Sidney Smith, American Consul at Ensenada, was received by Col. H. L. Watson at 10 o'clock this morning. The message was sent to the wireless station at North Island:

PALMER ON OFFENSIVE.

Frelinghuysen Object of Attack.

Charges New Jersey Senator had Interest in Opposing Enemy Trading Act.

Says His Activities Specially Mentioned by the German Foreign Office.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Having been confirmed by the Senate as Attorney-General of the United States after a prolonged investigation, A. Mitchell Palmer today issued a statement attacking Senators Frelinghuysen of New Jersey and Calder of New York, who led the fight against him, declaring their efforts were pleasing to Germany. The Attorney-General singled out Senator Frelinghuysen for particular criticism, asserting he opposed the Trading with the Enemy Act, has been against the taking over of enemy property during the war and especially opposed to Americanization of enemy industrial concerns taken over. He also asserted that the New Jersey Senator was "financially interested in four insurance companies whose relations with German companies" were effected by trading with the enemy legislation.

"I am informed," the Attorney-General said, "that Senator Frelinghuysen carried his fight against me to the end by speaking and voting against my confirmation as Attorney-General when the matter came up in the Senate yesterday. It is only fair that the motives which had actuated Senator Frelinghuysen in his continued opposition to my appointment should be clearly known. He has raised no question of my fitness of character, but has complained of my qualities and conduct while serving in the office of alien property custodian.

AGAINST ENEMY TRADING ACT.

"The truth is that Senator Frelinghuysen has not been against me; he has been against the Trading with the Enemy Act. He has been against the whole business of the taking over of enemy property in this country during the war and he has especially been against the Americanization of the industrial concerns in America owned by our enemies and heretofore used in a hostile way against this country's interests."

Mr. Palmer referred to a hearing before the Senate Commerce Committee when the Trading with the Enemy Act was under consideration when Senator Frelinghuysen introduced Mr. Bassett to the committee to protest against interference with enemy insurance companies in the United States and added:

"Mr. Bassett was followed by Senator Frelinghuysen with a statement designed to support his argument; but Senator Frelinghuysen did not tell the committee that he was at that time financially interested in four insurance companies whose returns with German companies would be adroitly affected by the legislation then proposed. So far as the records show, Senator Frelinghuysen was the only member of Congress who appeared before the Senate committee to endeavor to influence its conduct in the framing of the Trading with the Enemy Act.

ONLY MEMBER TO OBJECT.

"When the alien property custodian took over the enemy interest in the six great woolen and worsted mills of Passaic, N. J., Senator Frelinghuysen called on him to protest against interference with the then official management of the properties and against any sale of the enemy interest. He was the only member of Congress who ever sought to stay the hand of the alien property custodian in taking over and disposing of enemy owned properties in the United States.

"When the licenses refused by the Treasury Department to branches of enemy insurance companies were canceled and their property turned over to the Alien Property Custodian for liquidation, I proceeded with all expedition possible to dispose of such property and permanently dislodge the German hold on American insurance business. In order to do so it was necessary to enter into a new reinsurance contract covering reinsurance which these enemy companies had been carrying for American companies. All American companies which had contracts of reinsurance with the German companies gladly co-operated with the Alien Property Custodian by procuring their reinsurance with other companies, thus permitting a part liquidation of the enemy companies. I said all of them, but there was one exception. When we came to liquidate the Balkan insurance companies we found that they had reinsurance contracts with twelve American companies. Eleven of them promptly agreed to rewrite their contracts so as to permit us to close up the Balkan affairs. Only one company of the twelve refused to do so and insisted that this reinsurance contract should run until the end of the time, which would be in 1920. This position on the part of one company effectually blocked the final liquidation of the Balkan companies, and the only American insurance company that stood in the way, therefore, of the final and complete liquidation of

HINDENBURG CALLS ON VICTORY SPIRIT.

TELLS STUDENTS GERMANY MUST RISE OUT OF "LAXITY AND FALSENESS."

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

HANOVER (Prussia) Aug. 30.—Addressing a delegation of students serenading him on the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the battle of Tannenberg, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg said:

"If, five years ago, I was permitted to win, a brilliant victory, it was due to the dispensation of Providence and the spirit of the troops assigned me. We must hold on to this spirit in the sad days which are overcoming us; we must not lose courage because the pariahs of society and helots are our enemies.

"We must again become that which we once were, when in Versailles the new German empire was proclaimed, I being among those permitted to join the first in cheers for the Emperor.

"The spirit of those days must not be lost to us in these days of laxity and falseness."

PERSHING SILENCE DEFIANT

Refuses to Testify in the Quiz into War Expenditures.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Aug. 30.—President Poincare today received Gen. Pershing at the Elysee Palace.

PARIS, Aug. 30.—Gen. Pershing has refused to testify before the subcommittee of three of the Congressional committee on expenditures by the War Department which has been conducting an investigation in France.

The general's refusal led to the issuance of a joint statement this afternoon by Representatives Royal C. Johnson and Oscar E. Bland of the subcommittee, in which regret was expressed that there should be a conflict between the military and civil authorities of the government.

In a separate statement in which Representative Johnson did not join Mr. Bland declared that the general's action was an example of the "indifference and contempt" shown during the entire war by the War Department toward the wishes of the people and their representatives.

Gen. Pershing explained that all the activities of the American Expeditionary Forces were open to investigation, but that he found it impossible to comply with the request of the committee, as all his records had been shipped to the United States.

JOINT STATEMENT.

The joint statement reads:

"Subcommittee No. 3 of the Committee on Expenditures in the War Department was requested by members of the Senate and House and members of the full committee to have Gen. Pershing testify on a number of important matters which the committee came here to investigate, among which were the fixing of responsibility for the mistreatment of American soldiers in prison in France, his opinion on court-martial laws, regulations with reference to the burial of American dead, and certain military operations, particularly on November 10 and 11, 1918.

"An outline of the early organization of the American Expeditionary Forces for the expenditure of funds and the payment of claims was also desired.

"We regarded it as important that the highest officer of the American Expeditionary Forces give us the benefit of his intimate knowledge of all these affairs. Technically, the American Congress may have no inquisitorial jurisdiction over American citizens when outside the United States, but we know no precedent for the refusal of an American citizen to recognize that jurisdiction. The subcommittee has already examined the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff concerning some of the matters referred to, but was told that the information was in France.

"It is regrettable that there should be even the appearance of conflict between the military and civil authorities at a time when the world should become normal and be governed not by armies or individuals, but by law.

"Gen. Pershing declined to testify on the ground that his records were not available. He was informed that most of the questions to be propounded would not require data. He then declined to appear before the committee and testify. He will later be called to appear before a committee in the United States."

BLAND'S STATEMENT.

Representative Bland's statement reads:

"All I care to say personally about Gen. Pershing's refusal to testify before the congressional committee—and I speak for myself alone—is that he and his army are bigger than our deputy sergeant-at-arms of the House of Representatives, and he, of course, can avoid giving us the information we desire. I think it is apparent that the War Department has during the entire war shown its indifference and contempt for the wishes of the people and their representatives and this is only a clear cut, concrete example of that sentiment.

"For the time being we will try to get along in our investigations without Gen. Pershing's aid."

Although Gen. Pershing said he had no further comment to make upon the incident, it was learned at his headquarters that all documents of the General Staff were shipped to Brest on August 25 and were in the hold of the transport Leviathan before he received notice that he was expected to appear as a witness before the committee.

ALLIES AND GERMANY BOYCOTT US

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The following story does not come from an official source. I cannot prove its truth. It is sure to be denied. It is with equal certainty true. Here it is:

A scheme has been arranged—quite officially—among the governments of Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany, according to which all necessities in Germany for both raw materials and especially manufactured goods shall be supplied by imports from the other three countries. They are to buy everything they need from either English, French or Italian houses.

Just how the payment is to be guaranteed my informant did not know, but there is a fund of more than $100,000,000 provided by the British government and mentioned in Prime Minister Lloyd George's last speech, which is to be used to prevent loss to the British merchants.

Unofficial instructions to merchants and manufacturers in the three Allied countries go still farther. They are to stop importing so far as possible from the United States and neutral nations and to place orders—even at higher prices—in the other two countries. For instance, clothing manufacturers who have been buying silks in the United States are advised to place such orders in Italy.

the Southern Pacific, issued the following statement:

"The men are performing their usual and customary duties, doing all work that they have done in the past. I don't anticipate any trouble, and everything is satisfactory here. Unless something unforseen develops, I intend to leave for San Francisco tomorrow morning."

Mr. Dyer, together with Assistant Superintendents A. F. Bowles and C. F. Donnatin, Assistant General Manager T. H. Williams, General Passenger Agent Felix S. McGinnis and other officials of the road spent most of the day at the Arcade Station, directing the departure of the Southern Pacific trains. More than a score of trains left that station up to midnight, including several "dead-heads," being empty equipment needed at different points of the system.

H. C. Hallmark, general freight agent of the Southern Pacific, said yesterday:

"Our embargo is off, and I understand that the other roads announced the removal of their embargoes. Three freight trains started out in different directions this afternoon, and others are being dispatched as soon as they are made up. Our first problem is to clean up the congestion in our yards. For the first two days the movement of the freight will be somewhat slow, but I do not anticipate any difficulties along that line. We expect to reach the height of the traffic by Wednesday, but are confident that we will be able to handle it."

The scores of freight cars loaded with army supplies for Texas points will be moved on the first manifest freight trains, after the perishable cargoes are on their way, he said.

H. W. Jones, general yardmaster in charge of the River Station, was busy with his assistants making up the trains and clearing out the yard. The incoming freight will not become heavy for a few days, but will be handled without trouble when it does come, it was stated at the yards.

TRAFFIC HEAVY.

All Santa Fe line trains were dispatched out of Los Angeles practically on time. There were extra cars on all trains. An extra California Limited train to Chicago was sent out at 2:30 yesterday afternoon by Passenger Agents M. Mendelsohn and T. J. Held, and another extra limited will be sent East today. The first of the incoming trains was due here a little before 6 o'clock, and trains kept on arriving all through the night. The regular time schedules were not maintained on the arriving trains because of the congestion at the way stations.

E. W. McGree, agent of the consolidated ticket office, and a force of eighty-eight clerks handled the crowds that swamped the office all through the day. No estimate as to the number of tickets and reservations handled were obtainable last night. Clerks on duty in this office said that more than 2000 persons crowded into the place and in the lines outside, and remained there for hours. Several policemen were on duty keeping the line. The clerks and officials of the ticket office arrived a little after 7 o'clock, and at 8 had 300 persons in the place.

OFFICERS SATISFIED.

M. E. Montgomery, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, yesterday expressed his hope that the situation is completely cleared up. "So far as the engineers are concerned, they were ready to return to work yesterday morning," he said. L. L. Sanford, general chairman of the engineers on the Southern Pacific lines, said: "Everything seems to be satisfactory. I have remained in my room all day to handle any hitch that may occur, but none was called to my attention.

The general chairmen who took part in the conference in General Manager Wells's office at the Santa Fe headquarters said they presented the reply of the men and arranged for the details of their return to their jobs, but did not discuss the possible handling of the Pacific Electric freight by the steam road brotherhood men.

The brotherhood officials who handled the strike situation here for the organization, and addressed the various meetings of the men were:

M. E. Montgomery and A. F. Whitney, vice-presidents of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, respectively.

L. L. Sanford, D. E. Crayne, and O. E. Casel, general chairmen of the engineers on the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, and Salt Lake lines; F. L. McDowell, James Duffy and H. E. Tolbert, general chairmen of the trainmen on the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, and Salt Lake lines; T. H. Neimetze, J. A. McNeil and T. F. Gleeson, general chairmen of the conductors' brotherhood on the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe and Salt Lake lines; and J. A. Ford, K. B. Walton and L. M. Sowby, general chairmen of the firemen on the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe and Salt Lake lines.

ON FREIGHT QUESTION.

Crew callers at all three passenger stations yesterday morning received the assurance from all railroad men that they were going back to work, and that they would refrain from further walkouts, but that they positively would not handle freight cars either to or from the Pacific Electric transfer tracks. They were emphatic on this point.

Commenting upon this phase of the situation, J. H. Dyer, general manager of the Southern Pacific Railway, said that the railroad officials in conference with brotherhood officials until 2 o'clock yesterday morning made no separate point of Pacific Electric transfer freight, but that since such work was a part of the regular duty of a switchman it was to be presumed that the brotherhood men would handle such freight.

"I can only say," remarked Mr. Dyer, "that Director-General Hines has instructed us to operate the railroads if we have to do it with the assistance of deputy United States marshals. I anticipate that the brotherhood men will perform their duties to the letter."

NO OFFICERS NEEDED.

As an indication of the effect of the order requiring the steam railway strikers to go to work yesterday morning, United States Marshal Walton's staff of regular and special deputies were not called upon to make a single arrest in any part of the district.

In line with an arrangement made Friday afternoon deputies were placed on every outgoing train for the important railroad points in Southern California, and the Marshal said this programme would be followed until after Labor Day.

Most of the private trucks leased by the government to carry mail to outside points, where the delivery could be made to the transcontinental trains, were allowed to go yesterday, and only a few will remain for service the next few days until the mail service is normal again.

Extra clerks were placed on all outgoing trains yesterday to handle the congested mail, and a big force of clerks will work today in the local postoffice clearing up the accumulation of all kinds of first-class and newspaper mail. While there will be no delivery tomorrow on account of Labor Day, a service will be given for the lock-boxes at the main and branch postoffices, which is quite unusual for a legal holiday.

FIRST TRAIN OUT.

The Southern Pacific's Fresno and Santa Paula Express, known as No. 107, was the first train to leave the city. It pulled out of the station at 7:44 a.m. carrying three extra coaches and three baggage and mail cars. Engineer J. F. Mills and Fireman L. P. Foree were the men in the cab of the first engine. The train was pulled by two engines, but the first one was scheduled to remain at Saugus where another locomotive, left there nearly a week ago, was to be attached to the train, and the Los Angeles engine come back to the city.

The next train, the Short Line Limited, No. 77, also carried extra baggage cars and coaches, and two locomotives. At 8:12 a.m. only twelve minutes behind the regular schedule, Engineer W. P. Lawry and Fireman A. C. Young received their "all-aboard" signal and pulled out of the station. A few minutes later a second section of this train, traveling empty, left the station. It was scheduled to go to Santa Barbara and return from there as a regular train. This was arranged for the purpose of supplying Santa Barbara with the equipment necessary to make up the train to Los Angeles.

ON THE SANTA FE.

At the Santa Fe Station, the first train to leave was the San Bernardino local, the No. 52, in charge of Conductor J. E. Miller and Engineer W. A. Baldwin. It left the station at 8 o'clock, carrying three cars.

The next train was a freight special, hauling thirty-three stock cars in charge of Conductor J. D. Anderson and Engineer H. K. Atkinson. It left the freight yards at 8:30 a.m. The first reular eastern train was the Navajo—the No. 2, for Chicago, at 9 o'clock.

Passenger Agent M. Mendelsohn was in charge of the station, and announced that the service will be regular and on time. The Santa Fe schedule for yesterday called for No. 52, local, No. 2, the California Limited, at 10 a.m., the Scout, for Kansas City and Chicago, at 1 p.m. No. 18 for Phoenix at 2, plus the four regular San Diego trains, the afternoon eastern trains, the two locals and the regular service of the entire system.

At the Salt Lake Station Supt. T. P. Cullen, Train Master G. M. Archibald, and Depot Master Edward Ferber dispatched the first train out of the city over their lines at 8:50 a.m., when the first section of their No. 2 train to Salt Lake was started out. It was followed by a Long Beach local at 9 and another one at 9:35 a.m. The second and third sections of the No. 2 Overland Limited left at 10:30 and 12:30.

No attempt was made by the Salt Lake officials to start the ship yard specials at 5:25, 5:35 and 6:40 a.m. It was explained that the men's notice was to the effect that they would return to work at 7 o'clock and the officials did not want to call the crews earlier for the local specials.

A record number of people left the city yesterday. The Hayward Hotel alone had 130 guests Friday night who were Southern Pacific passengers for Phoenix and Tucson yesterday. Many of these people had been stranded here during the entire week.

General freight agents of the steam roads say that it will take a couple of days to get perishables to moving from consignment points. Today the railroads made an effort to get delayed shipments of citrus fruits started eastward and spent the remainder of their time in routing carloads of such commodities as potatoes, onions and gasoline to Imperial Valley, Arizona and New Mexico.

Imperial Valley and parts of Ariona have been on gasoline allotments for several days, the use of gas for pleasure cars being prohibited by agreement on the part of civic leaders in the various cities, it is said.

NORMAL EVERWHERE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—Through passenger service between the San Francisco bay district and Los Angeles, which had been help up by strike conditions, was resumed by the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railroads today with the departure of the Shore Line limited from here at 8 o'clock. Six trains start from each city in this service every day.

Conditions rapidly were getting back to normal, and all freight accumulations were being cleared rapidly, according to W. R. Scott, federal manager of the Southern and Western Pacific lines.

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 30.—Train service to Los Angeles and the rest of the world is on again, the 8:40 a.m. train leaving here for Los Angeles on schedule time and with nothing to indicate that a strike had been in effect. Agent J. H. Bauman of the Santa Fe, stated this morning that all of the day's trains, passenger and freight, are scheduled to go on time and that advices from the north are to the effect that all inbound trains will come on time.

A fair-sized load of passengers went north on the first train, but the cars were not crowded and there was nothing to indicate that the strike had caused serious inconvenience here.

FRESNO, Aug. 30.—Normal railroad service was reported here today by officials of the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe systems. Freight held for several days in the local yards was again moving. Green fruit cars were leaving for eastern points. Local shippers stated that action by volunteer switchmen among the strikers here, in offering their services to keep green fruit cars iced during the tie-up, prevented producers and shippers from suffering heavy losses. Passenger ticket offices here were swamped with business this morning. Extra clerks were working at the postoffice to handle the trainloads of mail on hand. The heavy traffic, following in the wake of the strike, was expected to be "clear" by tomorrow night.

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 30.—Railroad officials announced that passenger train service to Los Angeles was resumed on a normal schedule today. Freight consigned to points in Southern California was being held because the embargo established following the strike of railroad men had not been lifted in Los Angeles, officials said.

ARMY FOOD OUT OF STRIKE JAM.

Goods Bought from Federal Government by People Here for Delivery.

Assistant Postmaster Foster announced yesterday that $3500 worth of government groceries, tied up in the Southern Pacific yards by the railroad strike, will be released early this week for delivery to the patrons of the local postoffice who bought and paid for a large quantity of canned bacon, beef, vegetables and fruits nearly two weeks ago.

In the same connection it is said the California allotment of foodstuffs has been disposed of, and there will be no more sales through the postoffices of this region.

Are We Soon to Become a Race of Baldheaded Men?

PROF. JOHN H. AUSTIN

Bacteriologist, Hair and Scalp Specialist of Chicago, Who Is Now at Hamburger's, Talks Most Interestingly About the Hair.

He says that baldness is increasing rapidly among men and points out some of the reasons:

Prof. Austin says: At the door of dandruff can be laid 70 per cent. of cases of premature falling out of the hair.

Prior to investigations and discoveries of the past few years dandruff was considered simply a collection of scales of the outer cell tissue of the head combined with an oily matter. From these careful investigations it has been found out that dandruff is a parasitic disease of the scalp called "seborrhoeic eczema." The parasites that produce this disease grow down into the cylinder-shaped depressions at the roots of the hairs, causing the loss of hairs.

Seborrhoea Is "Catching."

By careful experiments seborrhoea was found to be contagious. An ointment was made of vaseline and the scales from a man's head and was then rubbed into the backs of guinea pigs. The pigs contracted the disease and became bald. Likewise the disease has been contracted by man and wife, either wife or husband being free from it before marriage.

Prof. Austin examines the roots of your hair with a powerful microscope. He finds out just what is the trouble with YOUR HAIR and then tells you what to do for that trouble.

Prof. Austin has devoted forty years to studying the hair and scalp.

He says the use of dandruff cures, mange cures, vaseline and hair tonics is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure. The particular trouble with which your scalp is afflicted must be known before it can be intelligently treated.

During the past four years Prof. Austin has made thousands of free microscopic examinations of the hair and scalps of Hamburger's patrons.

Glimpses of the Formal Ending of the Steam Railway Strike Here.

In the center is the first Southern Pacific train leaving Los Angeles, the first train on any road to get out. It left the Arcade station at 7:44 a.m. yesterday in charge of Engineer J. F. Mills and Fireman L. P. Forree (top,) being No. 107, the Fresno and Santa Paula express for San Joaquin Valley points. At the bottom is a view of the jam inside the government Consolidated Ticket Offices.

P. E. FREIGHT IS MOVING.

Crucial Point of the Railway Strike is Adjusted, Officials Say.

All freight cars on the Pacific Electric interchange transfers, which have stood idle with their valuable consignments on various sidetracks for two weeks, began to move at noon yesterday. The transfer of Pacific Electric freight cars to the steam line roads was the point that first precipitated the sympathetic strike of the steam line yardmen, and with the readjustment of this problem the entire freight situation on both steam and electric lines has been returned to practically normal.

Switching crews of the Salt Lake, Santa Fe and Southern Pacific railroads, all of whom had joined the sympathetic strike and who returned to their engines yesterday morning, visited the interchange transfer points of the Pacific Electric at noon and took away forty cars, according to General Freight Agent T. J. Day, of the Pacific Electric railway. These forty cars all contain shipments of freight for jobbers resident on the steam line roads. Twenty of these cars were removed from the Macy-street transfer, on the northern division, and transferred to the southern division of the electric lines. The Southern Pacific has been used, through an agreement between the two railways, as a bridge for the Pacific Electric between its northern and southern divisions. When the steam line men refused to handle Pacific Electric freight cars it was impossible for the Pacific Electric to transfer freight between these two divisions.

The steam railroad strike, centered about the refusal of the local steam line switchmen to handle the Pacific Electric freight cars which were being used by nonunion switching crews. When the striking steam line employees returned to their engines yesterday morning they did so with an agreement entered into with the steam line officials that they were to handle the Pacific Electric freight cars to and from the interchange transfer points. Otherwise, the officials would not permit them to return to work.

"The steam railroad switching crews are conforming with all their agreements with their officials," said Mr. Day. "At noon today the first Pacific Electric freight cars, which have stood on the transfers for two weeks, were removed by the steam switching crews. The freight situation has been adjusted very satisfactorily."

Normal night passenger service on the Pacific Electric and Los Angeles railways will be re-established, according to the officials of both companies, as soon as conditions warrant.

"The safety of our passengers and our employees must be the first consideration," said Mr. H. B. Titcomb, general manager of the Pacific Electric, yesterday afternoon. "Though we now have enough men to operate our trains twenty-four hours each day and though we have been assured all the co-operation necessary by the city and county police heads, we want the public to know that a strike on the electric lines does not exist. Therefore, we do not wish to conduct our service in such a way, by having armed guards on the trains, which will cause the public to believe that a strike is still in existence. Normal passenger service at night will be extended at a very early date."

SERVICE RESUMED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, Aug. 30.—It was stated at the car barns today that service has begun again on the Del Rey line. Two trips in the morning and two at night is the limit of service, however. The four other local lines—Westgate, Third and Eighth streets and Canyon lines—have not instituted service as yet.

No disturbances of any kind arose in either of the Bay Cities as the result of the strike.

KNOXVILLE MOB IN RACE RIOT

firearms. Militiamen brought from the State encampment near Knoxville to disperse the mob at the County Jail were hurried to the scenes of the rioting.

Five motor trucks loaded with members of the mob left Knoxville with the announced purpose of going to Chattanooga, to which city the negro accused of shooting to death a white woman here early yesterday had been taken before the crowd began gathering about the jail.

KNOXVILLE (Tenn.) Aug. 30.—Despite assurances that the prisoner had been removed to Chattanooga, and inspection of the jail by three separate committees of citizens, a mob tonight stormed the Knox County Jail in search of Maurice P. Mayes, a negro who had been arrested in connection with the murder of Mrs. Bertha Lindsay early today.

In a series of fights between deputy sheriffs, police officers and militiamen and members of the mob in the jail corridors and outside the building several men were wounded. Several National Guardsmen were beaten. One man was carried away be friends unconscious.

Most of the window glass in the jail was shot out and the main door was battered in.

TROOPS ARE CALLED.

Early in the evening it became apparent deputies and policemen on duty at the jail would be unable to cope with the situation and a call was sent for troops from the Fourth Tennessee National Guard, which is holding its encampment here. Two squads were rushed to the jail in a motor truck.

The disorder reached its height with their arrival and missiles of all kinds were hurled. Fist fights were numerous and promiscuous shooting outside the jail began. The guardsmen soon were strengthened by the arrival of a full company and it became possible then to clear the jail corridors and the yard.

Mrs. Lindsey was shot to death in her home as she was preparing to leap from a window. Her niece, who was sleeping with her, was threatened by the same negro. The two women were alone in the house.

Mayes, who had been arrested three days ago for prowling about a house occupied by another white family, was taken into custody an hour after the crime was committed. He denied his guilt, but fearing possible violence, Sheriff Gate took him to Chattanooga later in the day.

SIXTY-FIFTH ANNUAL CALIFORNIA EXPOSITION OPENS AT SACRAMENTO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 30.—The fig exhibit for the Fresno county booth at the State fair, arrived here in an airplane piloted by Lieut. W. Kauch, of the government fire patrol service, at 2:45 o'clock this afternoon.

Kauch volplaned to earth before a large crowd which was gathered in the grandstand witnessing the first harness races of the year.

An elaborate display of fireworks and illuminated airplanes in stunt performances were the closing features of the first day of the celebration.

The sixty-fifth annual California State fair opened here today with many of the exhibitors working feverishly to get their displays in order, by the time afternoon crowds began to pour through the fair ground gates. Fine live-stock, fruits, nuts and agricultural products were entered in the various exhibit contests.

The programme today included harness racing, airplane stunt flying and a night horse show. The fair will close the night of September 9. Fair directors predicted a banner attendance despite the fa railroad strike caused tainty about the open layed a number of exhib

A Beautiful Vanity Case

Many customers remark as they enter the Davidson Store: "You certainly carry a real stock of vanities." It's almost the first department they see upon entering, and the variety of designs, as well as the quantity on display, excites their comment. Quite as interesting, however, is the fact that every vanity case comes to the Davidson Store direct from the manufacturer. They come with nothing in the way of cost added for the middleman or the high-rent man, and the modest prices at which they are marked will talk to you more eloquently than words of the economies possible at Davidson's. Mind you, we promise you can buy nothing better at any price.

PLEAD IRELAND TO COMMITTEE.

Delegation Protests Against League of Nations.

Brief Denounces Sinn Fein for Action During War.

Says Ireland not Suppressed, was Never Undivided.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Impassioned protests against the League of Nations were presented on behalf of American Irishmen today at a hearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

In a series of dramatic appeals which repeatedly drew cheers from the crowd jamming the committee-room, the spokesmen declared the covenant sought to pronounce a death sentence on the aspirations of the Irish people and to fasten forever upon Ireland what they characterized as a yoke of British oppression.

Although the committee originally had allotted only two hours to the hearing, when presentation of the Irish cause fairly had been launched, it was voted to extend the time as much as the speakers desired. They took most of the day.

A brief opposing the views expressed by the witnesses was filed with the committee by Albert E. Kelly, of New York, and five others. The brief protested against the "attempt of representatives of a faction in Ireland, known as the Sinn Fein party, or of kindred organizations favoring their movement in the United States" to bring the Irish question into discussion of the peace treaty.

SINN FEIN MERELY FACTION.

The brief was not read, but was ordered put into the record. The signers said they were of Irish birth and "just plain, hard-working American citizens with no ax to grind."

"The Sinn Fein faction," the brief set forth, "has no right to take part in the discussion of the League of Nations because "it failed to support the Allies" in the war, conducting a propaganda hurtful to the Allied cause and giving "aid and comfort to the enemy by creating strife and turmoil at home."

Statements that Ireland had no self-government were denied the brief saying the Irish have the franchise, have a representative government and are subject to laws made by Parliament in the same manner as for England, Scotland and Wales.

Ireland is not suppressed religiously nor industrially, it was declared and never has been one undivided nation, approaching unity only under British rule. Injection of the Irish question into American politics, it was argued, would create racial and religious issues foreign to the principles of American life.

ATTRACTS LARGE CROWD.

The hearing attracted unusual attention, an extra detail of police being necessary to keep spectators from crowding the committee-room beyond its capacity.

Among the speakers who said they voiced the sentiments of more than 20,000,000 Americans of Irish origin, were Frank P. Walsh of Kansas City, Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia, and Edward F. Dunne, former Governor of Illinois, members of the American commission which sought to get a hearing for Ireland at Versailles. An opening statement was made by Daniel F. Cohala, justice of the New York Supreme Court, and the legal aspects of the covenant as they affect Ireland were summed up by Bourke Cockran, also of New York.

Representatives of various Greek societies made a statement of the claims of the Greek people regarding the peace settlement.

Outright rejection of the treaty was asked by the Irish speakers, who charged that under the covenant Great Britain would receive a guarantee that no outside nation ever would help Ireland gain her independence. The domination of the British fleet over the seas, they also declared, would be made so complete by the treaty as to be a direct menace to the United States.

VERSAILLES' STEAM ROLLER.

In the Versailles negotiations, Walsh, Ryan and Dunne declared, President Wilson's ideals had been brushed aside by the other powers. At 4h eopen session, when the league covenant was approved, they said, delegates in all parts of the hall tried to make protest, but were silenced by the "steam roller methods" of the controlling figures.

Of conditions in Ireland, where the commission spent some time, the three speakers painted a gloomy picture. Civil law had been suspended, they declare, and the local officials were being arrested and their homes searched without warrant, while women and children were ground beneath a "despotic" military rule whose excesses, they declared, the censorship had concealed from the United States.

The three commissioners said they had been referred to E. M. House, when they tried to get a hearing with President Wilson in Paris, and that later Secretary Lansing had written them it would be useless to press their requests further since their utterances while in Ireland had offended British statesmen.

Great Britain, the speakers said, had drawn the United States into the league to help guarantee such "outrages" as she was committing in Ireland. At the same time, they asserted, England had been careful to preserve a sea power which gave her a grip on every quart of salt water in the world, and which under the present circumstances could be intended for use only against the United States.

COCKRAN ASKS REJECTION.

In his address closing the argument for the Irish societies, Mr. Cockran, a native of Ireland, made an impassioned plea for rejection of the treaty. Although he had followed President Wilson politically and had believed profoundly in the President's ideals, he said, there could be no greater calamity than ratification of the treaty negotiated at Versailles.

Tracing the struggles of Ireland through many "attempts by British rulers to exterminate her," he said, the Irish people had kept alive against the greatest adversity their love of liberty and their aspirations for freedom. History had demonstrated, he argued, that England could not do justice in Ireland if she tried, and the point now had been reached "when the only alternative to extermination is emancipation."

"All your leagues of nations," he declared, "won't keep Ireland under the domination of this incubus. All the powers of the earth can't do that.

"Is there in this treaty a single word of which any one can be proud?

DOES NOT BRING FREEDOM.

"Does it bring freedom to any single people, except as an act of revenge against conquered and dismembered foes? The league covenant is admitted by its friends to be imperfect. Shantung is an abomination. Yet we are told we must accept it. Must? Since when has that word been applied to the American people?

"I mean no disrespect to the President of the United States. His place in history is a high one. The words in which he enunciated the principles of the war will forever be the priceless possessions of the nation. The fourteen points are not dead; they can never die. But I believe the only thing which can dim his high place in history will be the acceptance of this treaty."

Referring to a Senate speech by Senator Walsh, saying only one avenue to Irish freedom, that involving aid from an outside nation, was cut off by the league covenant, Mr. Cockran declared if this were true, then it meant "the only avenue is cut off."

REMINDED OF MISSOURI.

Describing how the league covenant was adopted at the Peace Conference, Mr. Walsh told the committee that it reminded him of "the mob primaries out in Missouri."

"The League of Nations never was assented to," said Mr. Walsh, "even by the ones who signed it, in the sense that we understand it. Any one will tell you that who was present at the Quai d'Orsay when the covenant of the league was so splendidly and dramatically read by our President and saw the delegates jumping up all over the room wanting to say a word. You could not tell who they were, but Clemenceau blandly said 'There being no objection, the covenant of the league is agreed to.' "

Asked whether the "surprise of the assembled commissioners over the league covenant was "marked" the speaker replied "Oh, it was very marked. They jumped all over the place to make protests. Man after man got up. You know there was an awful censorship upon this whole business."

OPERATION OF WESTERN PACIFIC INDEPENDENT.

RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION DIVORCES IT FROM S. P. AS CO-OPERATIVE MOVE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—With the appointment today of E. W. Mason as general manager of the Western Pacific Railroad, the United States Railroad Administration announces separation of the operation of that property on September 1 from that of the Southern Pacific. Both lines have been under Federal Manager W. R. Scott, who continues as head of the Southern Pacific.

Mason, formerly general superintendent of the Western Pacific, served as lieutenant-colonel of engineers in France. He assumes the duties of general manager tomorrow by circular or appointment over the signature of Hale Holden, regional director, approved by Walker D. Hines, director-general.

The Tidewater Southern and Deep Creek Railroads are included in his jurisdiction. As with other roads in the western district, he comes within the jurisdiction of William Sproule, district director.

Commenting on the change Mr. Sproule said:

"The change lies in the direction of the director-general's policy of co-operation with the owners of the railroad properties when such can be done without prejudice to the interests of the government or the public."

CHAMP CLARK'S SISTER DEAD.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SANTA CRUZ, Aug. 30.—Mrs. Elizabeth Clark Haley, only sister of Champ Clark, former speaker of the House of Representatives, died here suddenly today. She was 67 years old and was born in Anderson, Ky. Her husband, the Rev. J. J. Haley, is a widely known minister of the Christian church and is a lecturer and writer on religious subjects.

Strife Presages Split in Socialist Convention.

Secretary Claims Revolutionaries Packed Hall.

Reds Demand Practically Proletariat Dictatorship.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Strife which presaged a split developed in the ranks of the Socialist party, before Adolph Germer, national secretary, was able to call to order the opening session of the national convention here today. Delegates of the so-called left wing of the party were forcibly put out of the hall by policemen because Secretary Germer said they were trying to pack the convention by seating delegates who had no credentials.

A fist fight between two delegates threatened for a time to become a free for all affair, but the police were able to stop it before more irate left wing delegates could take part.

"REVOLUTIONARY," THEY SAY.

Immediately after their expulsion from the convention hall left wing supporters, led by John Reed of New York, held a meeting to decide on a course of action. Reporters were not allowed in this meeting or in the main convention where the process of seating delegates went on.

"We are revolutionary socialists and we don't want to talk to any reporters or members of the capitalistic press," Reed declared before he closed the doors of the left wing caucus.

Members of the left wing who did not heed the advice of Mr. Reed said that if they were not recognized in the convention they would organize a new branch of the party.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN WINGS.

Although many delegates were not clear as to the difference between the left and right wings of the party, the principal differences appeared to be that the left wing men want practically a proletariat dictatorship and some even go so far as to suggest an abolition of political action. It was explained that the breach in the party has been widening for some time and the trouble today was the result of this schism. Some said the left wing side wanted to adopt a programme modeled after the Russian socialists.

A candidate for President will not be named. Resolutions to that effect were adopted after J. Louis Engdahl of Chicago had proposed Eugene V. Debs, now serving a prison sentence for violation of the espionage law, for the nomination.

Seymour Stedman, temporary chairman, declared the nomination would injure Debs's chances for a pardon.

Among the fundamental differences between the left and the right wings is the desire of the left to affiliate with the third international of Moscow, instead of the second international of Berne. It is said by many that the left wing wants a policy similar to the Bolsheviki of Russia.

Ejection of John Reed, unrecognized Bolshevik Ambassador to the United States, and eighty-three other members of the left wing of the party, by members of the police anarchist squad on guard duty at the convention, enlivened the morning.

In the meantime, the main convention of the Socialist party, headed by Congressman-Elect Victor Berger of Wisconsin, Seymour Stedman and Adolph Germer, national secretary, is going ahead with business.

"We are the party," Mr. Berger persisted, "the others are just a lot of anarchists. I have been through this experience before."

Among left wing delegates who were making the fight today were Rose Pastor Stokes, Kate Sadler and I. E. Ferguson, temporary secretary of the radicals.

"The left wing represents about 30 per cent. of the Socialist party," said Mr. Ferguson, "but we seem to be left out of the party's deliberations."

The convention is scheduled to last a week. Secretary Germer said a national platgorm would be adopted, but that probably no Presidential candidates would be named. Approximately 250 delegates were present at the opening session today and it was claimed they represented a majority of States.

When the delegates were admitted to the convention hall their credentials were examined and all those carrying white cards were admitted. Two policemen aided the doorkeeper.

MEXICANS ROB THREE AMERICAN OIL FIRMS.

CASH AGGREGATING $59,969 IS STOLEN BY BANDITS IN TAMPICO DISTRICT.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LAREDO (Tex.) Aug. 30.—Arrivals here from Tampico report that three more robberies by bandits were committed in that region just before their departure. An attack was made upon the terminals of the Penn Mexico Fuel Company near Tuxpam by a band of twenty-eight brigands. They forced the cashier, H. M. Kimball, to open the company's safe and, after rifling it of its contents, $25,000, they commandeered boats at the wharf and rowed to the other side of the river, where they disappeared into the jungle.

Louis Guiterrez, paymaster of the Agwi Oil Company, was robbed of $4969 while on his way to Tepetate to pay off the company field forces. The Transcontinental Oil Company placed a box containing $30,000 in United States currency on a tugboat to be taken at Mata Radonda for paying its field employees. When the tug arrived at Mata Radonda the box was opened and found to contain only nails and old iron.

YOUNG VANDERBILT IN CUB REPORTER'S JOB.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., son of Brig.-Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt, has forsaken Newport society to accept a job as "cub" reporter on the New York Herald at $25 a week, it was learned last night. The young millionaire obtained the position by a letter he wrote to the city editor of the paper.

"I wanted to be a reporter," he said tonight, "because I have always found newspapermen the brightest and most alert people I know."

TRANSPORTS FOR RESERVE ASKED

Army Wants Fleet Available for War Emergency.

Would Keep Title to Fifteen Former German Liners.

Increase in Pay of Officers and Men Proposed.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Organization of a permanent "transport reserve" capable of carrying 142,000 troops is proposed by the War Department as a part of the army reorganization plan. This reserve, with the Regular Army transport fleet, would make it possible to move an expeditionary force of nearly 200,000 men immediately on the outbreak of war.

The plan as outlined by Brig.-Gen. Frank T. Hines, in charge of the army transport service, contemplates reserving title to fifteen of the former German passenger ships and a number of cargo carriers, with their allocation to commercial lines on the condition that the crews be enlisted in the transport reserve and that no structural changes in the vessels be made by the operators.

LEVIATHAN LISTED.

The Leviathan, George Washington, Mt. Vernon and Savannah are among the ships listed to be retained if Congress approves the plan.

Increase of 30 per cent. in the pay of all officers of the army, navy and Marine Corps and 50 per cent. for enlisted men are proposed in a bill drawn by Rear-Admiral T. J. Cowie, former paymaster-general of the navy, for which Congressional support is sought.

Admiral Cowie in a statement today said the salaries of all government employees, civil and military, should be increased immediately. He suggested advances of 100 per cent. in the salaries of the President, the Vice-President and Cabinet officers and their assistants and 50 per cent. for members of Congress.

TRUCK CONVOY DELAYED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—The army transcontinental motor truck convoy, which had been expected to arrive at Carson City, Nev., yesterday, has been delayed and will not reach there before tomorrow, it was stated at army headquarters for the Western Department here today. The convoy will cross the Nevada-California State line Monday morning, according to present plans, and will reach Sacramento Wednesday afternoon.

After leaving Sacramento the convoy will go to Stockton, then to Oakland and will arrive here next Saturday morning.

Lieut. W. B. Doran, in charge of the scout car of the convoy, was expected to arrive here today, army officers said.

FOUR ARE ARRESTED FOR FOREST FIRES.

FORESTRY OFFICIALS TRYING TO STAMP OUT THE WORK OF "FIREBUGS," IS CLAIM.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

REDDING (Cal.) Aug. 30.—Four men were arrested near here today charged with setting the recent forest fires in the Wordhimer, Blue Ridge and Grasshopper sections which burned over 10,000 acres. The men arrested were George A. Lawrence, Joe Wheaton, George McBurns and another who gave the name of Braun. They were placed in jail at Yreka.

Forestry officials and county officers co-operating with them in an effort to stamp out the work of alleged "firebugs," said they had evidence from various sources clearly establishing the Wordheimer-Blue Ridge and Grasshopper fires were of incendiary origin.

Two men at Dorris, in Siskiyou county, and one at Klamath Falls, were arrested today for leaving camp fires burning. Their names were not given out. The fires were extinguished before any damage was done. These arrests were made by C. V. Brereton, special fire inspector.

INJECTION OF UNION ISSUE IN STOCKYARDS CONTROVERSY BRINGS SUSPICION.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—The stockyards wage controversy which is being heard by Federal Judge Samuel Alschuler as mediator, was given national scope yesterday through the intervention of nine unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

In labor circles, usually well informed, the move was construed as an effort by the associates of Samuel Gompers to divert sole responsibility for the employees' stand from the chiefs of the stockyards labor council, some of whom are reported clandestinely to be assisting the I.W.W. and whose utterances are under scrutiny both by the police and the Department of Justice.

Redmond S. Brennan of Kansas City, former law partner of Frank P. Walsh and late chief counsel of the Walsh industrial relations commission appeared before Judge Alschuler in the nine unions' behalf.

"There is no conflict," he declared, "between my clients and the stockyards council. We shall be glad of any wage increase it is able to gain for its members and we hope to profit by the testimony it has introduced. We hope too, that it will profit by the evidence we expect to offer.

"Our methods are a little different that is all; and we represent other employees."

Mr. Brennan arrived in Chicago unexpectedly as a result of a meeting of the heads of the nine unions in Kansas City two days ago and appeared before Judge Alschuler with Dennis Lane, president of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen of North America, when the hearing was resumed in the afternoon.

The other organizations Mr. Brennan announced he would represent are:

The International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, the Coopers International Union, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the International Association of Machinists, the United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters, the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, the Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance and the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen.

All of these crafts are represented among the stockyards employers.

Their demands as presented to Judge Alschuler differ substantially from those of the council only in the omission of the forty-four-hour week. Pay increases of from 25 to 35 per cent. are asked.

NEW COMPLICATIONS IN POLICE MIX-UP.

AUDITOR AT LONG BEACH TAKES A HAND—OTHER NEWS NOTES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONG BEACH, Aug. 30.—On the ground that the warrant was irregular in that it had not been approved by C. C. Cole, suspended Chief of Police, Miss Myrtle L. Gunsul, City Auditor, today objected to and disallowed the warrant of Ben W. McLendon, police sergeant who has been working directly out of the office of the Public Safety Commissioner as a special investigator the greater part of August.

The City Commissioners will consider the situation at a special meeting Monday. Sergeant McLendon today declared the action of the Auditor was prompted by prejudice, while Miss Gunsul declared she merely objected to issuing the warrant under the circumstances, for legal reasons, and that no politics entered into her decision to disallow the demand.

Charles D. Leslie, 21 years old, who was fatally burned yesterday when a torch with which he was working set fire to his clothing, died today in a local hospital. The youth was a welder, employed in the yards of the Long Beach Shipbuilding Company. He leaves a widow. An inquest will be held over the body Tuesday morning at the Sampson and Byrum undertakin parlors.

MUST STAND TRIAL.

Charged with assisting a felon to escape, an act itself constituting a felony, three ship workers who are alleged to have assisted Charles Deweese, charged with grand larceny, in escaping from the custody of Deputy Constable Joseph Hawkins, were bound over to the Superior Court for trial.

The men so charged are Alexander Miller, Jack Lewis and J. F. Hollis.

TO BETTER PRINTER APPRENTICE SYSTEM.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

OAKLAND, Aug. 30.—California Typothetae adjourned today a three-day convention which marked the first time representatives of unions discussed with employers the mutual problems which concerned them. William H. Barry, Oakland, was re-elected president of the State body, with the following officers to serve with him: Vice-presidents, Charles A. Nace, San Jose; Irwin Haye Rice, Los Angeles; Henry M. Hastings, secretary-treasurer, San Francisco.

Toward working out a better system of apprentices, a committee of three employing printers was named to meet with a committee of three union members to deal jointly with the subject. By unanimous vote the convention went on record against a zone comprised entirely of California or the territory west of the Rockies, terming it impractical as far as employers were concerned in the matter of wages or selling conditions.

ARMY LOYALTY NOT CURE FOR EVIL PAST

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Loyal service in the army during the recent war can not be considered as wiping out a soldier's past, the Judge Advocate General has ruled. An adverse opinion was rendered on the question of whether a man possessing a criminal record before entering the army could be re-enlisted at this time.

Declares Attack by Fall is not Justified.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Opposition to the Foreign Relations Committee's proposal to strike out the labor articles of the peace treaty is indicated very decidedly in a statement issued tonight by Samuel Gompers. It is addressed to the League to Enforce Peace. He says:

"The covenant for a League of Nations and the treaty of peace of which it is a part, negotiated at Paris, hold the first world agreement among the nations to keep all that has been secured for labor and to make the standards already gained universal, advancing and improving for all men, for all women and all children. This agreement is not yet in force. The Senate of the United States has had the covenant and treaty for eight weeks, during all of which it has been in committee. Until it is ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate the covenant and treaty are not safe and the United States is not a party to it. Any amendment to this treaty will send it back to all the twenty-seven nations concerned, Germany included.

URGES ADOPTION.

"This first international charter for the rights of labor should be adopted without delay. It begins among the nations the great and sublime task of raising the level of the conditions of labor the world over. Every workman in the world, wherever he may be, is put in peril by every workman whose hours are long, whose pay is inadequate, whose condition of labor is dangerous and whose standard of life is low. Every child at work at too early an age makes it more difficult to maintain the age standard for labor of childhood. This is 14 years in many of our States. It should be 16. Children working at a lower age make it harder to improve and to keep the present child standards. So with women. Every woman toiling twelve and fourteen hours a day renders it harder for every woman working eight hours a day—it should be six—to keep her hours secure.

"The world needs to be made safe for labor as well as for democracy. The world cannot be safe for democracy until it is safe for labor. A world unsafe for labor never can be safe for democracy. Labor must be safe in all lands or it is safe in none. Even American labor cannot be wholly secure until labor everywhere is raised in hours, in condition and in wages to a just and universal standard. Underpaid, over-houred, starved labor will always be seeking the land of better conditions, ready to lower them. The only sure protection for any labor anywhere, is universal justice to all labor everywhere.

OBJECTS TO DELAY.

"The covenant and treaty delayed so long in the Senate proposes to gain this. They declare labor is not a commodity. They make it the right and duty of every land to bring before a world tribunal conditions anywhere which are perilous to its own labor. They create a central international labor bureau to learn what these conditions are, and whether laws as to labor are enforced. Every country binds itself to make no agreement with any other country lowering the standards of labor. The covenant provides a marine commission by which labor at sea can be watched and the sailor protected against unfair and underpaid competition. An international union card has long existed. It already looks to raising labor conditions to their highest present level in all lands, and ending the competition of unfair conditions in the future so that there shall be international conditions as well as international cards.

SAYS FALL IS WRONG.

"This cannot come in a day, in a year, or in a decade, but it is possible to turn the world of nations in this direction, to give the command of "forward march" to keep the world moving until this great end is won. This cannot be done if the treaty is amended or delayed. Senator Fall of New Mexico has already proposed that the labor articles of the treaty be cut out under the pretense that they level down. They do not.

"The article of the treaty creating a conference of labor in which all nations are represented provides that the article shall be interpreted in accordance with the following:

"In no case shall any member be asked or required as a result of the adoption of any recommendation or draft convention by the conference to lessen the protection afforded by its existing legislation to the workers concerned.

"The labor articles of the treaty were drawn by labor men for labor. They will stand."

BOYS OFFER TO PAY JUDGE LINDSEY'S FINE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Members of the Boys' Brotherhood Republic are conducting a drive to raise 50,000 pennies to pay the fine of Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver, who has decided that he would rather serve a sentence for refusing to violate a boy's confidence than pay a fine. This became known today when a telegram sent to the judge was made public. It reads:

"The Boys' Brotherhood Republic, representing the boys of Chicago, will raise 50,000 pennies to pay your unjust fine. If Colorado needs the money Chicago boys will furnish it. Campaign starts now; first collection 136 pennies."

German insurance companies in the United States was the Stuyvesant Insurance Company, of which the president is Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey.

"When the original Trading with the Enemy Act was adopted no power was given the Alien Property Custodian to sell enemy-owned properties, except to prevent waste. The Alien Property Custodian was expected to take over and administer these German properties and by his administration earn great profit for their owners, which they might claim the benefit of at the conclusion of the war—profits which resulted from the war itself for which their owners or their owners' friends were esponsible. This seemed to me an almost unmoral proceeding and I conceived the idea that since many of these German-owned properties had been spy centers and nests of sedition planted here with hostile intent, it would be quite proper to strike a real blow at the enemy by destroying the German hold upon American industries. I, therefore, asked Congress to give the Alien Property Custodian the general power of sale, in order to permit these great properties to be put in American hands, the proceeds to be held for final disposition after the war. That amendment was presented to the Congress in March, 1918, at the time when German successes on the field of battle were calling for the strongest measures on the part of the United States and her Allies. When this amendment, designed to destroy the German commercial and economic penetration of America and to strike a blow at the enemy from which he would be slow to recover, finally reached a vote, of all of the 526 members of the Americ[illegible] only one recorded his vo[illegible] it, and that was [illegible] huysen, of New Jersey.

Every step since 1849 has been forward and toward better achievement.

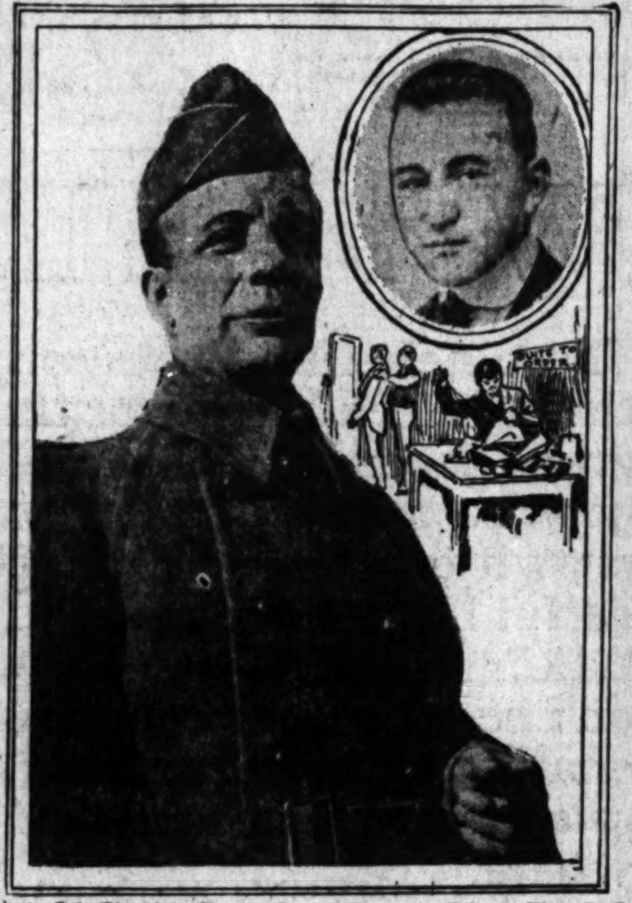
Doughboy Pitted Against High Officer.



Lieut.-Col. Theodore Roosevelt and (in oval) Private Elias Raff.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The strangest political race ever started in staid old Nassau county is being watched with mingled feelings by the residents of the Assembly district, for Theodore Roosevelt, son of a former President, and who is a descendant of two of the oldest of Nassau families, is opposed to Elias Raff, son of a Russian Jew immigrant. Roosevelt, who was a lieutenant-colonel in the world war, has been named for Assemblyman by the Republicans. Raff, the tailor's son, is the Democratic nominee.

It is a curious spectacle, the scion of an old American family with the bluest of the old Netherlands blood in his veins, battling for office with a representative of America's melting pot. The added touch of democracy comes with the news that Raff was just a buck private throughout the war. His family in America dates back just thirty-two years. The Roosevelt Americanism on both the paternal and distaff sides goes back to the Dutch settlement of Manhattan Island. The curious feature of it all is that the two nominees are friends.

WISCONSIN HAILS LEAGUE.

That the Wisconsin State Society of Southern California is heartily in favor of the League of Nations was evident at the annual picnic of that organization in Sycamore Grove yesterday, when 700 Badgers loudly cheered every endorsement of the international covenant made by Dr. Silas Evans, Paul Findlay, Eugene Chafin, and many other noted speakers.

"The wisest minds of the world have devised the League of Nations and the instincts which prompt you to favor it are sound," said Mr. Findlay. "After a six-months' journey throughout this country, I can tell you that the people of America feel that permanent peace, the reign of liberty under law is to be secured and best maintained under the League of Nations. When we adopted the Constitution we subscribed to the reign of law. On that day we gave tangible effect to the doctrine of the equal rights of small nations. Now comes the opportunity to spread liberty throughout the entire world. Let us sweep aside all petty objections to surface imperfections in the league, imperfections which can be ironed out as were those of our Constitution. Let us make Congress understand that the league is what we want and that we know why we want it. Let us call a halt on politics. Let us remember that the mere form of the league does not matter much, but that the principle is everything. Thus shall we redeem our pledge to our heroic dead in Flanders."

Dr. Silas Evans, president of Occidental College, also spoke in favor of the league as did many others, including Col. Frank H. True, president of the Wisconsin Society; C. H. Parsons, secretary of the Federated State societies; Theodore Kanouse and Eugene Chafin, twice candidate for President on the Prohibition ticket. Mr. Chafin said that he had just finished a trip around the world and, speaking of Australia and conditions there, said that he had seen more drunken men in Sydney in a day than he had ever seen in Milwaukee in a year.

A feature of the programme was a number of duets rendered by Mrs. Anna Merkel Evans and Mrs. Barbara Merkel Sherman. Wisconsin pennants were awarded to the oldest man and woman present, the winners being Charles Milwaukee Sivyer, aged 73 years, the first white boy born in Milwaukee, and Mrs. D. M. Olds, aged 80 years. E. I. Thompson, president of the Los Angeles-Wisconsin Society, announced that a meeting of the local association will be held in Forum Hall on the evening of September 3. Other organizations holding celebrations in Sycamore Grove yesterday were the Morimonte Presbyterian Sunday School and the Bell Presbyterian Sunday School.

GRAND JURY MAY QUIZ HOSPITAL'S ATTACHES.

EAGER TO FIND OUT WHY MANY PRISONERS THERE ESCAPED SO EASILY.

The escape from the County Hospital, of Sid Joseph, alias Earl Ford, charged with burglary, and G. W. West, charged with passing fraudulent checks, may be taken before the grand jury for an investigation. The men were taken from the County Jail to the County Hospital on orders of the court for examination. They were under observation for their physical and mental condition, and made their escape in a sensational manner by means of knotted sheets.

It is known that the County Hospital authorities are anxious to clear up the manner in which a number of criminal inmates have escaped from the institution. If there is an investigation by the grand jury it may take a wide scope to ascertain if there is collusion or negligence, or whether the laws as to the appointment of guards are adequate.

West was taken to ward 110 and was under a heavy guard. He is said to have escaped from another room. Both men slipped down the knotted sheets to the ground at 2 o'clock on the morning of the 20th inst.

Two other cases may be brought to the attention of the grand jury, E.T. Ostermann, who made his getaway while taking a sun bath, and M. Fink, who successfully got away from the County Hospital.

BUILD DORMITORY.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LANCASTER, Aug. 30.—A boys' dormitory will be operated in connection with the Union High School next term. A building will be equipped for the purpose. Several applications have been received by President C. E. Warren, from young men of the valley, who are anxious to attend the High School, and prefer to live in a dormitory.

The girls' dormitory is already full for the coming term, which begins next Tuesday.

Work on the new annex—the manual training building—has been held back for the past several days on account of building material, which the contractors have been unable to get because of the railroad strike.

IT EXPLODED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LANCASTER, Aug. 30.—Wallace McDougall, 14 years of age, found a dynamite cap and while carrying the dangerous thing in his right hand, it exploded, tearing off the end of the third finger, and otherwise injuring the member. It is believed the cap struck some nails he was carrying in his trousers pocket with such force as to cause the explosion.

COVINA BOY RETURNS AFTER HAVING BEEN LEFT ON FIELD FOR DEAD.

COVINA, Aug. 30.—Everett Hammerton, nephew of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Pollard of Center street, a driver of a Troy laundry wagon before the war, who returns to his old job this week, is one of the American heroes whose exploits at Chateau Thierry thrilled the world. He was badly wounded and left for dead on the field, but has returned to tell his story.

Hammerton was a member of the second division of the marines. The division had just been through a severe engagement and was resting, when Hammerton was hit by a bullet while in a dugout. He was no sooner hit than another bullet struck him. He lay for hours paralyzed and unable to utter a sound. The bullet that had struck him in the head had made it impossible to move his body, and had deprived him of his speech. But all during the terrible interval he was conscious, and could hear the remarks of his comrades about him. Many came where he lay, and remarked that he was dead.

It was discovered that there was life in him, and he was taken to a hospital in the rear. Three times he heard the men say that it would be better to abandon him, as he was undoubtedly as good as dead. The stretcher bearers wanted to pick up other soldiers who seemed to have a better chance to live, and who were moaning with pain. Although Hammerton could hear the conversation he could not speak.

Later, in the hospital he discovered that his lower lip had begun to tremble with returning life in the nerves. He found he could make sounds with his lips, and finally he began to shout and attracted the attention of a nurse. He recovered very slowly. He had been wounded in the head, in the leg and in the hip, and was in the hospital two months.

CLUB SECRETARIES FROM MANY CITIES HOLD MEETING AT VENICE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENICE, Aug. 30.—More than fifty cities were represented today at the monthly meeting of the commercial secretaries of Southern California. Col. Robert Sheahan of the Venice Chamber of Commerce presided. Luncheon was served for the visitors at Atwoods, after which a motor-boat ride through the Venice canals was enjoyed. Special music by the band and jazz orchestra was furnished in the afternoon. After several hours of entertainment and merry-making, a business session was held in the Chamber of Commerce headquarters.

J. A. Armstrong of Sunset Beach drew a striking picture of the advantage in every branch of civic life that will be effected by the construction of the new State highway.

Mayor S. L. Berkley of Santa Monica declared that the importance of every citizen supporting civic organizations is not impressed upon the people. He also spoke of the advance that civic organizations have made since their inception.

A. M. Paul of the Exposition Park Chamber, spoke on the advantages of co-operation, the theory of co-operation and its practical effects in civic life.

ONTARIO, Aug. 30.—The Los Angeles Times and Mercury Aviation Company opened their flying circus on Latimer Field East Sixth street this afternoon and before the event closes tomorrow evening scores of enthusiastic residents of the west end of San Bernardino county expect to experience the thrills of flying.

Following a flight over the city yesterday in one of the Times machines with Lieut. Walter E. Hawkins, City Councilman Charles Latimer, one of the most prominent orange ranchers and packers in Southern California, became such an enthusiastic flight fan that he offered the circus management the use of a large level field at Sixth street and Campus avenue which proved much more satisfactory than a site formerly selected near State street.

REPORT DEFENDS RYAN'S POLICY.

Lea of California Disagrees with His Confreres.

Says Spruce Production was Based on Speed.

Denies that War Railroad was in Graft Scheme.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND, Aug. 30.—In a minority report telegraphed from here today to Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, Representative Clarence F. Lea, of California, Democratic member of the Congressional subcommittee investigating airplane spruce production during the war, took issue with the majority report made Thursday by Republican members of the committee, defended the actions of the spruce corporation in connection with the Lake Pleasant railroad and sawmills in the State of Washington and declared that he believed criticisms of John D. Ryan, former assistant Secretary of War, were not justified.

The minority report called attention to "some inaccuracies" in the report submitted by the other committee members and declared that sales of property which have been made by the Spruce Production Corporation since the war "reflect creditably" upon the corporation.

MOTIVES GOOD.

"I see no reason," Representative Lea declared, "to question either the good judgment or the good motives of the men now acting for the corporation in the salvaging of these properties. In my judgment my colleagues have acted prematurely in passing judgment upon the propriety of selecting the Crescent route for the Pleasant Lake Railroad."

Attention was called to conflicting testimony even among experts in the logging industry, regarding decision as to construction of mills and logging railroads in Northwestern Washington, particularly with reference to the routes decided upon.

"Outside of the question of finance, where the lives of our American soldiers were involved, it was neither wise nor patriotic to split hairs over costs," the report declared. "The nation demanded results and not parsimony.

"The plan adopted was a sacrifice of economy for speed and, of course, was necessary and justifiable only as a war emergency.

"The fact that John D. Ryan was associated with a company that may be benefited by these transactions, is a circumstance giving a degree of color to criticism and complaint. So far as my information goes, John D. Ryan performed an able and useful service in aircraft matters during the war and reflections upon his conduct are not justified by strained inferences. Only evidence of a compelling character should justify a reflection upon his business judgment, patriotism, or motives, and such testimony, in my opinion, has not been presented."

DEAN OF ENGINEERS INSTALLS OFFICERS.

NATIONAL PRESIDENT HELPS GET NEW ASSOCIATION CHAPTER STARTED.

Dr. Frederick H. Newell, president of the American Association of Engineers and head of the civil engineering department of the University of Illinois, was guest of honor at a dinner given Friday evening at the City Club by the newly organized Los Angeles chapter of the American Association of Engineers. Dr. Newell presided at the installation of the officers of the new organization, who are E. G. Sheibley, president, and A. L. Harris, secretary.

The local organization will be known as the Engineers and Architects' Society, Los Angeles Chapter of the American Association of Engineers. The purpose of the new association will be twofold—it will carry on welfare work for its members and it will develop a scientific employment bureau, which will endeavor to find employment, not only for the technically trained engineer who is out of a position, but also for the man who, although employed, desires to find something more suited to his capabilities.

The American Association of Engineers was organized five years ago, but has attained a membership of 5000, as it occupies a field covered by no other engineering society.

Dr. Newell has been called the "Father of the United States Reclamation Service," of which he was first chief engineer from 1902-07 and director from 1907-14. He has been president of the Washington Engineering Society and is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, American Society of Mechanical Engineers and Western Society of Engineers, and was one of the original members of the Engineering Council.

At the meeting Friday night Dr. Newell spoke on "The Problems of the Engineer of Today," pointing out the two things that must be considered by the engineer—his wage and, most important, pride in his work.

Yesterday afternoon Dr. Newell conferred with the local officers and members of the American Association of Engineers at the Alexandria Hotel, after which he left for Riverside to install another chapter of the organization, composed of engineers of Riverside and San Bernardino.

FRUIT WORKERS' UNION DEMANDS MORE PAY.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 26.—Announcement has been made by the executive council of the Central California Fruit Workers' Union that a new schedule of wages is to be proposed to citrus packing-house managers from Bakersfield north to Stockton, action being requested by September 5. While the details of the new demands have not been published in advance of their submission to the packers, it is stated increases requested will average about 17 per cent.

Wage increase demands are made on behalf of strappers, loaders, box makers, box machine men, helpers, laborers and pressers.

According to W. R. Singltary of Lindsay, organizer for this district, the membership in the union is about 1000 and is said to represent about 95 per cent. of the labor employed in these classes.

PACKERS WIN IN BATTLE ON BILL.

Committee will Cut Rigid Storage Provisions.

Time Limit will Have Year as Maximum.

Wilson's Price-Marking Plan to be Excluded.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—A cold storage bill less rigid than has been advocated was tentatively agreed upon today by the House Committee on Agriculture.

The bill fixes twelve months as the maximum period in which any food may be kept in cold storage. The Hutchinson bill provided a ten months' limit while the McKellar bill allowed even less time for certain commodities.

Spokesmen for the packers have urged no measure should restrict the storage period below twelve months and experts, including Dr. Harvey Wiley, former chief of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture, testified that the wholesomeness of food is not affected within a year's time.

Stamping of dates on which food is put into storage and taken out also is provided. This provision will be less acceptable to the storage interests.

NO PRICE MARKS.

The bill will not contain any provision for the marking of prices at which the food left the producer as recommended by President Wilson. The committee has decided the plan is impracticable.

An exception to the twelve months limit will be made in the case of cheese. It is said that certain kinds of cheese improve with age and special provision will be made for them. The department of agriculture is given authority to inspect storage warehouses and to require reports. Food kept more than twelve courts and sold, while food in an insanitary condition will be refused shipment in inter-State commerce and may be confiscated.

The measure applies only to food in interstate commerce, but it is believed all warehouses will find themselves obliged to live up to its provisions.

Representative Haugen of Iowa, chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, said he believed the bill was of such a character that it would be possible to obtain its passage. More radical legislation, he said, would have been certain to meet defeat.

ALLEGE SPECULATION.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—The United States district attorney's office struck out on a new tangent today in the campaign against the high cost of living, profiteering and food hoarding.

An investigation was opened into a complaint that one man, through a big purchase at an army auction sale, had effected a partial corner of the canned tomato market and was holding the staple for high prices.

The report was made to the government office by Jay D. Miller, attorney for Sprague, Warner & Co., wholesale grocers of Chicago.

Miller declared that a man, whose name was suppressed, outbid Chicago wholesalers by 3-10 of a cent a can on a large allotment of army tomatoes. His entry in the purchasing was unexpected because he was not a food dealer. His apparent purpose was speculation.

Although the purchase was made only two days ago it resulted in a partial corner of the market because the supply of canned tomatoes in the city is short. It was declared that the narrow margin by which he outbid the highest price offered by wholesalers indicated he was "tipped" on the size of their bids.

INVESTIGATION STARTS.

An immediate report of the condition was made to the army quartermaster's office and the District Attorney's office contented itself with an investigation of the facts until United States Attorney Clyne returns from Washington, where he is declared to be in conference on the packers' cases.

It was declared that the retail price of meat in many neighborhood butcher shops took a fall of from two to three cents a pound yesterday as a result of the purchase Friday by the packers of hogs and cattle at the new low levels which were forced during the week.

A further reduction was predicted for tomorrow as the butchers replaced their supplies at the reduced figures.

HOG PRICES GO UP.

Impelled by out-of-town buying the price of hogs went up approximately $1.25 during the day's trading on the cheaper grades. The new figure of from $16.50 to $17.50 is considerably below the high mark of last Monday when the action of the packers started the decline.

According to experts the market will again decline next week if the packers stick to their new policy of light buying and the public keeps meat consumption down to a minimum.

The proposed opening of a department store by the government for the "cash and carry" sale of army goods and food, announced by Col. A. D. Kniskern, department quartermaster, is expected to bring retail prices of all foodstuffs to lower levels. The store will open on or about September 25. Branches in the various neighborhood centers also will be opened.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant-tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet, I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."—[Advertisement.

SCHOONER CASCO IS SAFE IN FAR NORTH.

REPORT OF DISASTER TO BOAT OWNED BY NOVELIST DENIED BY MINING MAN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—The schooner Casco, once owned by Robert Louis Stevenson, did not come to grief in Alaskan waters and compel the abandonment of plans for a peaceful conquest of resources on the Siberian coast, according to Leon S. McGirk, a San Francisco mining engineer, leader of the Casco's adventurers who arrived today from the north.

On August 15, McGirk said, the Casco, not only was safe with her party of twenty-five, but was making her way farther north to a secret destination on the Arctic side of the Siberian coast under command of Capt. C. L. Oliver, a San Francisco nevigator.

Nome advices told of the Casco's peril in a storm, but the ultimate fate of the little schooner was not known until McGirk arrived here today. July 27 McGirk and G. M. Harwood, the Casco's first mate, went ashore on the Siberian coast to investigate possibilities of anchoring. While these men were ashore the ship drifted out to sea. Through natives McGirk and Harwood were able to find their way to a point on the coast, where the United States Guard cutter Bear was anchored and through native sources it later was learned that the Casco had safely made the shelter of Cape Serdzex and planned to proceed to a winter destination at Van Carem, a Siberian trading station.

CLEMENCEAU WILL NOT RUN FOR PRESIDENCY.

POINCAIRE IS SAID NOT TO SEEK SECOND TERM SO FRENCH POLITICIANS ARE BUSY.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Thursday, Aug. 28.—While debate on the ratification of the peace treaty with Germany is going on in the Chamber of Deputies before virtually empty benches, most of the members gather in the lobbies discussing the coming election.

President Poincaire, it is declared, will not be a candidate for a second term, and it seems improbable that Premier Clemenceau will stand for the office. Some days ago when asked if he would be a candidate, he is quoted as having replied:

"No! Just think if I should be elected and then run afoul of another Clemenceau as Premier!"

Prominent among the candidates is Paul Deschanel, president of the Chamber of Deputies. It is expected that nearly 300 members of the chamber will be returned, and he is reported to be certain of four-fifths of their votes.

Antonin Dubost, president of the Senate, has followers.

Alexandre Ribot, former Premier, seems to be expected to present the most formidable opposition to M. Deschanel. The name of former Foreign Minister Louis Barthou is also mentioned, but many of the Deputies appear to think he is too young.

GOMPERS WORKING TO AVERT STEEL STRIKE.

HOPES FOR "AMICABLE ADJUSTMENT" OF CONTROVERSY OVER WAGES.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced today that efforts were still being made to effect a settlement of the controversy between the steel workers and the United States Steel Corporation. Hopes were entertained, he said, that an "amicable adjustment" could be reached, making a strike unnecessary.

Mr. Gompers's announcement was made after a three-days' meeting of the executive council of the labor federation at which many labor problems were discussed.

Action on the Plumb plan of the railroad brotherhoods for tripartite control of the railroads was deferred by the council.

Mr. Gompers said the council had discussed the actors' strike and had issued a new charter to the Actors' Equtiy Society and the White Rats Association under the name of Actors' and Artisans' Association of America.

The executive council, Mr. Gompers added, pledged the full support of the federation to the actors now on strike.

Mr. Gompers said the report of the American delegates to the international trade unions at Amsterdam "showed clearly that the wave of Bolshevism had receded and that the international trade union conference voted overwhelmingly against and Bolshevik principles or tendencies.

W STRIKE IN TAILOR SHOPS.

ymen's Union Members Without Warning.

Agreement to Have Until Tomorrow.

yers will Organize to Laborite Tactics.

their wage demands had met by the tailoring concerns of this city, all the tailors, machine operators, pressers and others allied with the local Journeymen Tailors' Union went out on a general strike at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, leaving piles of unfinished garments on the employers' hands.

The walkout was unexpected. Demands for higher wages and changed working conditions were made on the manufacturers a few days ago, but in view of an agreement with the union which was not to have expired until tomorrow, the employers did not look for a strike yesterday.

The present demands are for wage increases approximately 65 per cent. The scale asked is $44 a week for tailors, $44 for pressers, $39 for helpers, $39 for trimmers, $44 for machine operators and $29 for women helpers. The demands also call for a week of forty-four hours, time and a half for over-time and double time for Saturday afternoons.

It is demanded that the work day shall be from 8 a. m. till 12 m. and from 1 p. m. to 5 p. m., with a half holiday each Saturday, and full holidays with full pay New Year's Day, Decoration Day, July Fourth, Labor Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

HUNDREDS OUT.

Every tailor shop in the city is affected by the strike, it is said, and several hundred men and women are out.

This is the third wage increase the union has asked in the last few months. A similar demand was made on the dealers about two months ago and wages at that time were advanced. The union, it is said, will not make a contract with the manufacturers but reserves the right to demand more money and declare a strike whenever it pleases. The present demands are that the new hours and wage scale become effective at once and not be changed by either party, without fifteen days' notice.

An association of custom tailors is to be formed here to fight the union, it was announced yesterday, and all local concerns that employ workers affiliated with the union are expected to join.

The employers say the demands made by the local workers are impossible and simply mean that the union must be crushed or the custom tailors must go out of business, and none of the manufacturers intend to go out of business.

MEANS A FIGHT.

One of the most prominent employing tailors in the city said yesterday that ten years ago the union was crushed. "Now," he added, "it is simply a question whether we are to run our own business or the union is to run it." For his own part, he added, he is going to run his business or go to the bankruptcy court.

The clothiers say it is impossible to accede to the demands of the union and remain in business. They declare the increased wages will make the cost of custom-tailored clothes prohibitive, and the result will be that everyone will start wearing ready-made clothing and the tailors will be thrown out of work, as the old custom shoemaker was run out by the machine-made shoe.

All the local shops have offered their men $36 per week with an eight-hour day, but the union rejected this offer, it was announced.

If the wage demands are met, it is stated, the cheapest tailored suit will cost about $60 while the ordinary suit, which now sells for from $40 to $45, will sell for $70 or more.

There is a shortage of tailors in this country at present, it is stated, because very few American boys ever learn the tailoring business, the majority of the operators coming from Russia and Germany. Since the war began none have come to this country and the unions by rules and regulations have prevented young men from learning the trade.

The garment workers, who have just settled a strike after having been out ten weeks, are a separate organization from the Journeymen Tailors. The persons who walked out yesterday are employed exclusively by custom tailors, while the garment workers are engaged in making many different kinds of garments, including overalls, ready-to-wear suits and women's clothing.

Officials of the Fitzgerald company say that after this practical demonstration of the efficiency of the airplane for business purposes, they intend to use the flying machines regularly.

CABLE OPERATORS IN A WEEK-END STRIKE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Cable messages between the United States and Europe over the lines of the Commercial Cable Company are being slightly delayed as the result of the week-end strike of the operators in the western terminals, it is announced at the company's offices.

The operators who now are receiving a thirty per cent. wage bonus, demand that it be increased to sixty per cent. and that they be paid an allowance of $25 a month for subsistence which they claim is received by the European operators of the company.

The men stopped work at midnight last night, announcing they would return at midnight tomorrow. They plan to suspend work every week-end until their demands are granted.

DRUG ADDICTS STRIKE; FEAR SOCRATIC FATE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Fearing the "fate of Socrates," eight drug addicts at the Riverside Hospital went on "strike" yesterday against continuation of hyoscyamus treatment.

The revolt came after one of their number consulted a dictionary and found the hyoscine was the modern name for henbane, which he declared was the drug with which Socrates was forced to end his life.

The "strikers" were sent to the Blackwell Island workhouse.

TIGERS DIVIDE WITH YIPPERS.

Win First of Double-header, but Drop Second.

Rex Dawson Heaves a Good Article of Ball.

W. Mitchell Lambasted Hard; Ross Larruped.

BY ED O'MALLEY.

Fifty-fifty, if you please, yesterday in the double-header at Washington Park between the Tigers and the Sacramentos. The first game was a big breeze for Bill Essick, 5 to 2, but the visitors came back strong in the second and copped it 9 to 2. And now for the first contest. Prough was sent in to pitch for Bill Rodgers. The big Solon heaver is temperamental to an exquisite degree. He has declared a number of times that Lester Cook receives his assortment of drops and curves better than any other backstop he has ever pitched to. Bill is as sure as a gun when his chosen man is back of the plate. He went into yesterday's game with confidence radiating from every lineament of his features.

Johnny Mitchell was the first Tiger up. He had Johnny up in the air and was about to strike him out when luckily for the league's best shortstop and unluckily for Prough, Mitchell sent a high foul back of the plate. Cook rushed after it and had all the appearance of about gloving it when the ball hit the screen and took a sudden drop right on Lester's nose. The blow almost knocked him down and caused the blood to gush from his nostrils. The unfortunate catcher had to be led to the dugout, where a doctor requisitioned from the grand stand took care of him. The bridge of Cook's nose was broken and he was taken to the clubhouse. He will, in all probability, be seen behind the bat this afternoon.

PROUGH UPSET.

Divorced from teamwork and seeing his ideal backstop taken out of the game, Prough became completely upset; waxed nervous in the extreme and was as unsteady as a kite in a cyclone. He fell an easy prey to Bengal batting prowess and before he could get his bearings, Vernon had put four tallies across the plate. Harry Wolter, the sterling right fielder of the Yippers, displaced Prough in the second and to the surprise of almost every one present heaved a splendid article of ball.

Prough's debacle was brought about in the following manner: Mitchell singled over second, but Chadbourne swung a surprise party by forcing Johnny, Orr to McGaffigan. Meusel battered one to left that had the wings of the midnight vultures attached to it and by the time Roxy Middleton had [illegible] the plum back to civilization [illegible] Bobby was roosting on third and Chad at the plate.

Edington hit to McGaffigan and smart little Marty pegged the ball like a shot to Cady who muffed it, Meusel scoring. Hughie High not to be outdone by Meusel trundled one to right center for three bags tallying Edington. Fisher was an easy out, Orr to Griggs. Then Tommy Long also got into the running by lambasting one to center sending High across the rubber. Tommy tried to steal second, but was an easy out, Cady to McGaffigan. Four runs.

The visitors' strenuous efforts to tie the score in the sixth inning proved abortive just as things were framing themselves auspiciously. After two had gone over the plate and Griggs was on third with McGaffigan at first, Marty deliberately stole second. Then Orr sent a fly to Long who pegged well to the plate to catch Griggs, but the ball got by Brooks. Griggs hesitated when he saw that the ball would beat him to the plate and then continued as he saw it scooting toward the stand. In the meantime Brooks flitted back to the rubber and received the throw in time to nail Griggs at the plate. It was a close decision and effectually checked the Solons' rally. After that Dawson who pitched for the Bengals, settled down and heaved airtight ball.

In the second game the visitors threw a bombshell into the Vernon's hopes of widening the distance between them and the Angels by winning in a great big romp from start to finish. W. Mitchell started on the mound for Essick, but was in trouble from the very outset. He had hardly been in the box a few minutes when the Yodelers banged him for three hits resulting in two runs. He lasted until three more runs were made off him in the fourth and then lefty Ross went in.

As far as the Tigers' winning chances were concerned by the change it was only exchanging one misery for another, for Ross was treated just as roughly as was his predecessor. The Senators had on their batting clothes and just larruped the persimmon to all quarters of the lot. Vernon never had a look in.

One of the peculiar features of the second game was the ironical applauding of Bobby Meusel in the ninth inning. It was the old old story—a king one day—a hireling the next. Bobby had a fervid session with butter fingers in the second game and had clustered three errors. Suddenly in the ninth Griggs hit so easy a bounder to Bobby that Lord Fauntleroy McHugh could have trapped it standing on his head and wearing blue glasses. Suddenly, as if by a concerted action, the grand stand almost shook the rafters with applause as Meusel easily tossed Griggs out to Edington.

Bobby turned a thousand colors and well he might, for the slam was undeserved. Meusel's bat has been instrumental in no small way in holding the Tigers in the lead and the way he has been a-mauling the ball lately has time and again set Vernon rooters aglow with enthusiasm. One more charitably inclined, however, came to his rescue sitting opposite the third-base line. "Never mind, Bobby," he cried, "let them ride you now for they won't see you here next year."

They might ride Bobby for making some errors, but let Bill Essick take this master sticker out of his line-up and the fans would make Essick's life miserable for him. Essick knows Bobby's worth and it's a thousand dollars to a rotten apple that Bill would be the last man on earth to call him down. The Tigers never had a chance after the fifth inning and the quicker this game is made a closed book the better for the morale of all Vernon rooters. The scores follow:

DOUBLE-HEADER ON FOR TODAY.

Special preparations have been made to accommodate the big crowd that is sure to be on hand at Washington Park this afternoon to witness the double-header between the Sacramento and the Vernon teams. Both contests will come off at Washington Park and both can be witnessed for the price of one admission. The first game will begin at 1:30 o'clock and the second about ten minutes after the finish of the first. The teams have now played five games this week and Sacramento has won three of them. The Tigers will fight hard this afternoon to win the double-header, in which case they will have a good chance to win the present series. Two games will be played tomorrow afternoon at Washington Park, making nine in all.

BACK ON AMATEUR STANDING.

Miss Eleanore Tennant, one of the most popular tennis players in Southern California and a star in the city championships now going on, has been reinstated to amateur standing by California tennis officials. Local tennis fans are delighted at Miss Tennant's reappearance in the amateur tourneys.

For some time Miss Tennant has been instructing in tennis at Beverly Hills and it was only during the past week that her amateur standing was re-established. A couple of days ago a letter was received from the tennis officials apologizing for the long delay and placing her on the amateur list.

GOLFERS SHOW WELL IN DEL MONTE PLAY.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING IS ON ITS WAY; MRS. GUY COCHRAN APPLAUDED.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

DEL MONTE, Aug. 30.—The eleventh annual California championship meeting started this morning with the first half of the Del Monte championship medal play over thirty-six holes. No sunshine but a fine golfing day greeted forty-nine starters from the first tee.

Although a nervous ordeal with a crowd of spectators and a bevy of cameramen around the clubhouse, there were few topped tee shots and Mrs. Guy Cochran of Los Angeles won a round of applause, the first break of the awe-inspiring silence, with a corking drive, the best of the half hundred.

GOT AWAY WELL.

Mrs. Hubert Law and Miss Edith Chesebrough both wreathed with the laurels of many championships were paired together and both got well away from the initial tee.

Of the early scores brought in Mrs. C. H. Terry of Claremont and Mount Diablo brought in a ninety-nine which surprised and pleased her friends. Mrs. T. S. Baker of Menlo played up to her reputation with a safe ninety-five, but the first score to cause a sensation was the eighty-six of Mrs. C. F. Ford, the Northern California champion.

A POOR START.

Miss Edith Chesebrough, who has been Del Monte champion five times, made a poor start with four sixes and a seven on the outward journey, but came home in a forty, a brilliant recovery. Mrs. Hubert Law, the State champion, had a conservative ninety-two.

Other creditable scores were the ninety-three of Mrs. Max Rothschild of Burlingame and the ninety-four of Mrs. E. H. Weil of Beresford. Besides the principal honors of the Del Monte championship, there are two handicap prizes which with half the tourney completed excited much interest and speculation tonight.

The summaries follow:

FLY CASTERS SET NEW WORLD RECORD.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—One world's record was established and one tied at the eleventh-annual fly casting tournament today. C. J. McCarthy made a new mark in the salmon fly with a total average of 146 1-3 in three attempts. W. F. Backus, Portland, Or., tied the record in the light tackle fly accuracy, which L. S. Darling made in 1916, of 99.6.

ALL-AMERICAN FINISH.

Brookes, Anzac Tennis Wonder, Beaten by Tilden; Maury Downed.

BY FRED HAWTHORNE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FOREST HILLS (L. I.) Aug. 30.—It is going to be an all-American finish in the great national championship lawn tennis tournament on the turf courts of the West Side Tennis Club of Forest Hills when the final and championship match is played Tuesday afternoon. Australia has sent her mightiest knights of the courts, Brookes and Patterson, and they have not proved quite good enough to stay the rush of the native born.

Brookes, the lone survivor from the land of the Anzac, was eliminated this afternoon in the fifth round of the tourney by William T. Tilden II, of Philadelphia, the sets going at 3-6, 6-4, 7-5, 6-3. In the three other matches for the championship William M. Johnston, champion of 1915, conquered Robert Lindley Murray, the playing through title holder, by a score 5-7, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4; Richard Norris Williams II, champion in 1914 and 1916, crushed the once invincible California "comet," Maurice E. McLoughlin, by a score of 6-0, 6-3, 6-2, and Wallace F. Johnson of Philadelphia, master of the chop stroke, overwhelmed Walter Merrill Hall by a score of 6-4, 6-0, 6-2.

STAGE CLEAR.

This leaves the stage cleared for the two great semifinal round battles Monday afternoon, with Johnston facing Johnson and Tilden clashing with Williams.

Last Monday I picked Johnston and Tilden to meet in the final round and viewing the results to date it looks like a very good choice and I am almost persuaded to stick by that selection, made two days before the tournament had begun. But during the week just completed Williams' game has undergone a remarkable improvement. Against Willis Davis on Wednesday, Williams impressed me as the greatest player in the world on that particular occasion.

In the two following days playing against Thomas of Australia and today in his cyclonic defeat of McLoughlin, Williams was not going at the superb pace, yet he was only a shade below his best and, therefore, I am going to pick the former champion to lower the great Tilden's colors Monday.

LOOKS GOOD.

Johnston certainly looks the logical favorite over Johnson and I am confident that the little Californian will come through splendidly, yet it should not be forgotten that the Philadelphian is playing the strongest game he has shown in several years and on damp, heavy courts he will be even more formidable.

There was an unfortunate incident in the Tilden-Brookes match today and it came, more's the pity, on the final point of the struggle. In the minds of some it must have raised a doubt as to the absolute clearness of Tilden's victory, but I cannot believe that the final result was changed one iota, for Brookes was a beaten man when the thing happened with the games at 5-3 and the points 40-30 against him.

MIGHTY SERVICE.

This is what took place. Tilden, whose mighty service had been his most powerful and effective weapon all the way through the match held the service in the final game and with the points at 40-30, he sent one of his bullet deliveries shooting over the net and at lightning speed for Brookes' court. The great Victorian was standing, racket poised, waiting for the ball. In the opinion of a great majority of the spectators who could watch the ball in its flight, it landed a good two inches out of the service court.

Brookes believed it out and swished his racket through the air as the ball whizzed by him and waited for the second service. Tilden, not certain, stood waiting with his racket raised. The linesman had said nothing and then E. C. Conlin, the umpire, turned in his chair and asked the linesman whether the ball was "in" or "out." After a moment of hesitation the linesman called it "in" and Conlin announced: "Game, set and match, Mr. Tilden," and this marked the exit of the wonderful Brookes from the tournament.

WAS HOPELESS.

The Australian made a gesture with his hands as of resignation, as though he knew it was hopeless to question what most certainly looked like a bad decision, but the next instant he showed his fine sportsmanship. He took off his cap and went marching toward the net where the tall and beaming Tilden was waiting to shake his hand. A smile spread over Brookes's face and he and his opponent gripped hands and walked off the court and toward the club house.

The thousands in the stands had waited there through the rain and through sunshine, while Brookes went valiantly down to defeat. [illegible] the vanquished a mighty [illegible] Although the interest of the [illegible] was plainly concentrated on [illegible] picturesque struggle between [illegible] ica and Australia, between [illegible] and experience, the tennis from a technical standpoint was not as brilliant as that of Williams in his defeat of McLoughlin.

Both Brookes and Tilden made many errors, with Tilden [illegible] as the match went along to the finish, but Williams was making shots that almost defied return. It seemed as though he might have swept "Red Mac" off the court by an even more decisive score had he been pressed.

HOME BREWERS GET IN DUTCH.

Frisky Hops Break Bottles and Cause Disturbance Generally.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Aug. 30.—The home breweries operated by the thirsty since July 1 have lost in popularity. Several cases of near casualties have been reported locally. One amateur brewer put too much yeast in the beer he was making and bottled it while fermentation was under way. During the night he was aroused by cannonading in his pantry and investigation disclosed that the beer bottles were breaking and being blown in all directions.

Another member of the thirsty legion had a similar experience and when he uncorked a bottle the liquid flew over the room and drowned the canary.

Hundreds of those who brewed at home from the "makings" that come in cans did not get the corks on tight and the result was that the brew was flat and not palatable. It has been a hard two months for the thirsty.

VISIT OF PRESIDENT ASSURED SAN DIEGO.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 30.—Congressman William Kettner today received a telegram from Secretary Tumulty saying President Wilson and party will arrive here Friday, September 19, at 3:30 in the afternoon, and leave at 9 the next morning. The secretary asks that the committee send a tentative programme and provide for an indoor address by the President and possibly a short motor ride.

Mayor L. J. Wilde has appointed G. Aubrey Davidson, formerly president of the exposition, as head of the Entertainment Committee for the President's visit. The President's preference for an indoor hall cannot be met, but it is thought he will not object to speaking at the Spreckel's organ pavilion at Balboa Park, where the acoustics are very good.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PASADENA, Aug. 30.—Some of the striking car men in Pasadena have asked for their old jobs back and have been reinstated by the company, according to announcements at the Pacific Electric offices here today. Officials would not say how many of the strikers had returned but declared there were quite a number. Pacific Electric officials say the men who have been reinstated declare that others of the strikers are going to follow their example. To get rid of intimidation by the strikers and their sympathizers, the Pacific Electric has bought the Fair Oaks Avenue restaurant, where the company has been providing meals for the car men and will operate it as a company dining-room.

CROWD CHEERS TRAIN.

Crowds greeted with cheers the first Santa Fe limited trains to arrive in Pasadena bound for the East today after the blockade. Outgoing travel here will be heavy the next few days. The local ticket offices of the Santa Fe, Salt Lake route and Southern Pacific were thronged with patrons throughout the day.

An invitation to attend the affair has been extended to Col. Roosevelt and it is expected he will include this city in his itinerary. Dr. Charles D. Lockwood, who organized Pasadena's original Red Cross ambulance company and who himself, became a major in the Army Medical Corps overseas, is chairman of the special committee of the American Legion which is in charge of the tentative arrangements for Col. Roosevelt's reception.

TO MAKE AIR FLIGHT.

Arrangements were made today by Leroy Linnard, son of D. M. Linnard, head of the California hotel chain, to fly with Cecil de Mille from Hollywood to Pasadena next Thursday when the new Pasadena municipal air landing field will be dedicated. Mr. Linnard is to make the air trip to familiarize himself with flying and the landing of airplanes, as he may undertake the establishment of air landing fields for use of airplanes between the different Linnard hotels.

INVITE THE PRESIDENT.

The Pasadena Board of Trade today renewed its efforts to induce President Wilson to visit Pasadena when he makes his western trip. The local organization has invited the President to come to this city at the conclusion of his stay in Los Angeles.

BACK FROM THE FRONT.

After twenty-seven months' service overseas in the army ambulance service with the French army, Horace W. Cutler, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Cutler of West California street, has returned home. He took part in twelve major engagements during the war. He will re-enter Stanford University in the fall.

SAN FRANCISCO AWAITS FLEET

Decorations, Speeches, Other Arrangements Made.

Chinese to Fire Bombs Releasing American Flags.

Traffic in Bay to be Suspended During Arrival.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—Its last week of decorating, speech writing and rehearsing, reception and refreshment booth construction and programme arranging done, San Francisco settled down tonight to take a little breathing spell before the start of Fleet Week Monday morning.

The Pacific Fleet and the Secretary of the Navy already are "hovering in the offing" and will cast anchor in Bolinas Bay Sunday, preparatory to entering the Golden Gate Monday morning.

Admiral Rodman's warships are expected to enter the Golden Gate at 11 o'clock. The first salute probably will be that from the big guns of Forts Scott, Baker and Miley, but the Chinese residents of San Francisco have fixed up a novel greeting all their own. It will consist of bombs fired from Fort Scott bursting over the warships and releasing large silk American flags, which, if the wind is right, will constitute an aerial procession escorting the ships to their anchorage. Two Chinese aviators will fly over the fleet and drop floral wreaths on the decks.

The fleet will enter the harbor through the north channel, next to the Marin county shore, while next to the Presidio, on the San Francisco side, will be the historic Oregon, with the Secretary of the Navy and the reviewing party on board.

As the flagship New Mexico passes the veteran of '98, its 14-inch batteries will fire the salute of nineteen guns due the Secretary of the Navy, receiving in reply the seventeen to which the admiral of the fleet is entitled. Each ship in turn will give the nineteen-gun salute, while to those bearing the four other admirals the Oregon will return the same courtesy as shown the New Mexico.

All water traffic will be suspended half an hour before the fleet's arrival, to be resumed half an hour afterward. After the ships have taken their position in "mano' war row," the visiting of citizens to the ships and officers and sailors to the shore will begin.

It is expected 15,000 men will be granted shore leave at once and decorations, refreshments, entertainments, invitations to automobile rides and theater parties will greet them almost simultaneously.

ITINERARY OF FLEET.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ABOARD U.S.S. NEW YORK, AT SEA, Aug. 29.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels will leave San Francisco at 6 o'clock the morning of September 8, aboard the dreadnaught New York for Puget Sound, he announced today. Admiral Hugh Rodman, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet, will accompany the Secretary with the flagship New Mexico.

The remaining vessels of the fleet will leave San Francisco September 9.

Secretary Daniels said the ships which will sail under Admiral Rodman, ahead of the others, will make their first port call after leaving San Francisco at Port Angeles, Wash. This port will be reached at 8 o'clock the morning of September 11, it is expected. The ships will arrive at Victoria at noon the same day.

Admiral Rodman will leave Victoria September 12, arriving at Seattle at 10 o'clock the same morning. After Admiral Rodman's ships leave Victoria they will join the remainder of the fleet, all arriving at Seattle at the same time, anchoring September 13.

The fleet will be in Seattle and vicinity all day September 14, and will leave Seattle at 8 o'clock the following morning for Tacoma, arriving there at 10 o'clock.

Secretary Daniels will take leave of the fleet the afternoon of September 17, going to Portland, by train.

Secretary Daniels the next morning will board a destroyer at Portland for a trip of inspection of the Columbia River and Astoria. He will return to Portland that night. The following night the Secretary will leave Portland for Chicago.

FETE TYPIFIES RICHES IN OIL.

Many Millions Represented at Banquet of Former Texas Folks Here.

That the oil wells in and around Wichita Falls, Tex., have made many millionaires was evidenced last night when Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Silk and Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Bashara, prominent in the oil business of Texas, entertained a number of former residents of Wichita Falls and their wives at a banquet at the Alexandria Hotel. There were forty persons seated at the table in the main dining-room and it is reported that no fewer than $75,000,000 was represented by those present. Practically all this money was made in the oil industry of Texas.

TWO MERMAIDS MAKE GREAT PLUNGE RECORD

What is claimed to be a distance record in plunge swimming was made yesterday by two young mermaids, Miss Laura Gattegno, 13 years old, and Miss Frances Grant, at the Wilkinson College of Swimming.

Miss Gattegno swam 290 lengths of the plunge, which is five miles, with great ease. She did not break the speed record but swam gracefully throughout her trial. Prof. Wilkinson awarded her a silver medal.

The other young lady, Miss Frances Grant, swam 580 lengths of the plunge equaling ten miles, using both the side and back stroke, traveling fifteen feet each stroke without ruffling the surface of the water.

According to Prof. Wilkinson, proprietor of the school, the records made clearly demonstrate the fact that modern swimming is not the strenuous exercise that it is generally supposed to be. As far as is known Miss Grant's swim was the longest distance ever made by a lady in a plunge of any kind.

TO INVESTIGATE FEED PROFITEER

Federal Grand Jury will Sift Overcharge Report.

Cattle Shippers Said to Have Paid Double Price.

Stockyards Commission Men may Lose Licenses.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Charges that Chicago stockyards commission merchants have been overcharging farmers to the extent of thousands of dollars on stock feed in the yards are to be investigated by the Federal grand jury which will be impanelled in Chicago next Tuesday.

This was admitted here today by Dist.-Atty. Clyne of Chicago, who came to Washington to confer with the Attorney-General over phases of the case against the big packers which the government has decided to press for alleged violation of the anti-trust laws.

It has been discovered, officials say, that overcharging the stock farmers for feed in the pens has been practiced by some of the stockyards commission men for a prolonged period and an investigation into these disclosures, it was authoritatively stated, will be one of the first undertakings of the September grand jury.

When the stock raisers ship cattle to Chicago it is the custom of the commission men to charge against the shipper the amount of feed the stock consumes while awaiting sale. In carrying out this system, government agents claim they have discovered that the commission men have been deducting from the shippers' profits more than double the amount of money they should have paid. It is explained some of the commission men have been in the habit of charging against a shipper for cattle feed two hundred pounds of hay when 100 pounds was all that the cattle consumed. The 100 pounds left over was then fed to another shipper's cattle and he in turn was charged for 200 pounds of hay.

The disclosures, it is said, have been called to the attention of the Department of Agriculture, which issues licenses to the commissioners, and the department is conducting an independent investigation with a view to determining whether some of the licenses should be revoked.

"The government is looking into those charges," said Dist.-Atty. Clyne today. "The disclosures do not affect all the stockyards commission men but there is evidence tending to show that some of them have profited to the extent of thousands of dollars at the expense of the farmers trough these irregularities."

The District Attorney said he would return to Chicago Tuesday morning ready to direct the work of the grand jury in its investigation of the government's charge against the packer and the new allegations made against the commission men.

ED ROUSCH FLIRTS WITH BAT TITLE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Ed Rousch, one of the batting stars in Cincinnati's pennant drive, is flirting with the batting championship of the National League. Unofficial averages released today show he is now in second place with an average of .326, with "Gavvy" Cravath, manager of the Philadelphia Club, topping the league hitters with .340.

Cutshaw, of Pittsburgh, continues to lead the base stealers with 31, with Bigbee, a team-mate, and Jack Smith of St. Louis, tied for second with 26.

With the close of the season a month away, Ty Cobb is in no apparent danger of being dethroned as the champion batter of the American League. The Detroit star is safely in the lead with an average of .380. Veach, Cobb's teammate, is in second place with .356.

"Babe" Ruth, the sensational slugger with Boston, who is striving to break the major league home run record of 26 established by Buck Freeman of the Washington National League in 1899, has shattered the American League record with 23, bagging four in his last six games. Ruth also has scored a total of 80 runs in 105 games.

Eddie Collins, the Chicago second baseman, is pressing George Sisler, of St. Louis, for honors in base stealing, Sisler with twenty-six having a margin of two.

"Gets-It" Peels Your Corns Right Off

Two Drops Will Do It Without Fuss or Trouble. Never Fails.

There's only one way to get rid of a corn, and that is to peel it off as you would a banana skin. There is only one corn remover in all the world that does it that way, and that is "Gets-It." It is because of this fact that "Gets-It" is today the biggest seller among corn-removers on this planet. It means the end of "corn-fiddling." For hard corns, soft corns, very old corns, young corns, corns between the toes and callouses, it means a quick, certain finish. "Gets-It" is applied in 2 or 3 seconds. All you need is 2 or 3 drops. As easy to do as signing your name. It does away forever with tape, plasters, bandages, knives, corn-diggers, scissors, files and blood-bringing razors. Ease your corn-pains, be corn-free at last.

HONOR STEAM ENGINE INVENTOR'S MEMORY.

ORIGINAL MODELS MADE BY JAMES WATT WILL BE PUT UNDER STEAM.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

BIRMINGHAM (Eng.) Aug. 30.—Tribute to the genius of James Watt, "dean of British inventors," for his services in improving the modern steam engine, will be paid at Birmingham when, on September 16, 17, and 18, the centenary of his death will be commemorated.

A garden party at Heathfield Hall, Watt's old home near Birmingham, and visits to several of the original engines built by Watt, which will be under steam for the first time in years, will be features of the celebration.

An effort is being made to found at Birmingham an international permanent memorial to Watt's achievements with the intention of "making Birmingham to engineers of the world what Stratford on-Avon is to lovers of Shakespeare and Mecca to the followers of Mohamet." Two Birmingham manufacturing firms have subscribed $5000 each to his permonent memerial fund.

VICTORY FOR ACTORS PREDICTED BY COHAN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Settlement of the actors' strike within ten days on terms which appeared on their face to be a victory for the Actors' Equity Association, was predicted tonight by George M. Cohan at a meeting of the recently organied Actors' Fidelity Association.

Mr. Cohan announced the Producing Managers' Protective Association had offered a contract with an arbitration clause providing that in cases of dispute the actor "may be represented before the board by any association." The chief point of contention in the strike had been refusal of the managers to recognize the Actors' Equity Association.

SAD FOR DRY FOLKS.

Federal Attorney Calls Whisky Gift with Water Illegal.

United States District Attorney O'Connor last night telegraphed to Federal investigators at San Diego that, in his opinion, the practice of giving whisky away with soft drinks in the southern city is in violation of the war-time Prohibition Act.

Press dispatches from San Diego state the soft-drink emporiums have enjoyed enormous popularity since the bartenders got generous and began "giving away" real liquor with every 25-cent drink of sparkling water and other allied thirst-killers. The number of persons thirsty enough to pay a quarter for a drink of water—with faith in the subsequent generosity of the bartender—is said to be quite notable.

In regard to assertions at San Diego that Federal authorities are unable to stop the practice, because of technicalities, Mr. O'Connor said last night that he is of the opposite opinion.

OUR RIGHT TO SOLICIT TEUTON TRADE QUERIED

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

BERLIN, Aug. 29.—Four conservative members of the National Assembly today asked the government whether it was aware that Americans had been entering Germany soliciting trade, whereas Germans were to be excluded from the United States until after ratification of the peace treaty.

The interpellation set forth that while the United States officially was not vising passports for entry into Germany, it nevertheless was finding ways to facilitate the passing of Americans through Scandinavian states.

To Acquire Curly Hair In a Single Night

Hair tortured with the hot curling iron is bound to become dry, harsh and brittle, as so many know from sad experience. It's far more sensible to use plain liquid silmerine, which can do no harm and which produces a curliness much prettier and more natural in appearance. This has the peculiar property of drying in the most beautiful waves and crosses imaginable. It is also a fine dressing for the hair, preserving its texture and health, keeping it delightfully soft and glossy. A few ounces from the druggist will last for weeks, so it is not at all expensive.

Liquid silmerine is not sticky or greasy and it won't stain or streak hair or scalp. A convenient way to use it is to pour a little into a saucer and then with a clean tooth brush apply evenly to the hair from root to tip. If this is done before retiring the added glory to one's "crowning glory" will be quite in evidence in the morning. The hair will be nice and fluffy when combed out.

job, in getting a start at taking, will be to map county, dividing it into districts, so that each some 2000 to 2500 popu. He expects the map on final chart is to be will soon come from Washalong with a lot of specific which he is now waiting. and Washington between managed to get a satisworking map, there will be working force to organize. Dodson will soon open headquarters. He will examine applicants for jobs as enumerators and office assistants. The ultimate appointments will probably rest with him and will be made from an eligible list prepared by short quizzes and reviewed at Washington. The object is merely to learn if the applicants for pobs are qualified by education and intelligence to do the work.

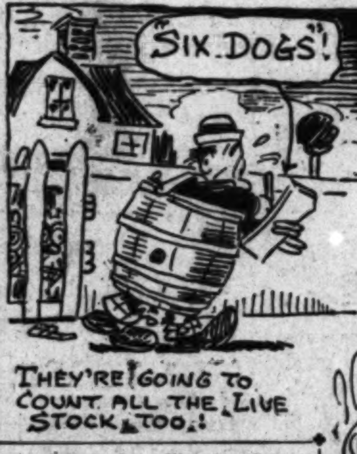
Necessary interpreters will also be chosen and office organization established for collecting and forwarding enumerators' schedules.

The whole outfit will be instructed and trained, and everything must be in readiness to start work full tilt New Year.

WHAT ENUMERATOR DOES.

Most of the jobs the census-taking will create are those of enumerators. These are the people who get out and hoof it around, buttonholing uncounted citizens, spying out on the inhabitants of pig pens and cow corrals, and interviewing bank presidents about their businesses.

These destroyers of sole-leather will almost all be paid according to their industry and success—on a basis of so much per name, factory, farm and corral.



THEY'RE GOING TO COUNT ALL THE LIVE STOCK, TOO!

An interpreter will get not more than $5 per day.

But enumerhtors are to be paid according to one of three scales, depending on circumstances. These scales are:

(1.) From 2 to 4 cents per name. 20 to 30 cents per industrial establishment counted, 20 to 30 cents for each farm, 20 to 50 cents for each irrigation or drainage project, and 10 cents for a barn or inclosure containing live stock and not on a farm.

(2.) From $1 to $2 per day flat rate in addition to 1 to 3 cents for each name turned in and 15 to 20 cents for each farm or industrial plant counted.

(3.) In difficult district, from $3 to $6 per day for eight hours of work.

NO LAZY MAN'S JOB.

This enumerator business will not be a job for any son of rest. In thirty days each counter in an ordinary district with something more than 2000 inhabitants will have to average some sixty-six people a day, or about one person every eight minutes allowing eight hours to a working day. As these people not only have to be found, but also have to be asked some nineteen questions each, and the answers have to be recorded, it is seen the enumerator will be rather a busy person.

Then there are the factories, farms, mines, quarries and a lot of other things to be enumerated. Not a small job, for one month.

The census, in fact, is divided into five grand heads under which the count will be made. They are. Population, agriculture, manufacturing, forestry and forest products, mines and quarries. Statistics of all these in Los Angeles county—as in every part of the country—must be gathered complete within thirty days.

Of each individual and each farm, factory or mine counted, certain definite information must be recorded. In the case of business enterprises, the questions to be answered are a dozen or more. The quizzing will be even more voluminous in the case of individual inhabitants.

LIST OF QUESTIONS.

Here are the things your Uncle Samuel wants to know about you personally, and will ask you to tell:

Name, age, place of abode, relation to the head of the family, color, sex, conjugal condition, place of birth, place of parents' birth, nationality, or mother tongue, nationality or mother tongue of your parents, number of years you have been in the United States, citizenship, occupation, whether you are employer or employee, whether you are engaged in agriculture, what schooling you have had, whether you are literate, tenure of your home and incumbrance on it.

In addition, the enumerators must keep record of the name and address of each blind, deaf or dumb person.

ADVANCE ESTIMATES.

Mr. Dodson is getting advance estimates on the population of various regions of the county, for the purpose of districting it. He has written to all the chambers of commerce in this region, asking for statements as to inhabitants and industries.

The working map of his district Supervisor Dodson must make in duplicate, showing every enumerator's district, his name and the designation of each district by appropriate letters and figures. When these maps are approved by the director of the census one set is retained at Washington and one set returned to Los Angeles for the working map by which the population count will be made.

However, when the counting is done, Mr. Dodson is going to know a whole lot less about the population of Los Angeles county than many other people, such as compilers of directories. Because the census is made fake proof and the supervisor of the count is about the one person least likely to know results before they are published at Washington.

By law, compilation of the results of the count throughout the nation must be completed at Washington and published before June 30, 1922, the end of the census period. But the population of all States and the large cities will be published by July or August, next year.

NO COLLUSION.

In advance of official publication, the count will be hedged about with greatest secrecy.

The supervisor of the count here, as elsewhere, will merely collect and turn in enumerators' schedules and will never know the totals.

Every census employee will be under oath and in danger of a heavy penalty in case he divulges any information he may secure through census inquiries.

Any individual, committee or organization that undertakes to interfere with or advise any census employee will be liable, also, to a heavy penalty.

The census officials at Washington cannot change any schedules, and must give the exact totals, revealed by final compilation, thus making collusion impossible.

Supervisor Dodson will be paid $1500 for the job, and in addition thereto, $1 for every 1000 names or major portion per 1000 names reported in his district. He will also be allowed actual traveling expenses, when away from Los Angeles, and an allowance of $4 per day in lieu of subsistence. He will be allowed to name also a large number of clerks and office assistants and it will be the duty of the office force to collect the schedules from the enumerators and properly mark, arrange and forward to Washington. Every enumerator must turn in his schedules daily.

COUNT BY MACHINERY.

When the reports are received at Washington they will be sorted, tabulated and totaled by city, county, Congressional district and State boundaries. Much of this will be handled by mechanical devices made by the government itself. In the last census, $500,000 was paid in royalties alone for devices of this kind. These machines will have to handle several hundred million population cards alone, to say nothing of 200,000,000 cards for farm statistics.

Supervisor Dodson, when he sends in his last schedule, cannot possibly know the total count for the city or the county. He will have neither the time nor the machinery to add up the totals of the enumerators, lists and even if he knew, he would face a heavy fine and something worse were he to divulge or permit to be divulged, any information gained by his count.

At Washington all schedules are to be carefully preserved. If after the figures are announced there is complaint, the figures are to be carefully compared with the schedules and verified, but neither the schedules can be changed at Washington nor totals counted in the district where the count is made. Officials assert that in this way the secrets of the census are protected and the rivalry of communities is impartially but effectively controlled.

OVER HUNDRED MILLION.

Since July 1 preparations have been under way for the nose counting of the population of Continental United States and all outside possessions. It is estimated by the best census experts that there will be shown a total population of from 113,000,000 to 115,000,000 souls in the total area over which the flag of the United States floats.

There are 400 census districts in the United States. By law, they conform as nearly as possible to the limits of the Congressional districts.

CHEER UP AND PRODUCE!

Los Angeles has passed successfully through the strike period, and all its industries are functioning normally again.

Now is the time for every one to forget the past with its strife and turmoil and go to work. Production is the thing that is going to reduce the high cost of living; it was lack of production that forced prices to their present levels and normal production must be re-established before normal prices will be possible. There is no place in Los Angeles under present conditions for drones, whether in tweeds or overalls. There is work at hand for every available unit of man power in the community; the slacker who consumes and does not produce must be regarded as a public nuisance. Let us have less sermonizing and more hustling.

Every public enterprise should give the signal, "Full speed ahead." There is something for every one to do and it is high time that every one was doing it. Irrespective of Senatorial action, the war is industrially ended. A de facto peace has been established between this country and all its former military foes; the attempt of the radical labor unionists to wipe Los Angeles off the map has resulted in ignominious failure; and now is the time to strike while the iron of productiveness is hot.

Opportunity is fairly forcing our gates; an era of prosperity has dawned greater than all those which have gone before. All past records of growth and prosperity will be broken. Buckle to, and get your share of it. You have heard the old-timer talk about the days when the corner of Seventh and Broadway was traded for a broncho and two blankets. That was only fifty years ago. Fifty years hence men will talk of wasted opportunities at the end of the war equally as great. Now is the time to expand, to buy something, to build something, to make something that somebody else wants. It matters little what.

NOW IS THE TIME TO INVITE PEOPLE to come here from other less-favored sections of the country; for there are more opportunities than men; to invite them to take part in the industrial development of the Pacific Coast area and to reap

MRS. H. G. BRAINERD DEAD.

Mrs. H. G. Brainerd, wife of Dr. H. G. Brainerd, passed away at her home at 1661 Orange street night before last, after an illness of more than three years. For the past year her condition has been considered critical, and her suffering has been intense. Mrs. Brainerd, who has been a resident of Los Angeles for the past thirty-two years, was born in Boston, Mass., in 1856. In 1887 she married Dr. Brainerd in Chicago, and that year came to Los Angeles with her husband, making this city her residence since that time.

For many years Mrs. Brainerd has been a prominent figure in club and social circles. She was a charter member of the Ruskin Art Club, and a member of the Friday Morning Club. Throughout her long residence in this city she has been active in women's church work of the First Congregational Church, and she has been a constant, but quiet, contributor to charitable causes.

She leaves a husband, Dr. H. G. Brainerd; two sons, Henry Howard Brainerd, and Fred Lindley Brainerd, and a cousin, Miss Hannah Brainerd. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the chapel of the First Congregational Church. Dr. Carl Patton will officiate, assisted by Dr. Hugh K. Walker. Burial will take place at Rosedale Cemetery.

JAPANESE MILLIONS TO BRING SEA TRADE HERE.

Great Oriental Bankers and Tokio's Hetty Green Backing Syndicate to Develop This Harbor.

Development of the possibilities of Los Angeles Harbor on a gigantic scale, that means millions in business and a scientific exploitation of the trade resources of the Southwest, will be begun soon by a Japanese syndicate that has the backing of one of the wealthiest bankers of the Mikado's empire and of the Hetty Green of Japan, that is being fostered by the Nipponese government and has the services of a notable corps of Oriental and western scientists. As the opening wedge for the operations of this syndicate of importers and exporters, a huge warehouse will soon be built at Los Angeles Harbor by the Union Trading Company of 105 East First street.

This organization proposes to vastly extend American trade with Japan and Latin America and to make this harbor the importing and exporting center for those fields of commerce. It is said to mean that much present business handled through other ports, especially those of the Atlantic seaboard, will be transferred to Los Angeles and that this community will get the full and direct benefit of a vast trade yet undeveloped.

The syndicate is composed of Japanese capitalists and is headed by H. Fukuoka, a doctor of sciences, who has been educated in America for the direct purpose of developing reciprocal interests between the United States and Japan, and is a master of arts of the University of Southern California. He is the son of one of Japan's wealthiest bankers, the head of large banking interests at Tokio.

An associate is K. Mukaeda, a doctor of agriculture of the University of Tokio, a bachelor of laws, former student at the University of Southern California and now a practicing attorney of this city. His father was one of the heads of the Imperial Board of Trade in Japan. On the latters death, the widow assumed control of his silk factories and thereby became one of the first "new women" in her country. Her interests amount to millions of yen and she is now sometimes called the "Hetty Green of Japan."

The syndicate has secured the services, also, of A. de Julio, a doctor of chemistry brought from Italy by the Aosti interests. He will assume charge of the chemical and research work of the syndicate.

Maurice Carasso, who specialized in economics and agriculture in American colleges, is also affiliated with the syndicate. A force of Americans is on the staff and will travel all over California and beyond, buying products for export.

MORE TO COME.

General Manager Fukuoka states the new warehouse at the harbor will precede other activities that will run into vast sums to be expended in developing ocean shipping here. The warehouse will have a capacity of about 1800 cubuc feet.

The exports will include optical instruments made in America, fibers, electrical accessories, motion-picture implements of all kinds, automobiles, agricultural implements and machinery, seeds, dried foodstuffs, motorcycles, typewriters, telephone implements, canned food, nautical instruments, surveying and mining implements, minerals and various farm products not accessible in Japan or Latin America.

The imports will be sulphur, camphor, matches, fishing nets, shrimps, fish and other Nipponese and Latin-American products.

The directors say Japan is keenly alive to the need of implements that will produce 100 per cent. efficiency in tilling the soil, and literally millions of dollars will be spent by Japanese on the farm machinery alone. The bulk of this will be shipped via Los Angeles, according to plans of this syndicate. They state, also, that there is a great demand for optical goods, telephone supplies, electrical accessories, motors, motion-picture implements and other articles for rural and metropolitan centers of the Nipponese empire.

Joseph M. Beamish, American sales manager, engaged under long contract, states the syndicate will bring a business of millions of dollars into this country from Japan and Central America each year. He adds that activities of the syndicate will prove a revelation by showing that Japanese capital will flow into the United States, through Los Angeles, in contradiction to the general belief that Japan is taking money out of this country.

Dr. H. Fukuoka.

Pursuing its usual policy of paternalism, the Japanese imperial government has approved of the movement to make Los Angeles an important center for exportation to Japan and for importation of oriental and Latin-American goods.

While most of the capital is to come from Tokio and is being handled by banks controlled by the elder Fukuoka, it is known that a number of Japanese residents of America have also invested in the enterprise.

CITIZENS' STAND ON STRIKE IS PRAISED.

OSBORNE WIRES HE WILL PUT CITIZENS' RESOLUTIONS BEFORE PRESIDENT.

A telegram was received yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce from Congressman Osborne expressing his pleasure because of the action of Los Angeles citizens in upholding the President and Director General of railroads in their efforts to settle the strike here. Congressman Osborne has presented personally to the administration reports of the action of the community relative to the strike.

His message said: "Am greatly pleased with your wire informing me that twenty-three commercial organizations yesterday afternoon unanimously went on record upholding the President and Director General of railroads in effort to settle strike and that steam railroad men would return to work this morning. Know personally that President has been most earnest in his efforts to settle strike and avert great commercial disaster and increase in cost of food and other necessities of living. Am informing President contents of your wire."

ON HABEAS CORPUS.

Deputy, Charged With Shooting of Switchman, Out of Jail.

Mayer Smuckler, special deputy constable, charged with shooting I. R. Day, a striking switchman, at Sixth and Alameda streets, on the night of the 21st inst., was released from the County Jail under a petition writ of habeas corpus yesterday. The petition for the writ was presented to Judge Taft by Jerry Giesler, counsel for Mr. Smuckler, and the court granted the petition, continuing the case until September 8, to await the action of the grand jury which is investigating the riot.

Mr. Smuckler was accompanied to court by his brother, Elijah Smuckler, recently discharged from the navy. Mayer Smuckler was taken from his home at night on three occasions. The first time was when Day was shot. The second time occurred when his condition was reported serious, and the third time when he died. In each instance the bail was increased. He is now under $5000 bail, the security being the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company.

PARK CONCERTS.

Rosendo Urchurtu, who has been blind since childhood, will give solos on the rosendolin, a one-stringed instrument, on the mandolin, the steel guitar, the clarinet, and the piano, at Westlake and Echo parks today and tomorrow. In addition he will give whistling solos, and sing in Spanish, Italian, and French. Doris Perkins, 7 years old, the youngest professional saxophonist in California, will appear on the programme with Mr. Urchurtu. Miss Perkins and Mr. Urchurtu will appear at Echo Park Sunday afternoon and evening, and at Westlake for the two concerts of Labor Day. Sidney Miller's Jazz Band will give concerts at Westlake Park Sunday, and will play twice at Echo Park on Monday.

HONOLULU STEAMERS AGAIN IN SERVICE.

According to an announcement received by D. F. Robertson, Hibernian Building, the Matson Navigation Company's steamship Wilhelmina, 13,000 tons, and the steamship Maui and the steamship Matsonia, 17,000 tons, have been released by the United States Navy, which, during the war, have been used in carrying troops to and from Europe. These three splendid passenger steamers will be immediately remodeled and fitted, putting them in better condition than heretofore, for the Hawaiian trade.

The Wilhelmina will sail from San Francisco for Honolulu about the end of October, and the Maui and Matsonia in November. The Manoa, now operating between San Francisco and Honolulu, will continue in service. These four vessels will afford weekly passenger service between San Francisco and Honolulu.

VENICE GROCERS' MECCA.

Venice will be the Mecca tomorrow of a veritable host of food purveyors and their friends who will there enjoy an all-day round of diversions. The occasion will be the annual picnic of the Retail Grocers' Association, the members of which expect an attendance of fully 25,000. The "Race Thru the Clouds" grounds will be the rallying place and there will be displayed tons and tons of merchandise representing the products of Southern California. Luncheon, special vaudeville acts, concerts by the Venice Band, playing in the famous Fish Pond, sports with many valuable prizes, and distribution of samples of various foods will be some of the attractions.

On the lagoon just outside the picnic grounds the Venice Bathing Girls will stage a canoe football match with the grocers' quintet of beauties, which promises to be a sensational and amusing affair. In addition there will be concerts by the Venice of America Band, both afternoon and evening, a $1000 carnival at the dance pavilion, swimming events at the rear of the plunge, and a magnificent fireworks display at night.

FOR JOINT OWNERSHIP.

Robert Butcher, who, as well as his wife, Anna M. Butcher, were recently denied decrees of divorce, filed suit yesterday to declare property on Freeman street community property. It was bought after their marriage, the complaint states, the money having been earned by both. The title is said to be in the name of Mrs. Butcher. Mr. Butcher says he never made his wife a gift of the property. Mrs. Butcher is a sister of the late Carry A. Nation, of saloon-smashing fame.

but there are 435 of the latter, and so there must be consolidation. This is all done in the larger cities. In New York, one ward is also a Congressional district. In all New York there are but five census districts. In Chicago there are but two. In Los Angeles county there are two Congressional districts, but for the purpose of the census these are consolidated into one census district. In all of the United States there is no place where a county is divided into more than one census district.

DENIES SHE SOUGHT DEEDS WITH THREAT.

HUSBAND SAYS SHE AVERRED SHE'D INVOKE MANN ACT IF HE DIDN'T SIGN.

Mrs. Nettie V. Preston filed an answer to the suit of her husband, Pyman Preston, yesterday, denying that she threatened him criminally, if he did not sign over deeds to property. She admits she asked her husband for the deeds which were signed over to her brother, Charles Thomas, and subsequently transferred to herself, but the most valuable piece of property, she declares, never stood in her husband's name. She asks that it be declared her separate property.

Mr. Preston declared in his suit to set aside the deeds on the ground of threats, menace and fraud, that while on a hunting trip in the north, his wife came with a party of friends and threatened him with the Mann Act if he did not deed the property to her brother. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas are named as defendants in the husband's suit.

WAS ENGINEER HERE.

W. H. Anderson, Formerly of Utilities Board, Dies in New York.

A message received at the office of the Board of Public Utilities yesterday from New York City announced the death of W. H. Anderson in that city on the 28th inst., and stated that the funeral would occur yesterday.

Mr. Anderson came to Los Angeles several years ago from service with the New York Public Service Commission. He was appointed assistant engineer by the Los Angeles Board of Public Utilities and served in this capacity for three and a half years, being in charge of motor bus and railway work. Last March he resigned to go to New York to enter business with his father. He was about 35 years of age, and his death was caused by a complication of diseases following an attack of influenza. He leaves a widow.

QUITS STREET WORK.

Holder of Former Contract for Sweeping Retires Machines.

W. E. Baxter, who held the contract for street sweeping that expired August 21, has refused to accept an extension of the contract at the former rate of 10½ cents per 1000 square yards and has withdrawn his machines from the service. He asked that the rate be made 13½ cents per 1000 square yards.

The Board of Public Works will formally notify the City Council tomorrow morning that it has made other arrangements for street cleaning, pending the execution of a contract in the regular manner. Hand sweeping and the use of street flushers is the method now employed.

The award of a new contract is held up during a thirty-day demonstration of the Vaughn street sweeper, which, its owners says will save the city a large sum of money, if employed.

Always the New Displaces the Old

—It is the eternal story of progress—the new displacing the old.

—New ideals—new achievements—new geniuses appear—the old recede into the twilight of memory.

The world reveres age and cherishes its idols of bygone days. And so those masters of a past era, entrenched in fame by the traditions of a generation, continue to hold an honored place in the musical world.

But today there are three new names which blazon forth upon the horizon of the musical world—they are the illustrious names of

Rachmaninoff, Ornstein and Levitzki

SERGEI RACHMANINOFF—

The amazing Russian pianist-composer, who has literally taken his American audiences "by storm" and who has already made his conquest of Europe, has been lauded by the New York Mail music critic as "the greatest musician in the world today." The New York Evening Post called him "Beethoven at his best," and other critics throughout the country have called him one of the immortals of his art.

LEO ORNSTEIN—

Won his right to world fame in a single recital, when he left his audience gasping with the almost revolutionary daring of his musical interpretations. When he appeared before great audiences in Paris and London, it is said that the effect upon his listeners was dynamic. He played upon their emotions with such power that some were almost hysterical.

LEVITZKI—

Has created one of the greatest sensations and drawn some of the largest audiences of any pianist that has come to America in years. The critics of New York were a unit in lavishing praise upon him, and predicting for him an exalted place among the pianists of all time.

All three of these supremely great pianists of TODAY record their interpretations

EXCLUSIVELY FOR THE AMPICO

—they have NEVER made records for any other make of instruments whatsoever, and on no other instrument can their reproductions be heard.

These three master pianists, as well as

Leopold Godowsky, Hambourg, Busoni, Buhlig, Goodson, and ALL of the World's Greatest Pianists May be Heard on the

so perfectly that the keenest critic cannot tell when the Ampico is playing or when the living artist is playing. This fact has been repeatedly demonstrated when direct comparisons have been held in public between the KNABE AMPICO and famous virtuosi. Come in and hear the Knabe Ampico's faithful reproductions of the hand playing of the greatest living pianists.

PUBLIC RECITALS DAILY

The Ampico may be secured in the KNABE—"World's Best Piano"—in the artistic HAINES BROS. PIANO, and in the sweet-toned FRANKLIN. Prices, $775 to $3300. Terms.

ON THE HIP.
Under this prohibition business the measly tailors are doing a bit of profiteering by cutting down the size of a man's hip pockets. In these times a quart-sized pocket is practically unknown.

THE GETAWAY.
It is said that the Kaiser is not officially detained in Holland and he could get out if he wanted to. He might come out disguised as a pickled herring without exciting suspicion, anyhow.

A REGULAR PRINCE.
The British Crown Prince seems to be a nice, clean, wholesome boy and shows that his mother knows how to bring 'em up. There isn't any snobbishness in the royal family, although most folks think that would be its headquarters.

UNWELCOME GUESTS.
Is the freedom of the city always to be extended to alien agitators who come here for the purpose of encouraging strikes and provoking discord between industrial workers and their employers? They can afford to pay $10 a day at the best hotels because their dupes and the public are paying the bills, but does the city have to stand for it?

WORKING OVERTIME.
We should insist on an eight-hour day for agitators and a half holiday for Saturdays. Why do they persist in working their jaws after hours and on Sundays? They have been calling nasty names when an ordinary toiler would hire out for a nine or ten-hour day while they themselves would wag their tongues long after the whistle blew. Such inconsistency is apt to start people to thinking and the moment people begin to think the agitator is likely to lose his job entirely.

GOING DOWN!
Despite strikes, boycotts and Senate committees, the cost of living has passed the peak of high prices and is on the way down. From Chicago comes the report that the price of hogs has dropped $5 a hundred and that beef and mutton are on the decline. The first to reduce the cost of living in Los Angeles is the lowly but patriotic hen. The supply of fresh eggs is holding out later in the season than at any other time for the last five years and the result is to be seen in a drop of seven cents a dozen in the price of eggs below the September level of last year. Garden produce is also cheaper, notwithstanding the combinations and machinations of the Japanese vegetable men. Perhaps the time is again returning when the price of three square meals will not be above that of an acre of improved real estate.

FOR FAIR PACKING.
If other occupants of the California bench emulate the action of Justice Davis of Fresno, who is doubling up fines for violation of the recently-enacted fruit pack law, there will be small potatoes and berries on the top of packing boxes and fewer truck farmers riding in Packards. The new law provides that only fruit or vegetables of one size may be placed in the same receptacle when offered for sale.

Justice Davis has been conducting a campaign against the truck gardeners who hide the little ones under the big ones in boxes of fruit and vegetables, thus deceiving the buyer and piling up profits. After fining K. Myomura, a Japanese, $30 for this trick he declared: Every time you come into this court and are convicted of this charge your fine will be doubled."

When the housewife exchanges $2, which ought to buy 200 cents' worth of food, for a box of what appears to her to be wholesome pears and when she arrives home and finds that below the top layer is a lot of wormy, small, uneatable fruit, she may be excused for thinking unsayable things.

VANDALISM.
Nine members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee have apparently resolved that committee into a vest pocket edition of a peace conference. They are taking testimony on various subjects covered by the text of the Versailles treaty and making amendments to the text which, if adopted by the Senate, would necessitate a new Peace Conference. Their attitude would be ludicrous but for the serious nature of the work they are performing. No one would care to laugh at the antics of a group of Bolshevists hacking the arms and legs off a noted piece of statuary or cutting sections out of a famous painting. The peace treaty drafted at Paris was, like all important national or international documents, the result of a series of compromises made in the interests of peace and harmony. President Wilson has frankly stated that the American commission would have written it differently. But it is a treaty which has already restored peace in France, Germany, Belgium, Italy, Poland and the Balkans. The United States Senate would only awaken the disgust of the world if it were to reject the treaty now through offering amendments that are known not to be acceptable to the majority of the other nations concerned. Perhaps it was a Senate of art critics that hacked the arms off the Venus de Milo.

NO CLASS WAR IN AMERICA.

BESIDES other things that it means, the persistent effort of the labor-union radicals to paralyze the industry of this country means, also, and essentially, the promotion of class rule and class hatred.

But this is a purpose that can never be accomplished in America. It is a thing alien to the soil. It is an Old World idea that was dumped into the sea with the tea chests in Boston Harbor. It was shot into rags at Lexington.

The pest of class rule and class hatred has been the curse of Europe and Asia for immemorial centuries. It is the sinister dragon with which Europe is at death grapples this very hour.

And, to set up that idea here in America now, as the Hearst newspapers would do and are trying to do—to substitute for liberty and equality the rule of one class over all others and an eternal class warfare—would mean that free-born America, in only the second century of its life, were to suddenly halt on its glorious pathway of progress and step backward into the darkness of 10,000 dead years.

It would mean that we were to surrender all that was won by the blood of the martyrs of the revolution, all that was won again in 1812, all that was won at Chateau-Thierry and in the Argonne, and all that has been won through the ceaseless vigil of the years since America was born.

It would mean that the corner-stone of the republic was builded of bricks without straw and laid in shifting sands.

It is a thing so monstrous to contemplate that no American can approach consideration of it without horror.

It is a thing that can no more be than it could be that a sane man would welcome cancer and leprosy in his blood as a substitute for health. If it could come it would mean that a man with the free use of his arms would hold them out to be shackled helplessly to his thighs.

It never can be. And yet the labor-union radicals will not cease to try to bring it about. This is exactly what they are endeavoring to do, no matter what they may say.

And the question now is—the only question—how long will members of labor unions who are true Americans at heart suffer themselves to be blinded and led astray?

II.

IF THE railways and other public utilities of the country were to be turned over to that small class of the country's workers which is included in the membership of labor unions it would mean only class rule.

Can the orators of the labor unions, who are preaching the class war, get away from that fact? Do they want to get away from it? Can the leaders of organized labor deny it?

There are two things fundamentally wrong with labor unions, both here and in Europe, as they are at present constituted.

One of these things is the sinister sophistry of the leaders, and the other is the blindness with which the leaders are followed by the rank and file of the unions.

If these two evils could be cured there would be nothing wrong about labor unions, whatever.

For there can be no question that any class and that all classes of workers have the right to organize and to associate themselves into bodies. Mechanics and every kind of craftsmen have the right to do this. Merchants have the right to do it; clerks, brokers, producers, consumers have the right. Investors, whether they be large or small, have that right.

Not only have all these classes the right to organize and to be associated, but it is very advisable, indeed, that they do so. It serves to systematize the day's work. It should make it easier, more profitable and far more pleasant to carry on the world's affairs that way, without friction, without malice, without hatred.

But the moment that any one of the classes so organized attempts to overrule all the other classes, then we have Caesar again grasping the scepter; Napoleon doffing his consul's cap to put on a crown.

It would mean the absolute destruction of our system of republican government and a return to something far worse than a monarchical system could possibly be.

III.

NOW, as to those who demand class rule in this country, the strike is at one and the same time their spokesman and their accuser.

Sinister and brutal beyond all words to express is this thing we call a strike. It is the voice of force.

We have seen its positively criminal methods here in our own city. For more than a week past the absolutely necessary traffic of the city and the community has been paralyzed. Railway trains have been lying dead in the yards and on the tracks of main lines. Untold values in produce have been destroyed ruthlessly and so needlessly as to make one gasp. Countless other workers, who planted seed in the springtime, watering it with the very sweat of the hard toil of their bodies through the summer, have seen the stupendous labor of a whole year fade and wither into dust before their very eyes.

And all because one class insisted upon ruling all other classes.

Is it a harsh thing to say, therefore, in the face of these indisputable facts, that the strike is essentially and fundamentally criminal in its nature?

It is a thing without any higher sense of morals than a profligate has. It has the same point of view that the Kaiser had, and that he doubtless has still. It is a thing that recognizes the rights of none, or the justice of anything.

IV.

IT WERE easy to picture what sort of a country America would be to live in if it were to be ruled by any one class.

A few years ago, before the world war absorbed universal attention, it was a favorite pastime in this country to draw pictures of this kind. Writers and orators were busy at it, and men could be found engaged in it at every country cross roads.

The favorite picture was the rule of that class supposed to represent what was hilariously called "predatory wealth."

Endless pictures were drawn of Rockefeller, Carnegie, Morgan and about four other men, with their entourages, families and retainers, ruling America. In the picture we saw not only workers and toilers, the farmer and the artisan, grovelling at the feet of the "moneyed class," but business men of large affairs also at their mercy.

The labor unions, and especially the professional leaders of labor unions, fairly frothed at the mouth when these pictures were drawn and held up for exhibition.

"Down with the moneyed class!" they cried. And it was a good cry, at that, if there was anything to it. Certainly down with the moneyed class if it attempted to rule all other classes.

But now the labor unions attempt to do the very thing that they accused the moneyed class of trying to do. The labor-union class boldly and without the slightest apology insists and demands that it rule over all other classes.

And when the other classes demurred and even objected, the unions forthwith proceeded to enforce their demands by going on strike and paralyzing the nerve system of the nation.

V.

IT IS inconceivable that any intelligent human being could fail to grasp the simple truth of this contention. And yet there appear to be many who either cannot do so or who wilfully will not.

The Times is just lately in receipt of a letter from a member of a labor union in proof of this. It was a temperate letter, indeed, and no fault could be found with it except that the writer is still apparently stupefied with the error of mind that permanent results can be achieved by means of strikes.

That a man appearing to be so intelligent in other ways can still be so stupid as to suppose that he can force his neighbor into compliance with his ideas by beating him over the head with a club—which is what a strike means—is difficult to understand.

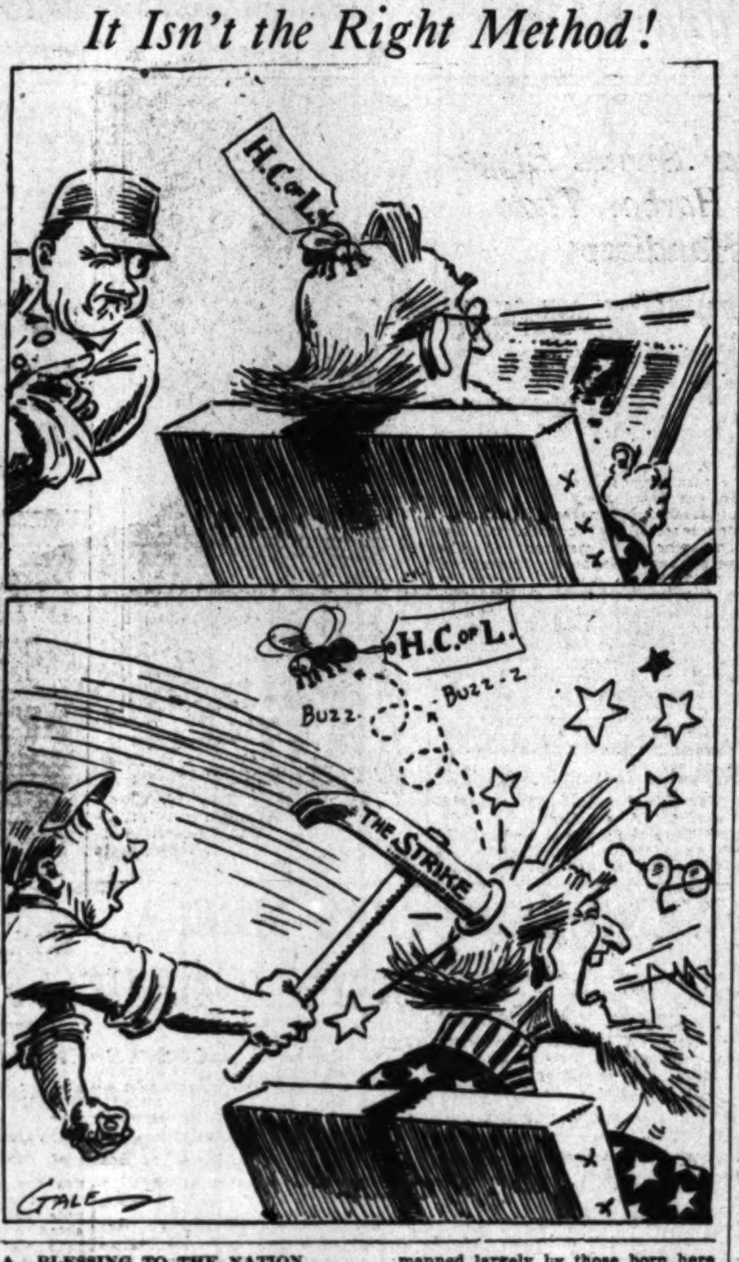
This probably well-meaning man would do well to get the strike idea out of his system and to induce his fellow members of the unions to get it out of their systems also.

For, as surely as the sun shines, the American people not only do not desire to be ruled by any one class, but it is something that they positively and absolutely will not submit themselves to.

It is inevitable that we have classes. Men are sure to prosper in differing degrees, some more than others; they are sure to differ in the degree of acquired intelligence; they will continue to fall into groups according to likes and dislikes and temperaments. And there can be no objection at all to their doing so; BUT ONE CLASS IS AS GOOD AS ANOTHER; and no one class can successfully set itself up to rule all other classes so long as America is America, no matter whether that class be composed of those who work with their hands or of those who work with their heads, or with both.

There can be no class rule in America. The preachers of class rule, class warfare and class hatred are the worst enemies of their country. They must go to the wall, whether they be strikers or spielers or newspapers.

It Isn't the Right Method!



A BLESSING TO THE NATION.
The complete failure of the recent strikes in Los Angeles, all of them—the telephone strike, the electrical strike, the shipyard strike, the Los Angeles Railway strike, the Pacific Electric Railway strike, the steam railroad strike—the complete failure, we say, of all these strikes in Los Angeles not only constitutes a tremendous asset for this city and Southern California, but is a blessing to the whole nation.

These strikes have cost millions of dollars—the heaviest proportionate losses falling upon the strikers and their families and other working people—but they are worth more than they cost; for they have fortified, buttressed and intensified the spirit of industrial freedom in Los Angeles until it is impregnable in a higher degree than ever before. Public opinion against labor-union domination has been unified until the word "striker" has become a term of reproach, while those who show their courage and their loyalty by sticking to their posts of duty and enabling public utilities to function are generally commended. The point of the term "scab" was blunted when the Federal government assembled several hundred so-called "strike-breakers" to insure the orderly movement of the trains on the steam railroads.

Los Angeles emerges from its industrial strife absolutely victorious and carrying not a single wound; while most of the radical agitators slipped discreetly out of town on the first trains running north and east. Not a single industry in Southern California is tied up by a strike. There is no strike on the electric lines now. The cars of the Los Angeles Railway Company are manned by loyal, well-paid and well-satisfied workmen who do not pay a dollar to any man for the right to earn a living. All the lines of the Pacific Electric Railway are operating on schedule time with crews that are well satisfied to work under open-shop conditions and for the wage which the company offers. The trains on the steam railroads are moving regularly to their destinations and the dream of "wiping Los Angeles off the map" has proved as illusory as that of the Hohenzollerns to build and control a railway from Berlin to Bagdad.

Few victories in the history of industry have been won so completely and with such slight losses. Free industry and the open shop have demonstrated clearly and vigorously their right to a place in the sun; Southern California has shown to the world that it is self-supporting, that it can get along without the aid of the rest of the country much more easily than the rest of the country can get along without the food products of Southern California.

It would be impossible for such a notable victory to be won here without strengthening the cause of industrial freedom elsewhere. The good effect of the repulse of the radical labor-union agitators has radiated, and other communities are beginning to understand that the dominion of the radical unionists can exist only so long as communities are content to live in voluntary servitude. The defeat of the extortionists here will serve as an object lesson to would-be extortionists elsewhere. The deterrent effect alone will be worth much more than the cost of the strikes through which Los Angeles has passed. The significance of the fact that not a single industry in the southern part of the State has been closed or unionized through strikes will not be lost upon employers of labor elsewhere.

But it must be remembered that these strikes have been won, not through arbitration, not through the intercession of commissions appointed by politicians, not through compromising and truckling to the strikers, but by the simple and direct course of keeping the doors of the industries open and replacing the strikers with the first competent workmen who applied.

The Times repeats, as these strikes fail, what it affirmed editorially in the beginning: "The industries of Southern California are manned largely by those born here or who came here to escape labor-union servitude elsewhere; all strikes called for the purpose of enforcing closed-shop conditions are bound to fail because the workmen themselves will not surrender their independence, will not consent to pay tribute to the walking delegates."

One result of the steam railroad strike has been to call the attention of the country at large to the soviet tendencies of the railway brotherhoods. They will respect their contracts only so long as it is to their pecuniary interest to do so; and they would not hesitate to make the most unjust and arbitrary use of their power in order to gain a political or pecuniary end. The strike on the Pacific Coast was not brought without the knowledge of their general officers, some of whom were here on the ground advising the men from the beginning. Vice-President Montgomery of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers encouraged the men to disregard the order of President Stone of that organization for them to return to work on August 25, taking the ground that they would imperil their lives by so doing; and it was not until Railroad Director Hines notified them that they must be at their posts or lose their jobs that Montgomery urged them to return to work.

The Times trusts that the government officials will remember these things when the union-labor leaders again attempt to coerce Congress and the Railroad Administration into granting exorbitant demands. The government has demonstrated that it is more powerful than any trade-union organization or combination of organizations; and Los Angeles has shown that there are not enough trade-unionists in the country to wipe it off the industrial map. And for these reasons the victory won for industrial freedom is a blessing to the nation.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

USELESS NOISE.

The prices still are soaring, but noise won't bring them down; not all our frenzied roaring will cheapen things in town. So let us get together, renouncing tactics vain, and ask our neighbors whether we can't do something sane. The prices have been speeded until our hearts are sore; and sanity is needed more now than e'er before. We must be sane and thoughtful if we would lay, it's clear, our vengeful hands and swatful upon the profiteer. No vain and vapid ranting, no anarchistic wheeze will bring the robbers panting upon their stallfed knees. We must be calm and sober, an earnest, quiet troop, or long before October we'll all be in the soup. While we remain excited the profiteers will say, "These delegates benighted are easy marks to flay. While they are raising thunder and standing things on end we have a chance to plunder that quiet wouldn't lend." The pirates profiteering will hear their passing knell, when we are done careering and raising merry Halifax. So let us go together and cease our riots vain and ask our neighbors whether we can't do something sane.

THE LANCER.

Oh, shades of romance. Oh, shades of Dare Devil Dick.

I have just received a circular from a university offering me a special course in cowmanship.

My idea of the nothingness below the depths is a correspondence course in cow punching.

I dare say they have a refined old lady from Boston who teaches you how to draw from the hip; and a gent with specs and a long white goatee who teaches you, through the medium of calculus and solid geometry, how to bulldog steers and shoot out the lights of a town.

Yet, I dunno . . .

I guess the cowboy of today could learn a good deal from a university professor. The cow man of today is a business man who sees to it that his vaqueros don't ride his horses to death or worry the good valuable flesh off his steers by movie-picture gymnastics.

This is tough on romance but good for beef. I imagine that romance didn't really amount to much after all. It must have been very uncomfortable to have to be prepared to dive under tables when the hero got started gunning of an evening.

The street-car strike was tough on shoe leather and tempers but it has not been without its value; it has shown to the labor unions (if anything can show them anything) that they are far from ready to take over the conduct and direction of the great commercial organizations of the world.

And that, of course, is the ultimate goal for which (whether they know it or not) they are headed.

The demand has already been registered for a seven-hour day with the unblushing announcement that this is to be followed by the six-hour day.

When the six-hour day is followed by the four-hour day, private capital will fold its tents and silently slip away.

Working men will be put either to the expedient of the inhabitants of Mark Twain's town who lived by taking in each other's washing, or the government must own everything.

It is not cheering to contemplate the concentration of all the complicated affairs of the world in the hands of the kind of men who made the unreasonable, selfish, boneheaded demands upon which this strike was based.

The average man who works with his hands is a cool, level-headed chap who thinks for himself and usually thinks correctly. But for some weird reason he turns over the conduct of his most vital affairs to professional agitators who live by and for making trouble.

The real difficulty underneath street-car difficulties is the system of fare-paying.

If you go to a fruit stand, you pay for what you get; but street cars are run on the system of paying the fruit stand man a nickel; then taking whatever you want.

Industrial difficulties will eventually drive the public into the enforced sanity of paying zone fares, as in Europe.

This has been resisted by residents of outlying districts who wildly protest on the ground that it would hold people back in the congested districts of the big cities instead of encouraging them to go to the suburbs.

Of course there is nothing in this contention. Rents and real estate values would inevitably readjust to meet the conditions so that the commuter would be compensated for his increased fare by lower rents.

Great national associations of lawyers have set themselves to the task of finding out whether the German atrocities were strictly legal or not. The committee has just reported on the execution of Edith Cavell to the effect that it was strictly legal. A majority of the committee reports that it was not so darn legal as it might have been.

Now this has been settled, they might take up the case of Judas, or Julius Caesar, or the jane who wanted King Solomon to carve up the disputed child.

This is of a piece with the mental cerebrations of some of the literary critics who have prowled into the past to find out whether Shylock got a square deal under the Venetian law or whether Hamlet was really a nut.

The fact is that Miss Cavell is dead; she was a willing sacrifice to her country; her killing was ruthless and unnecessary. No one is interested whether or not the Germans followed rule 978½ with correct rigidity or not.

If those lawyers have any spare time they might devote it to an investigation of American shysters who chase ambulances, instigate trick damage suits that have no basis in honor or right.

It appears that either our worthy President or the illustrious Mr. Balfour has committed a—well an inaccuracy.

Dr. Wilson says he knew nothing about the secret Shantung treaty until he got to Paris; Mr. Balfour says he told us all about it just as we came into the war.

On the whole, it would be more flattering to the sagacity of the United States government to believe that Dr. Wilson lied about it. As a loyal American I wish I could believe that the President lied about it rather than to believe that our State Department could have been so stupid and blind. But alas, I fear Dr. Wilson is an unshaken teller of the truth.

I can think of nothing, however, more mortifying than that our diplomats should have to confess their ignorance of diplomatic secrets so enormously important to our welfare.

REALIZES HER MISTAKE, NOW
Mrs. I. M. Lipscomb Relates
Her Experience.
Refused at First to Give Tanlac a Trial.
Wants to Tell Now How It Helped Her.

"It certainly is wonderful how the right medicine will get one to feeling right again," said Mrs. I. M. Lipscomb, residing at the St. Apartments at 237 South street, Los Angeles, in relating her experience with Tanlac, recently.

"Eight years ago," she continued, "I had an attack of acute indigestion that almost cost me my life, and from that time on, until I got Tanlac a year ago, I don't think I was ever free from pain in my stomach. No matter what I would eat, how little, or when, nor what medicine I took, that pain would remain. My trouble was said to be caused by an excess of acids in the stomach. Any way I could not get a night's sleep or rest on account of it, and as a result I became very nervous and just felt miserable all the time. I was living in San Antonio at the time and while I just tried everything, a little passing relief was all I could get and then my old cramping pains would come back as bad as ever. Then I began having pains in my hips, like sciatic rheumatism, and also severe pains in my sides and I simply felt weak, tired and worn-out all the time.

"It seemed like most everybody in San Antonio was talking about Tanlac, and lots of people were giving testimonials, telling how the medicine had helped them, but I was pretty skeptical or something, so I went on trying other things and also went on suffering. Well, it was not long after I came to Los Angeles which was over a year ago that I began taking Tanlac. I got to reading the testimonials in the papers here and I just made up my mind to see if the medicine would do my any good. Now I can see what a mistake I made by refusing to try it when I was in San Antonio. The first two or three doses stopped that cramping pain that I had spent many a dollar trying to get rid of, and by the time I had finished my first bottle I was greatly improved in every way. I can eat just anything I want and all I please and never have a sign of indigestion. My sleep at night is sound and restful and I always get up in the mornings feeling thoroughly refreshed. I have lost all that tired, weak feeling and have not felt so energetic in a long time. I am certainly glad I finally got Tanlac, for it has been a wonderful thing for me and I expect to keep a bottle at home all the time. It is a pleasure to recommend, for I know you just feel like you're obliged the people about a medicine that will help them."

VAST VOLUME OF TRADE PASSES THROUGH PORT.

Report for Fiscal Year Shows Bigger Business for Our Harbor Than Ever, Despite Handicaps.

The total revenues earned by the Los Angeles Harbor during the past fiscal year amounted to $90,141.32. This is shown in the report of Clarence H. Matson, harbor traffic manager, filed with the Board of Harbor Commissioners yesterday. The estimated tonnage passing through this port for the year is placed at 2,380,622 tons, with a valuation of $86,481,470.

The report shows revenues from wharfage amounting to $50,829; dockage, $19,569.59; storage, $14,190.59; miscellaneous, $5552.20. It shows 929 ships docked.

"The tonnage passing through the port of Los Angeles," says the report, "has continued to increase, and the year just closed gave a greater commerce to the port than ever before; but the value of the commerce was not quite up to that of last year.

"It must be remembered that in the first half of the fiscal year the government practically shut down on all building operations not directly connected with winning the war. This restricted our commerce, especially our lumber imports. For two months last fall the lumber movement fell below 30,000,000 feet a month, which is little more than half of a normal movement. After the armistice was signed, the high charter rates and the uncertainty of conditions prevented building operations being resumed for several months more, but the closing month of the fiscal year, June, saw the lumber imports go back up to more than 60,000,000 feet, and the outlook is good for a record-breaking movement in building material for the coming year."

OIL EXPORT JUMPS.

Regarding exports, the report says: "The most noticeable increase has been in oil, both fuel and refined. In 1915 our exports of fuel oil, including distillate, amounted to 2,559,164 barrels, with a value of $1,567,547, and our exports of refined oils were practically nothing. In the year just closed our total oil exports amounted to 7,757,063 barrels, with a value of $25,640,589 . . . The refined oil business of this port has all been built up within the last three years, and entire cargoes of gasoline were shipped out of Los Angeles for war uses."

Excerpts from the report show the following:

"Steamship service to the west coast of Mexico, Central America and South America has been materially increased in the last three or four months, and the trade of Los Angeles in Latin America is rapidly increasing. Three American lines and one Japanese line make this port a port of call en route to the South. A new company, known as the California and Mexican Steamship Company, organized by local interests, is preparing to establish an additional line to the west coast of Mexico, with Los Angeles as its home port."

The report goes extensively into the opportunities in the Latin-American and oriental trade lines, overlooked opportunities, new industries and import possibilities. It details the steps taken to make this a great cotton-handling port and the necessity for establishing adequate coaling facilities for vessels.

In discussing the new government survey, the report says:

A subject which does not necessarily fall within the province of your Bureau of Traffic and Operation, but which for several years has been looked after by this bureau, is that of work to be done by the United States government.

In the last rivers and harbors act passed by Congress is a provision inserted by Congressman Osborne, who is a member of the Rivers and Harbors Committee, providing for a general survey of Los Angeles Harbor with a view to its further improvement by the government. Col. Frederick B. Downing, United States District Engineer here, will probably call a public hearing in connection with this survey early in September.

FOR DEEPER CHANNEL.

There are two projects which the city should present for adoption by the government. First, the deepening of the main channel and turning basin to a depth of at least thirty-five feet at mean low tride, including that portion which will be part of the channel when it is widened to 1000 feet; and second, dredging in the west basin to make it available for navigation so that the city can develop commerce and industries on the city lands surrounding the west basin.

The need for the first of these projects has been emphasized in recent months by the fact that deep draft vessels have reported scraping on the bottom at one or two places, and I know of at least one occasion when a Standard Oil tank steamer did not take on a full cargo because it would draw more than thirty feet fully loaded.

The authorized depth of the main channel and turning basin under previous appropriations by Congress is thirty feet, but because of silting the depth over a considerable area is now twenty-nine feet, with two or three spots where it is twenty-eight feet. This silt must be removed at any rate, and the additional dredging while this is being done, to give a depth of thirty-five feet, will well warrant the expense.

Two years ago we made a plea for a channel thirty feet deep to be dredged the length of the west basin, in order to allow development in that locality. The War Department granted this request to the extent of recommending a channel leading to the dry dock site of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, but it refused to recommend a channel leading to the north end of the west basin, on the ground that such a channel is not a war necessity and no work except that aiding in the prosecution of the war should be undertaken during the war. The war is now over, and this objection is now removed. It is now a question of showing that the needs of commerce demand this improvement.

In connection with the deepening of the main channel, the government also should provide a bulkhead around the vicinity of Reservation Point, which the government owns. Approximately forty acres can be thus reclaimed for governmental uses, including immigration and quarantine stations.

FAVOR ANTI-STRIKE PLAN.

Word was received at the Chamber of Commerce last night that the Southern California Commercial Secretaries' Association, in session at Venice, yesterday enthusiastically indorsed the nation-wide plan of the Los Angeles chamber to prevent future strikes or walkouts, designed to paralyze public utilities necessary to the comfort of the public.

The plan was presented by A. S. Dudley, assistant secretary of the Los Angeles chamber, who read the letter that the Los Angeles organization is sending to the national Chamber of Commerce, the National Manufacturers' Association, other national organizations and thousands of chambers of commerce and civic organizations throughout the country.

Nearly every secretary attending the meeting represented a community seriously affected by the recent tie-up of the railroads and many of them expressed hearty approval of the proposed national movement, designed to insure freedom from future paralysis of public utilities.

Many expressions of approval reached the chamber yesterday on its announced plan of going before the country to crystallize sentiment against small minorities having power to dictate to vast majorities. Those favoring the plan most heartily were practically unanimous in their declaration that the very foundation of our democracy is insecure so long as a minority dictatorship is possible under the law.

Watt L. Moreland, president of the Chamber of Commerce, announced yesterday, that he would call at an early date, the committee of twenty-three named at the mass meeting at Trinity Auditorium Friday afternoon.

This committee consists of presidents of various civic and commercial organizations, and these have been selected as a permanent organization to formulate a definite, workable plan to avert future strikes of all descriptions in Los Angeles.

CHEER UP AND PRODUCE!

with us the material benefits of that development. Let them know that here labor is free. Let them know that here is a haven of refuge from the union-labor serfdom so prevalent in eastern industrial centers. We have the finest climate, the most fertile soil and the best working conditions in the whole country. Let us not keep our light hidden under a bushel; for the development of our industries is only beginning. There is ample room for men of brain, muscle and mechanical science; and each of these will make room for many more. Ask the women to come, too. There are a hundred industries where women can find honorable and profitable employment. The State industrial laws make sweatshop conditions impossible. Every woman capable of working at all is protected in the beginning by a minimum wage law. Let them know about our grand climate and free city. Send for them.

Now is a propitious time for the Chamber of Commerce and other commercial and industrial associations TO ADVERTISE FOR WORKERS IN THE EASTERN PRESS. Capital is available for new enterprises just as fast as the men and women can be secured to operate them. If fifty thousand workers should arrive here next week, the whole of them would be absorbed in industrial enterprises within sixty days. Never before was there so much capital available for industry. The word has gone forth the country over that here both capital and labor are free. Now is the time to advertise the superior working conditions of Southern California and get a new stream of workers headed this way. There will be steady employment at good wages for all who are ready and willing to deliver an honest day's work for an honest day's pay.

Take the tide of industry at the flood; for opportunities such as are offered in Los Angeles and Southern California today are to be found only in favored communities, and not oftener than once in a century. Now is the time to get out of the class of them that lament "it might have been," and join the hustlers.

COUNTY OFFICE PAYS WAY.

Recorder's Department Dividend-Maker and Shows Remarkable Growth.

BY JONATHAN S. DODGE,
Chairman of Board of Supervisors.

There is at least one office in the county that more than pays its way. This is the County Recorder's Office. Few people realize the importance of this office, but when we consider that the value of real estate in Los Angeles county, together with the improvements thereon, approximates more than $2,000,000 andthat the Recorder is charged with the duty of passing upon what may be legally recorded and of accurately recording and property indexing various documents affecting this property in any manner, then probably we will begin to realize the importance of this position. Sixty per cent. of all the records of this office have been written since 1907, and the other forty per cent. from the organization of the county up to that time.

During the past year there have been employed in the various divisions of this department, forty deputies and seventy copyists. I am safe in saying that this is one of the largest offices of its kind in the United States, it being no uncommon occurrence that the documents recorded and marginal releases, in a single day, run into millions of dollars.

GREAT AMOUNT OF WORK.

To show the great amount of work done by the employees it is only necessary to mention that during the last twelve months there were recorded 126,612 separate documents. In addition thereto the marriage licenses recorded numbered 7703; certified copies prepared, 1549; marginal releases entered, 5613.

A regular fee is charged by the office for the recording of documents, and during the past twelve months this has amounted to, in exact figures, $166,198.47. During the same period there was paid out for salaries and supplies in the conduct of the office a total of $123,042.93. It will thus be seen that the profit to Los Angeles county from this one office amounted to a nice little "nest egg" of $43,155.54.

The Recorder's office gives a correct index of the real estate transactions of the county, and the volume of work during the first six months of 1919 was twenty-two per cent. greater than for the corresponding period of 1918. As an index to the revival in the real estate business, it is important to note that the volume of work transacted during the month of June, 1919, was forty-six per cent. greater than during the month of June, 1918.

NEW DIVISION.

During the last few years the County Recorder has had charge of a new division known as the Land Registration Division, a very important part of the county business, and one that is destined to become larger each year. This division was adopted by an initiative measure enacted by the people that is known as the Torrens System. Since the adoption of this system the county has written 6620 certificates of title, which cover property valued at approximately $3,000,000.

The papers handled during the fiscal year 1917-18 numbered 2696, while those handled during the fiscal year 1918-19 numbered 3353, showing an increase of more than twenty-five per cent. in this division alone. During the fiscal year the receipts from this department amounted to $4,840.16, of which amount the county received for its services $2,585.70 and a balance of $2,254.46 was placed in an assurance fund for the purpose of meeting any loss that might occur in the failure of title. The number of certificates issued during the year numbered 1890. I might say in this connection that the cost to the county of operation of this department amounted to $7,023.50.

FEES INADEQUATE.

The fees that a registrar of land titles in California is authorized to collect are entirely inadequate to the service rendered, and are much smaller than those charged in other jurisdictions where a similar system is in operation. In Canada where the Torrens System is universal the registrar charges $5 for writing a certificate of title as compared to $1 here. For filing and entering a mortgage on the original certificate the charge is $1.50 while the charge here is 50 cents. Charges on other instruments are in proportion. If we were allowed to charge as elsewhere, it is my judgment that the land registration division of the Recorder's Department would show a large surplus, as much in proportion as the surplus produced in the ordinary work of the Recorder's office.

TEACH PSYCHOLOGY TO BUSINESS WOMEN.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERKELEY, Aug. 28.—Principles of physchology must be applied, replacing mechanical methods of teaching studies of a mechanical nature, such as shortland and typewriting, Elizabeth E. Adams of San Francisco told her classes in commercial instruction at the 1919 University of California summer session.

Both instructor and students in this course presented an unusual contrast to those usually seen in college class rooms. Miss Adams is an example of the university educated specialist, a graduate of Wellesley and holder of a master's degree from Columbia, who has succeeded in business. She is the assistant manager of a publishing house. The two score students of her class ranged in age from 21 to 47 years, in salaries from $1000 to $2400 a year, in education from no years in high school to five years in college and in professional experience from none to eighteen years.

NEW YORK MAY BOND HELP.

The proposition to bond servants, already in operation to a limited degree, cannot fail to be of service to the servant problem. Scoffers will doubtless suggest, first catch your servant, but whatever will dignify the calling will make it attractive.

Bonding will do more toward elevating servanthood than unlimited privileges and blackmail wages.

While it lasted, the part of servant was a glorious one for the crook to play. He could ply his trade as in no other way. It was open sesame for him to the most tempting quarries upon the most intimate terms. His employers were too eager about gaining a willing servitor to bother about finding out what kind of a human being he might be. Not until criminal records began to show how useful was domestic service to crooks did society at large realize that the many-sided servant problem had yet another and more acute angle.

Bonding will not solve the problem but it will help chase the thieves away.—[New York Evening Post.

FLEET SONG LEADER POPULAR WITH MEN.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

WITH THE PACIFIC FLEET, Aug. 28.—Charles Bowes, song-leader attached to the Pacific Fleet, holds that no man can have a wicked thought while he is singing.

That is why, he says, he believes his work in the navy is having not only musical, but moral results.

Mr. Bowes, who, in naval parlance, "ranks a salute"—or as a commissioned officer—receives it alike from officers and enlisted men, all of whom have a fondness for the "songs" he conducts as often as feasible.

Officers of the fleet have co-operated heartily in his work and the men in general have found a real pleasure in improving their musical knowledge, Mr. Bowes says, a real relaxation in singing.

Mr. Bowes has received from Washington orders detaching him from the fleet when it reaches San Francisco. He has been instructed to visit Mare Island and Goat Island and then to return to the national Capital by way of the Great Lakes Training Station, near Chicago.

"Pass, Officer."

Sentry (pacing his post in pouring rain beside a deep gully: Halt! who is there?"

Officer (hitting the high spots to avoid the mud:) "Officer of the camp."

Sentry: Advance to be recognized."

Officer (disgustedly:) Have you got a boat?"

Sentry: Pass, officer."—[American Legion Weekly.

Intelligent Girl.

A gob had been having a hard time explaining to his girl the meaning of all the "hash" marks and ratings of the navy. One day while they were in the subway, a cook, first class, walked into the car. The girl seized the opportunity to display her knowledge.

"I bet I know what he is," she remarked loudly, "he is the weather man."—[American Weekly.

FIRST GIRL IN WONDER VALLEY

Young Los Angeles Woman in Katmia, Alaska.

Writes of Strange Freaks of Volcanic Eruption.

Cooks Over Rainbow-Tinted Natural Steam Jets.

To Miss Dixie Dawson, of 1417 South Bonnie Brae street, this city, has come the distinction of being the first American girl to enter the extraordinary Katmia Valley, in Alaska according to a letter from her received yesterday by Mrs. R. F. Fletcher, her mother. When the Mt. Katmia volcano erupted in 1912 and covered thousands of square miles with ash and pumice, killing all vegetation and game and wiping out whole settlements, it was regarded as a great calamity. The eruption, however, uncovered a strange formation which is declared to be one of the wonders of the world. Already there is a movement on foot to develop tourist traffic to this extraordinary freak of nature.

Miss Dawson, who is with the Beaux-Arts Film Company of Los Angeles, writes from Kodiak:

"I would not have believed such a place existed had I not seen it. The whole place is one mass of steam pits, or fumeroles, from which the steam rises constantly. The holes are from five to seventy-five feet deep. The volcano ash around them has become moistened and the fumes from the steam have colored it every tint of the rainbow. We also could cook to perfection by the fumeroles—which is lucky, as there's not a tree left for miles around. You just cover your pork and beans with snow water, tie the lid on the pot and lower it into one of the steam holes. Forget it for five hours, or five days if you wish (for it won't burn or dry out) and then return and find your food cooked to the queen's taste.

"The 'smokes,' literally thousands of them, are clouds or jets of steam under various pressures, emitted from holes and huge caverns in the solidified volcanic clay. The entire valley, which is shaped like a clover leaf, seems to be gradually solidifying. In one of the three arms of the valley is a 'live' glacier of considerable size, at the foot of which is a beautiful cobalt-blue lake of hot water.

In another arm is situated the Falling Mountain, down whose face, inclined at an angle of about 50 deg. to the horizontal, roll continually huge boulders, broken off from the snow-capped peaks by variations of temperature. The valley possesses vast deposits of practically pure sulphur, arsenic and other chemical elements. Black sand is found in profusion in the beds of streams—a fact which should interest prospectors.

"We got a wonderful scenic picture and a travelogue also. I am now preparing for the photoplay, to be taken at Cordova. The people up here are hospitable and good hearted. On our trip we traveled over mountain after mountain of pumice stone, thrown hundreds of miles from the volcano. The fine pumice was hundreds of feet deep, and all that is left of the woods are a few tree tops, peeping out. Not a living animal or a green plant is to be seen."

MUNICIPAL WORKERS' LOYALTY COMMENDED.

STRIKE SERVICE PRAISED IN ENGINEER'S REPORT TO UTILITIES BOARD.

In presenting to the Board of Public Utilities the tenth annual report for that board, Chief Engineer Osborne has called attention to the considerable amount of extra service rendered by employees of the board, because of strike conditions, and without expectation of extra compensation.

Engineer Osborne says: "Present emergency conditions created by the strike have thrown a great amount of additional work upon this department, but the employees have responded in a most praiseworthy manner to meet the situation as to transportation needs caused by the emergency; a number of the employees working after hours in the evening, Saturday afternoon and Sundays and without hope of any reward, in order to meet the obligations of the department to the general public. In addition to this, they have voluntarily worked extra time, after taking care of the office work, and compiled this report for your honorable board. I take great pleasure in publicly commending the employees for their voluntary efforts and zeal in not only meeting the emergency now existing, but in being able to compile this annual report."

JAID IS MADE USELESS.

How civilization is invading the historic old spots in the wilds of Colorado is illustrated by the recent conversion of a calaboose at Eldorado into a cowshed. This calaboose is the same institution that once housed "Two-Gun Charlie" Nicholson and other trigger men of the gold mining days. No cause for use of the old jail has arisen in the mining camp for so long that one of the citizens leased it for a safe place to shelter his patient cow.

The reason for the jail's declining usefulness may be found, perhaps, in Lacer's Hote l, where the fixtures and great mirror which of old beamed on the patrons of the town's largest saloon, now adorns nothing more harmful than a dining-room.

The few old-timers who still live in the little mountain town recall the time when "Two-Gun Charlie" drank deep before that same bar and then ran amuck down the main street, declaring that he would kill every Mexican he saw, but shooting at every person, regardless of nationality. Thanks to his liquor, his aim was not the best, and only one man was struck by the bullets. Nicholson was confined in the jail until he was sober, and then released with instructions to leave the camp.—[Detroit News.

Husband: No I told him about yours, and he ordered me away for a rest.—[Boston Transcript.

Tobacco Hardens the Arteries, Overtaxes the Heart and Shortens Life

Says Dr. Connor, Who Suggests a Simple Test to Find if It is Hurting You. Can You Stand It?

New York.—Dr. Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, says: Hundreds of thousands of men who smoke and chew and who believe themselves healthy are suffering from progressive organic ailments. They would never have been afflicted had it not been for the use of tobacco and most of them would soon get well if they would only stop the use of tobacco.

The best-known habit-forming principle of tobacco is nicotine, but the most deadly and demoralizing is furfural. Both are deadly poison, which, when absorbed by the system slowly, but surely, affect the nerves, membranes, tissues, vital organs and vitality of the body.

The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances and the individual. In some it causes general debility, others catarrh of the throat, indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of will power, cowardice and fear, mental confusion, etc.; in others it causes heart disease, bronchial troubles, hardening of the arteries, palpitation of the heart, tuberculosis, blindness, cancer and the common affliction known as tobacco heart.

If you use tobacco in any form you easily detect its harmful effects by making the following simple tests: Read aloud a page from a book. If your voice becomes muffled, hoarse and indistinct and you must frequently clear your throat, the chances are that your throat is affected by catarrh and it may be the beginning of very serious catarrhal trouble. Next, in the morning, before taking your usual smoke, walk up three flights of stairs at a regular pace, then stop. If you find that you are out of breath, if your heart beat is forced, trembling or irregular, you may be the victim of a functional or organic heart trouble. If you feel that you must smoke or chew to quiet your nerves, you are a slave to the tobacco habit and are slowly poisoning yourself with the insidious deadly drugs, nicotine and furfural. In either case, you have just two alternatives—keep on with your self-poisoning process regardless of the dangers, and suffer the consequences, or rid yourself of the habit and escape the dangers.

You can overcome the craving and stop the tobacco habit in a very short time by using the following inexpensive formula: Go to any drug store and ask for Nicotol. Take one tablet after each meal and in a comparatively short time you will have no desire for tobacco. The craving will have left you. With the nicotine poisoning out of your system your general health will quickly improve.

Note: When asked about Nicotol, one of our leading druggists said: "Nicotol is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit. It is way ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol is sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists, including all the Sun, the Logan and the Chambers Drug Stores.—[Advertisement.

Miss Mary Allard Booth, Her Microscope and What It Shows Her.

FLY AND FLEA GIVE WOMAN FAME.

Only Photomicrographer of Her Sex, Known All Over the World, Who Pictures Spiders' Toes and Tips of Mosquito Wings, Gathers Specimens Here.

To have been handicapped in her youth so that it was necessary for her father to carry her from a carriage to a train ever at the age of 20 years, and then to emerge in triumph with excellent health—that has been the unusual experience of Miss Mary Allard Booth, now 75 years of age and internationally known for her misroscopic slides and her work in photomicrography. She is sojourning a few months at Los Angeles Harbor.

The value of Miss Booth's work to humanity is of such nature that the layman does not readily gain any conception of it. She makes photomicrographs of parasites that carry disease.

Miss Booth was the only person who photographed the bubonic plague fleas on the rats of San Francisco. She did that at the request of Surgeon-General Blue, who used the slide of the deadly parasite in all the lectures on the subject given throughout the country. But scarcely known is the distinguished part Miss Booth played in aiding the government and science to rid the country of the bubonic plague.

In many cases a disease may be indentified by the mosquito or other parasite that spreads it. For instance, a malaria-carrying mosquito is recognized by the wings as seen through a microscope.

Among thinking people the value of photomicrography is becoming more and more evident. It enables the science of bacteriology to expand to its fullest, and without these clear-out photographs of creatures so minute as sometimes not to be discerned by the naked eye, much advance in the treatment of germ diseases could not have been made.

EXPERT'S VIEW.

The attitude of those who would use these pictures is shown by the following statements made by Dr. Laura Bennett, assistant director of the school health department and a pioneer of hygiene in the schools of Los Angeles:

"I believe Miss Booth's photographs of disease-carrying insects and other parasites affecting human welfare should be in the science laboratory of every secondary school. We should have especially the magnified mouth-parts of the bloodsuckers and biters and portions of their structure, showing how they affect the human organism, projected upon the screen before the class.

"You known the eminent Pasteur said 'It is within the power of man to rid himself of every parasitic disease.' Later on, our own Prof. Irving Fisher said that fifteen years at least could be at once added to the average human lifetime by applying the science of preventing disease.

"Since the parasite is such an important cause of disease, we should make its study attractive, and while the student is studying the bug as an ugly pest, from a beautiful and artistically made picture, he can at the same time appreciate the bit of beauty of structure and cell arrangement that nature bestows upon even her lowliest creations.

"Several of the science teachers and physicians of my acquaintance, after examining Miss Booth's photomicrographs of insects, expressed a wish to possess a collection of those most useful in teaching the cause and mode of transmission of disease."

"COOTIE'S" PORTRAIT.

In Miss Booth's laboratory in her home at Springfield, Mass., to which she will soon return, are thousands of specimens arranged on microscopic slides. Among them is the "cootie," a new acquisition, of which she has photographed both the male and the female. The "cootie's" lawful name is pediculus vestimenti; but those who saw service overseas will always call it by a name of their own manufacture. From San Pedro she will take home with her a number of mosquito specimens, to exactly determine their species.

With the furtherance of science uppermost in her mind, Miss Booth has, in nearly forty years of photomicrographic work, delved deeply into study of the parasites and animals as well as those of human beings, and she has also given much attention to the parasites of vegetation, so that the fruits of her labor compose an encyclopedia for both the physician and the orchardist.

Incidentally, she discovers many interesting facts relating to the life of insects; as, for example, in photographing the tip of the tongue of a bumble bee and watching the insect, she found that the bee takes only one kind of pollen on a trip—it will pass by all the other kinds in its quest of the one sort it is after.

So familiar does this observant scientist become with these insects that she knows immediately when one is not well. Seeing a bumble bee acting queerly in her garden one day, she investigated and found it to have seventeen parasites.

Universities all over the country are using Miss Booth's microscopic slides and the Federal government has made many requests for her work.

STRANGE PHOTOGRAPHS.

Insect anatomy has been her principal study in her photomicrography but she has also photographed many other subjects, such as plant tissue. Among her photographs, all of which are a marvelous revelation and many of which are exceedingly beautiful, are the spine of the sea urchin, a cross-section of the poppy ovary, mold on canned fruit, piece of mahogany, pygidium of a flea, parasite of an ox, flea of a mouse and that of a hedgehog, a sheep tick, the flea of a woodchuck, bird lice, the parasite of the loon and that of the snowy owl, the tongue of a blowfly and that of a butterfly, the foot of a caterpillar and that of a spider, the gizzard of a cricket, the tip of the wing of a malarial mosquito, the eye of a spider and many others. One of the prettiest, according to Miss Booth, is the louse of a dog and one of the most interesting is the trichinae in a muscle of pork.

When Miss Booth started out to photograph the parasites of fowls, she discovered there were thirty different kinds and so threw up the task.

The magazine "Parasitology" made arrangements to print a series of Miss Booth's photographs but the war interfered. These will be printed, however, as soon as the magazine gets on its feet again.

A large part of Miss Booth's collection of microscopic slides, which she says are the parents of photomicrography, were made by her father. Following his death twenty-five years ago, the head of the Entomology Bureau at Washington, D. C., declared it to be a pity that such a collection should be lost. Thereupon, Miss Booth set out to complete it. This collection of microphotography of parasites she is rapidly preparing for the National Museum at Washington.

OTHER EXHIBITS.

In preparation for the National Museum Miss Booth also has a collection of photographs which will be added to the museum collection for illustration of the development of photography from the time of its initial step. A third group which Miss Booth is acquiring for the same use is a great collection of microscopic slides of diatoms. The National Museum has set aside a special room at Washington for microscopic studies of diatoms and will lodge in it one of the world's largest collections. Miss Booth says her donation will include some 1000 different slides and since there are often from fifty to 100 diatoms on one slide, this collection means an outlay of no small amount of the most painstaking labor. Its maker says it should represent the majority of known specimens, and when finished it will be the second largest and most valuable collection of diatoms in the world, according to the national curator.

Photomicrography necessarily calls for a broad knowledge of zoology and botany, as well as expert photography. Scientific perfection is the goal which must be striven for, and this requires long and arduous labor. Pictures such as Miss Booth takes are often made only after hours of patient adjusting and scrutinizing, until the perfect reproduction is the result. These photographs look as exquisitely done as pen and ink sketches, yet are actually much superior to drawings, for absolute truth is essential if these likenesses are to be of benefit to science, and any drawing might show prejudice or inaccuracy.

Miss Booth has been called upon to exhibit her work at London, Paris and Moscow. The first exhibition was in 1886 at the New Orleans Exposition, where she received a medal. At the St. Louis Exposition her display brought her the bronze medal. She was bed-ridden at the time of the Chicago World's Fair, but Mrs. Potter Palmer was so anxious to have Miss Booth exhibit something, that she sent a bound volume of "The Observer," a scientific magazine of which Miss Booth was editor at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, a large space was taken up by Miss Booth's photomicrographs, which were awarded the grand prize in the educational exhibit.

HIGH HONORS HERS.

Miss Booth is the only woman in the world doing photomicrographic work, although Mount Holyoke has installed the necessary equipment and Dr. Latham of Chicago has done a little. The disease is spreading, as Miss Booth put it. Miss Booth also holds the unique distinction of being the only American woman who is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Besides appearing in the American Who's Who and various other compilations, she is mentioned in "American Men of Science," a fact of which Miss Booth is justly proud. This talented, perservering woman is also a member of the Royal Microscopic Society of London, the Royal Photographic Society of Great Britain and, at the age of 75 years, she has been made a member of the New York Microscopical Society. Miss Booth is on the waiting list for membership in the Photomicrograph Society, of which no woman has ever yet been a member.

Miss Booth's first glimpse of this new world of photomicroscopy and miscroscopic slides was given her one Sunday when she was at the seashore. Miss Mary Halliday of Brooklyn came to talk to her where her father had left her on the sandy beach in her wheel chair. This good Samaritan, as Miss Booth terms her, explained certain botanical peculiarities of seaweed and and showed her how to mount it. Her interest was aroused and investigation and experiments followed, with the result that Miss Booth now ranks among the greatest scholars engaged in this work.

Suggestion must have had something to do with Miss Booth's success, for the family coat-of-arms bears this motto, "What I hope to accomplish, I shall accomplish." This scientist believes that heredity must have been a factor in her success, for her father was a mineralogist, leaving such a monumental collection of specimens to the Museum of Natural History in Springfield, that it required eight two-horse wagons to transport it. Her father died at the age of 84 and the doctor said his patient's work was the only thing that kept him alive. The preservative influence of science on the human mind, in which many believe, is aptly illustrated by this father and daughter.

WELL EQUIPPED.

In 1877 Miss Booth had her first microscope and long since she secured a complete working apparatus. In fact, her resources and equipment are so complete that it is possible for her to finish the process of mounting, photographing and developing all within an hour from the time she captured a specimen in her garden, from which she culls many of her subjects for study. She has also perfected herself in the art of preparing lantern slides by the use of the microscope and the camera.

Equipped with a license from the city of Springfield, Miss Booth is enabled to gather specimens in the park ponds. She says the stomachs of fishes are the most fertile places for securing a variety of diatoms, for this fish bring them from various localitites, both high and low, especially from the sea's bottom, which is very productive of fine specimens. C. P. Titus, vice-president of the New York Microscopical Society, to whom Miss Booth sent some diatomaceous earth from San Pedro, pronounced it "most wonderful." Diatomaceous earth from the Redondo bluffs has been sent all over the world, and is famous among diatom collectors as a rare hunting ground for specimens. One definition for diatoms, as given by Miss Booth, is the angels' collar-buttons.

Three seasons, at wide intervals, have seen this noted woman at San Pedro, where she has taken many photographs of the shipping especially.

"For eleven successive summers," Miss Booth said, "I went to a place on Long Island, but it could not compare with San Pedro, with all the shipping and fishing carried on with such great activity."

Miss Booth literally lives for work. Her attitude is well described by her words that "every new discovery is a new revelation of God." Prof. William Kirkham of Yale has said that Miss Booth is really much ahead of her time.

The Right School for Your Boy's Impressionistic Age

Located on LA BREA AVE. between WILSHIRE and PICO—LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

RIGHTLY has it been called "the big school for little boys."

Big in the way it helps little boys into right ideals, habits and knowledge. Big—because its methods have grown it to large proportions.

A "Page-trained" little fellow is a potential element in the success of tomorrow's world. And this is a very important matter in the light of the new reconstructive ideas now in action. The world of yesterday has been thrown in the discard.

Already the largest school of its kind in America, the Page Military Academy has increased its accommodations to take ample care of the increased attendance coming.

This is because parents are pleased—thoroughly satisfied—and tell their friends of the progress their sons make at Page.

—When we get a boy from a new town it is but a short time before a whole colony from the same community are enjoying the advantages of Page Military Academy.

Your boy at "Page" receives a physical, mental and moral training — in proper proportions. Our aim is to make manly boys.

Below Are Some School Features Which Should Be Considered:

KIND OF SCHOOL—If your son is of grammar school age he should be with boys of his own age and not in a high school.

SCHOOL SPIRIT—Page Military Academy is thoroughly democratic; snobs are unknown. The lazy boy becomes ambitious, a desire to be helpful pervades the air. The boys are well bred. An afflicted old lady once said: "This is the only place where I do not dread to meet boys. Never once by the slightest look has a single one of your boys showed that he noticed my lameness."

THE FACULTY—Only one other school for boys pays the high salaries which will command such men as comprise our teaching force. The commandant for the coming year is Capt. G. M. Hodge, a U. S. Army officer and assistant commandant at Culver Military Academy last year.

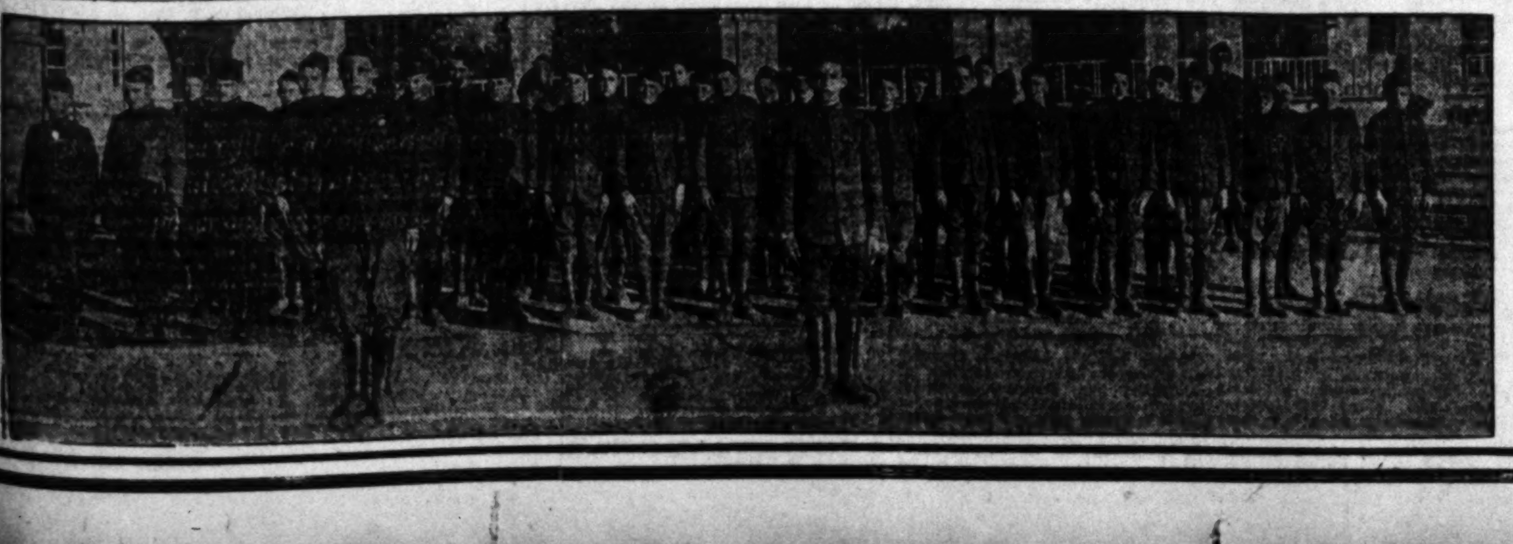
CLASS OF PUPILS—In any school of the better class the pupils come from good families. Doubtless a larger percentage of boys at Page come from long distances to attend school than to any of the other schools for young boys. Such boys invariably belong to the best families in their respective neighborhoods. In a few cases families have removed to Los Angeles from long distances that they might be near their young son while at Page, and some mothers have brought their boys six thousand miles to receive this training and have returned home, leaving the boys in our care.

CARE OF HEALTH—Page Military Academy has had a remarkable record along this line. We did not lose a day of school on account of influenza last year. Read about this fully in our catalogue.

RELIGIOUS INFLUENCE—The school is non-sectarian. While the majority of the cadets are Protestants, there are many Catholics and Christian Scientists and some Latter-Day Saints. They attend the churches of their parents' choice. The school is distinctly Christian in spirit.

FIRE PROTECTION—The buildings are of semi-fireprof construction, and are the only private school buildings in Southern California not built of wood. They were planned with special reference to safety in case of fire.

Send for our catalogue and learn all about this school and why it has become the largest of its kind in America. Address ROBERT A. GIBBS, Headmaster, Page Military Academy, R. F. D. No. 7, Box 952, Los Angeles, Cal., or phone 74216.



HARD JOB TO GET A DRINK.

No Blind Pigs, Few Bootlegs Here, Say Police.

Most of "Street Stock" Comes from Beach Towns.

Federal Raids are Expected Within Few Days.

Los Angeles is a hard place to get a drink of anything stronger than 2.75 per cent. beer. If you don't believe it call at Central Police Station any morning at 7 o'clock and watch the head jailor turn out the persons arrested during the night for intoxication. The average is three "plain drunks" every twenty-four hours.

Police Sergeant Gifford, head of the Metropolitan Squad, yesterday, declared the town pure. "Hard liquor can be purchased in this city," he said, "but there are no public blind pigs. This contention is proved by the fact that very few intoxicated persons are being picked up on the streets by the patrolmen. The only liquor dealers in the city now are persons who have a large supply of hard liquor and are peddling it on the streets, railway depots, hotel lobbies and similar public places. Most of the persons who have whisky and other high-proof liquors are saving their supply for themselves and are not attempting to sell any of it. My men have searched this city from one end to the other and have only been able to find one or two persons dealing in hard liquors."

According to the police who have been working on blind pigs a large amount of the whisky purchased by persons living in this city is obtained in the beach towns and then carried into the city. Two of the beach cities are now under investigation by the Federal authorities and it is expected that several blind pigs will be raided within a few days. At one of the beach towns according to the local police whisky at $15 a pint can be purchased from waiters.

Although whisky and other hard liquors are hard to find in Los Angeles 2.75 per cent. beer, according to Sergeant Gifford, is flowing like water. The local police are making no attempt to stop the sale of the war-time beer except to confine the dealers to the Gandier ordinance and to force them to sell a "meal" with the first glass of beer and to close up their places of business at just 9 p. m. The police department, working on the theory that a bone-dry ordinance will soon be passed by the City Council, are now allowing the liquor dealers to sell a thin sandwich as a meal. The two slices of bread with a thick pasty layer in the middle are never eaten according to some of the city's best known beer drinkers and are served again and again by the dealers. One man, according to a number of the best known elbow artists, once ate one of the "meals" and had to be taken to the Receiving Hospital at once. He is said to have recovered.

Sergeant Gifford stated yesterday that very few violations of the Gandier ordinance have been reported to the police since the liquor dealers have had the law made clear to them. A number of arrests followed the first few days of the enforcement of the law but since that time no new arrests have been made. Every day a number of officers are detailed to make a complete round of every beer-selling establishment in the city and check up on the beer being sold. The dealers are warned from time to time to comply with every detail of the Gandier ordinance.

If the bone-dry law is now passed within a short time the police, Chief Home says, will make no attempt to enforce the nation-wide dry law in so far as 2.75 per cent. beer is concerned but will leave the matter up to the Federal government. The liquor dealers in the city will be forced to live up to the Gandier ordinance and that is all until such time as the Federal government takes action in the matter.

TO HONOR VISITOR.

Life Insurance Men will Banquet National President.

Lovell Swisher, Jr., president of the Los Angeles Life Underwriters' Association, states that Jonathan K. Voshell, president of the National Association, will arrive in Los Angeles next week. A banquet will be tendered Mr. Voshelle Friday evening at 6 o'clock, and all life insurance men, whether members of the Life Underwriters' Association or not, are invited to meet the national president.

Although two ex-presidents of the Life Underwriters, namely John Newton Russell, manager of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, and Frank E. McMullen, manager of the Massachusetts Mutual, reside in Los Angeles, it is several years since the local life fraternity has been favored with an official visit from a president of the National Association.

NEXT MEET HERE.

County Weighers of State to Convene Here Year Hence.

A telegram received yesterday by Chairman Dodge of the Board of Supervisors from Charles M. Fuller, who is attending the State conference of Weights and Measures at Oakland, announces that the next convention for the State will be held in Los Angeles, August 30, 1920. Mr. Fuller is regarded as one of the leading authorities in the State on the question of weights and measures, and it is felt that the convention is to be held in this city as a compliment to his office. The convention will be attended by delegates from every county in this State.

MAJ. BLAKE A CALLER.

A distinguished caller on the Board of Supervisors yesterday was an old-time friend of Chairman Dodge, Maj. P. J. Blake of the United States Army, who has just returned from service in France. Maj. Blake had charge as paymaster of the dispensing of funds for 17,000 enlisted men and 4000 officers. He has been retired on half pay and intends to pass the remainder of his days in retirement on his ranch recently purchased near Sunland.

IS WAR-TIME BEER REALLY BEER AT ALL?

MATTER OF OPINION IF ITS SALE VIOLATES GANDIER LAW, JUDGES OPINE.

Until the Supreme Court decides if 2.75 per cent. beer is intoxicating, the Superior Courts may be called upon to pass on individual cases of selling that war-time beverage in alleged violation of the Gandier ordinance.

Judge Weller, who handed down the first decision, questioned the right to regulate or control the sale of a nonintoxicating beverage which is not in its nature detrimental to the public health, peace or safety.

This decision, it seems, was misunderstood by the public. Judge Works followed with a decision in which he held that the Gandier ordinance is effective up to the intoxicating point, and a license must be procured under it before sales can be made.

The question is what is the intoxicating point. The Federal law applies to intoxicants. The Gandier ordinance applies to alcoholic liquor.

Judge Works said yesterday:

"It is a matter of individual judgment until a higher court decides the question. The decisions of the Superior Court judges are not binding on each other. Any man who desires may make an application for an order restraining the Chief of Police from arresting him, and it then comes before a judge who decides the question for himself."

Judge Weller said:

"I took the position that a city cannot take the stand that the Gandier ordinance was superseded by the national prohibition act, so far as to prevent it from issuing a license under the Gandier ordinance, and then take the position that it was going to prosecute holders of permits from the Police Commission who were entitled to licenses and who had offered to pay the license fee for selling without having a license. The complaint that came before me stated they were selling a nonintoxicating beverage.

"If it was in fact intoxicating, and that is an issue to be determined, then they were violating the national prohibition act. It was necessary at the trial to determine whether 2.75 per cent. beer is intoxicating."

Judge Valentine, in another case, held views similar to Judge Works.

TWO ANGELENOS WILL HELP EUROPE RESUME.

NAMED FOR INTERNATIONAL TRADE CONFERENCE AT ATLANTIC CITY.

Two Los Angeles men yesterday received appointments as members of the general committee to have in charge the arrangements for the International Trade Conference to be held under the auspices of the United States Chamber of Commerce at Atlantic City, the week of September 29.

They are Watt L. Moreland, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and John B. Miller of the Southern California Edison Company. Robert F. Dollar of the steamship company bearing his name, of San Francisco, is a third member from the Coast. This committee also will look after details for a trip planned for the members of the foreign missions to commercial and industrial centers of the United States.

The object of the conference is to give the Allied countries an opportunity through their accredited missions of outlining to American business men what can be done to best bring about, at the earliest possible time and with the least strain on their present resources, their full rehabilitation.

WAR PROHIBITION IS BASIS OF NEW CASES.

RESTAURATEUR IS ARRESTED AND SANTA BARBARA MAN FORMALLY ACCUSED.

Judging from activities of agents of the Department of Justice, the war-time prohibition law is still functioning.

During the week a number of arrests have been made, and it is announced that there will be a general drive against the violators of the law from this time on.

Yesterday Hassen Dermisovitch, charged with selling a drink of whisky to a patron of his restaurant, was arrested and arraigned before United States Commissioner Long. He furnished $500 bail and his hearing was set for September 14.

A complaint was sworn to by Special Agent Turner of the Department of Justice, charging J. B. Muir of Santa Barbara with selling a flask of whisky to E. E. Wrede of that city.

No effort has been made to apply the war-time prohibition act to the sale of 2.75 per cent. beer, since the decision of Judge Bledsoe in the Bakersfield Brewing Company case, that the government must allege and prove that such beer is intoxicating.

NEW BUSINESS HOUSE GETS BROADWAY SITE.

WOMEN'S CLOTHING FIRM OF PROMINENCE ENTERS THE LOS ANGELES FIELD.

Announcement was made yesterday that the lease of the four-story building at 337-339 South Broadway has been bought by Leo Harris, secretary of the Sweet Sixteen Company, that operates a chain of retail clothing stores for women extending from New York to San Francisco. The building is now occupied by the New York Dresseteria, and it is stated that Mr. Harris paid for the lease a bonus of approximately $15,000, and also that he acquired the stock of the Dresseteria.

Mr. Harris stated that this stock of apparel will probably be speedily disposedof at a sacrifice and the store will be refitted at once preparatory to a reopening with new stock now being assembled by the Sweet Sixteen Company in New York.

DOUBLE LOSS IS SEEN BY "WETS."

Bone-Dry Ordinance Declared Absurd, Reckless.

Fix Special Election Cost at Fifty Thousand.

Would Let Well Enough Alone for Few Months.

Charles H. Crawford, who is directing the campaign against the proposed bone-dry ordinance which has been submitted to the Council by the Anti-Saloon League, has issued the following statement to the public and the city's legislative body:

"In face of the fact that the liquor problem was solved only twenty-two months ago by the people of Los Angeles when they adopted the so-called Gandier ordinance, it is inconceivable that our Council of nine members should arbitrarily usurp the rights of the voters and undo that which was settled by nearly 180,000 of them at the polls.

"It will be recalled that notwithstanding the fact that a majority of the members of the Council at that time were 'dry,' they refused to take upon themselves the burden of deciding the momentous question. They knew that there were two sides to the question, and the problem was of such grave proportions that it should be presented to the people for their solution—and the people accepted the task as their duty.

"There were several propositions on the ballot, one of them being for a 'bone-dry' city. All were voted down by overwhelming majorities with the exception of the Gandier ordinance. Never at any time has a majority of the people of Los Angeles voted to sustain a bone-dry law. Despite the fact, the anti-saloon forces now are endeavoring to coerce the Council into enacting a law that will close Los Angeles tighter than a drum, and incidentally place a restriction upon the people which the people do not want.

"As a result of the national war-time act, the city is restrained from permitting the sale of drinks containing the percentage of alcohol prescribed by the Gandier ordinance. Nothing but beer of 2.75 per cept. strength is sold. This must be prima facie evidence that the liquor situation is even better so far as the 'dry' element is concerned, than it was when the Gandier law was operating to its fullest extent.

"There is absolutely no occasion for hysteria over the present situation. Conditions do not warrant drastic action. The people do not want it. There is enough unrest without the city's legislative body dumping more oil onto the smoldering fire.

"On January 16 next the United States will be as dry as the Sahara Desert, and talk of a special election to decide a question which will be determined for all time within four and a half months is absurd. Such an election would cost the taxpayers no less than $50,000, an amount of some consequence at this critical period of reconstruction.

"Another fact that cannot be lightly brushed aside is the loss of revenue that would follow the enactment of a bone-dry ordinance. The hundred or more cafes, seventy-five wholesale houses, and the breweries now are paying into the city treasury in the neighborhood of $18,000 monthly. In four and a half months the city will receive approximately $80,000 from those engaged in the liquor business. That is a pretty penny to be recklessly thrown away by the Council, and I do not believe that a majority of that body will take such an unbusinesslike attitude at this time."

SHOE FOLK TO REVEL BY SEA TOMORROW.

OLCOVICH ATTACHES TO BE FIRM'S GUESTS AT SANTA MONICA CANYON.

E. Olcovich Company, wholesale and retail shoe dealers, operating five retail shoe stores in Los Angeles, will give an outing and picnic to the employees of their various stores on Labor Day, tomorrow. The spot chosen for the festivities is Santa Monica Canyon. Preparations have been made to feed and entertain 500 people as the families of all the employees have been invited. The day and evening will be given over to joy and jazz. Games and races will be indulged in, and bathing, dancing, baseball, tennis, foot races, and other sports are on the programme. Liberal prizes are offered by the management to winners of the various events. Boxing matches by semi-professionals for worth-while trophies will add zest to the entertainment features.

The day's pleasure will be rounded out with an old fashioned Spanish barbecue, with all the customary "hot stuff" trimmings. The object of the outing is to enable the employees of the Olcovich Co. stores to get better acquainted. The stores represented are Walker's Shoe Store, No. 1, 709 South Broadway; Walker's Shoe Store No. 2, 429 South Broadway; Main Street Shoe Market No. 1, 529 South Main street; Main Street Shoe Market No. 2, 303 South Main street; Western Shoe Company, 227 South Broadway; and E. Olcovich Company's wholesale department. The entire party will assemble at the store of the Western Shoe Company at 9 o'clock in the morning and be taken in automobiles to Santa Monica canyon. The employees and their families are looking forward with much pleasure to the event.

POLITICS.

THE WATCHMAN.

TREND OF POLITICAL THOUGHT AND ACTION.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

In the course of Gov. Stephens's recent sojourn in Southern California, for the purpose of officially welcoming the Pacific Fleet, he had opportunity for hobnobbing with many close personal and political friends, and he let it be distinctly understood that he has no intention of standing as a candidate for the United States Senatorship.

When Edwin A. Meserve, attorney of this city, with a State-wide acquaintance, recently announced his prospective candidacy it was coupled with the statement that this was contingent upon Gov. Stephens not being a candidate. In view of the Governor's attitude during his recent visit here, it may be expected that in due course he will make a formal announcement that he will not seek the Senatorship; and the natural sequence will be immediate activities on the part of friends of Meserve.

Southern California is entitled to a Senatorship; that is generally conceded, even in the San Francisco Bay districts, and Mr. Meserve hopes to be able to unite the various elements in the South that will send him to Washington, beating out Mayor Rolph of San Francisco, Congressman Kent and Senator Phelan, the northern candidates.

District Representation.

If the Mayor's idea of calling an election for a board of freeholders to form a new city charter gets far enough along for real action, the District Representation League proposes to make itself heard, and felt. It will insist that its principles be given a thorough consideration by the charter framers.

The league, which has permanent headquarters at 710 American Bank Building, with Frank E. Purcell as chairman and Fred Frank as secretary, will submit a charter provision for the election of Councilmen from districts—probably fifteen—with the president of the City Council to be elected at large. It will favor the borough system, with the president of each borough, the Mayor, the Controller and the president of the City Council to form a board of estimate and apportionment to take the place of the Finance Committee and also make the annual budget for the city. It will advocate the creation of the position of City Controller to take the functions of the present offices of City Auditor and City Treasurer.

Arrangements have been made by the District Representation League to hold a mass meeting soon, to be addressed by the Mayor and other city officials, to get their public expressions on the question of district representation. Plans are also formulating to send representatives of the league into all parts of the city to enlist the support of the various civic and improvement associations.

Establishing a Residence.

Councilman Ralph L. Criswell—erstwhile Socialist, but now registered as a Republican—has been spending his vacation at Catalina Island, cogitating over political plans and also plans for house-building. There's a close connection.

Mr. Criswell—who is a perennial candidate for something—has determined to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Ninth District. That he is not even a resident of the district doesn't bother him; he ran for office in this district before when he lived in the Tenth. He's just purchased property on West Avenue Fifty-five and proposes to erect a dwelling thereon and have a habitat in Highland Park. Randall's own bailiwick, and thus be prepared to actively begin a campaign for the Congressional nomination.

While there has been much favorable discussion of the possible candidacy of Jonathan S. Dodge, now County Supervisor, for a seat in Congress from the Ninth District, the latest reports are that he is not inclined to seriously consider such a move. Congressman Randall, it is natural to expect, will strive for re-election. Speaker Wright will also be a contestant for this honor, it is said.

Just now it looks as though the voters of the Ninth District will have the choice of three candidates—Randall, Criswell and Wright. The Socialists undoubtedly will also have a candidate, as they can no longer depend upon Mr. Criswell to support their propaganda of vagaries. There has been some discussion of the probable candidacy of Miss Mary Foy, but I believe that Miss Foy would perfer to wait the realignment of districts, in 1922, at which time it is possible two new districts will be created.

No Boodle-Bag This.

A well-known club woman and politician who is constantly in evidence around the corridors of the City Hall, and whose enormous silken hand-bag, always firmly clutched, has been viewed with more or less interest and suspicion, has been fully vindicated. It is no boodle-bag.

The other day this precious bag was dropped in the City Hall. A mere man picked it up and opened it, exposing the contents to excited spectators. There was revealed 96 cents in change, three peppermints, two sticks of chewing gum, four pen points, one hairpin, a two-cent stamp, one handkerchief, a couple of dog license tags, a chamois skin and a metal disk which turned out to be redeemable, not in liquid refreshments, but good only for a shampoo at a local hairdressing establishment. Interest in lobbyists' hand bags languishes at the City Hall.

"At Psychological Moment."

Gov. Stephens, during his recent visit to Los Angeles, conferred with various Senators and Assemblymen, and while here he made the statement that he is in favor of calling a special session of the State Legislature to ratify the woman suffrage amendment. The Governor stated, however, that he thinks California would gain nothing by a special session just at this time, but "at the psychological moment," when other States have acted, and the aid of this commonwealth is needed, the call should be issued, and prompt action taken by the State solons.

There has been more or less discussion of at least two other items being included in the legislation to be considered at the special session, but the Governor did not intimate that any other than the suffrage subject will be included in his call.

Many Feel the Uurge.

Voters of Los Angeles county needn't worry for fear of lack of candidates for District Attorney. Already there are indications of many lawyers feeling the urge. Among those who "are mentioned" are Attorneys Asa Keyes and Mike Shannon, of the present staff; Al Bartlett, Mr. Peabody, George Saunders, Charles Lyon, et al.

Rumor has it that supervisorial candidates will also be plentiful, and that Bert L. Farmer, now of the City Council, will be a candidate for nomination in the Fourth District, which Supervisor McClellan now serves.

WAR HEROES' ARCH.

Orange County's Service Men and Women to be Honored.

Orange County folks are going to show the country 'round that they are just as mindful of the valor and patriotism of their men and women who rendered active service here and overseas during the great war as the people of any other community. On Tuesday, September 9, they are going to lay the cornerstone of a fine memorial arch at Orange County Park, and the ceremony incident to the affair will, it is said, be an impressive one. Arrangements have been made to have Governor Stephens present some 2500 returned service men and women with suitable bronze medals and he will also lay the cornerstone.

About 20,000 people are expected to attend. The affair is being arranged by the Orange County War Service Recognition Association, and the details are being looked after by an executive committee consisting of R. L. Bisby, of Santa Ana, chairman; E. E. Jahraus, J. F. Ashlborn, E. E. French, Maj. E. J. Marks, F. E. Hallman, Mrs. A. J. Lawton and J. C. Wallace.

This Map Should Hang On Every Wall

It is the map of Europe as it looks since the surge of battle has subsided, since the nations of the world have gathered in conclave and arrived at what they hope will be a permanent peace.

The old picture of Europe which was stamped in the public mind in its days of school attendance, is a thing of the past. In its place there is a New Europe. The old picture must be eradicated and the new one given its place. That this may be accomplished get the map of the mother continent as it has been rearranged, pin it on the wall above your desk, or in a conspicuous place in the living room at home. Your eye will subconsciously run over it now and again until it is thoroughly fixed in your mind. Thus will you come to KNOW the results of the recent great conflict.

Y.M.C.A. TO AID SHIP WORKERS.

Newark Man Named Secretary for Harbor Work.

New San Pedro Building to be Opened Wednesday.

Social, Athletic, Educational Activities Many.

Appointment of Harley G. Preston, formerly of Newark, N. J., as executive secretary of the new Y.M.C.A. industrial unit at Los Angeles Harbor, was confirmed Thursday, according to an announcement issued by local Y.M.C.A. officials. The naming of a secretary to have charge of the educational and recreational programme to be promoted in behalf of shipyard workers of the city came at the same time that the second building in the San Pedro group was completed.

In conference with Mr. Preston and other Y.M.C.A. officials, Stanley Baker, industrial secretary for the Los Angeles area, has mapped out a programme of varied activities that will center in the educational and recreation buildings near the plants of the Los Angeles and Southwestern Shipbuilding plants. The new structure measures 80 by 90 feet and is two stories high.

It is equipped with an auditorium seating over 300 people, a social hall 40 by 50 feet, and a billard room 40 feet square. The auditorium will be used as a gymnasium as well as for entertainment purposes. Other accommodations include shower bathes, toilets, and ample outdoor space for sports of all kinds.

A baseball diamond adjoins the Y.M.C.A. site and it is expected that a series of athletic contests and games of different kinds will shortly be started under an athletic director of the local Y.M.C.A. In a space 50 by 100 feet next to the recreation building it is planned to operate a series of motion picture shows.

One of the principal features of the Y.M.C.A. work for shipbuilders at the harbor, Mr. Baker announces will be the night educational classes, which will be conducted in the school building for men in all branches of the industry. These schools will open next Wednesday. The subjects to be taught will include such work as moldloft, shipwright, blue print reading, drawing, welding and shfitting. The classes will be taught by foremen and superintendents of the two shipbuilding plants.

An Americanization programme also will be promoted under the direction of Lloyd Darsie, Americanization secretary of the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. The principal work in this field, it is said, will center about the classes in English-for-foreigners. A number of foreign-born workmen living in the vicinity of the shipbuilding plants have asked for classes in English, mathematics and even certain technical subjects and these, it is stated, will be supplied without cost to the students.

"The entire Y.M.C.A. unit at the harbor is open to all shipyard workers," said D. E. Luther, general secretary of the local association, yesterday. "There are no charges for any service or entertainment or game or educational classes, except, perhaps, a nominal fee to cover certain costs. The new Y.M.C.A. unit which has just been completed and is being opened to the public this week was built by the local national Y.M.C.A. at a cost of $24,000 with the expectation that it would be used by every workman who desires the kind of privileges it offers."

John Kendrick Bangs.

JOHN KENDRICK BANGS TO LECTURE TUESDAY.

NOTED AUTHOR WILL TALK TO SCOTTISH RITE MEMBERS AND THEIR FRIENDS.

Next Tuesday evening, John Kendrick Bangs, the noted author and lecturer, will speak at the Scottish Rite Cathedral, 929 South Hope street. His subject will be "America Abroad." The lecture will be attended by members of the Scottish Rite, their families and invited guests.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kendrick Bangs sailed for France last May 12 to study conditions in the devastated regions on behalf of the American Committee for Devastated France, of which organization Mr. Bangs is a director, and with which as chairman of the national workroom Mrs. Bangs has been connected for the past two years.

Mr. Bangs traversed the whole devastated area from Antwerp to the Aisne, concerning himself with the problems of reconstruction, but primarily with the more human side of the picture, the need of rehabilitation of the people themselves—the ruined peasantry, the sick, the returned refugee and the children.

Mrs. Bangs attached herself to the working forces of the American committee in the actual field of its operations, and lived in intimate personal touch with all its various phases, agricultural, educational, hospital, etc., with her mind alert for the subtler influences of the effort that run deeper than the eye can reach, especially in their bearing upon the welfare of the women and little children of the stricken lands.

Mr. and Mrs. Bangs have returned to America and will lecture throughout the country together, their lectures being supplementary to each other; Mr. Bangs upon the larger phases of the work and the American spirit abroad, and Mrs. Bangs upon the more intimate details of the work of relief. Their service is wholly volunteer and without compensation.

WHAT M. & M. STANDS FOR.

Declaring that the principles for which the organization stands are generally misunderstood and have been grossly misinterpreted, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, through Secretary F. J. Zeehandelaar, has issued the association's creed in leaflet and placard form, for distribution among all its members. It reads as follows:

We believe in liberty under the law, and in the responsibility of every individual, corporation and organization to the law.

We believe in the legal control of every abuse of privilege under the law by individual, corporation or organization.

We believe in a liberal wage for honest service, and oppose the exploitation of labor in every form.

We believe in the right of every man to work, and in his inalienable privilege to employ his labor without hindrance or coercion from any source; and this organization is pledged to the protection of every man in the exercise of this right.

We believe in the right of men to organize for mutual benefit and advancement, and in their right to collectively bargain with their employers.

We deny the justice or right of sypathetic strikes, the boycott or picketing.

We deny the justice or right of limitation of product by organized action, or of the reduction of the hours of labor below the scientific point of a fair cost of the product in competition.

We oppose the activities of the walking delegate or labor-union business agent in or around manufacturing plants or places of business.

We oppose the making of labor agreements, unless the signatories thereto are of reasonably equal responsibility, legally and financially.

We pledge this organization to the fair investigation of grievances presented by any worker, whether union or nonunion, and to use our influence toward a liberal adjustment of such differences.

INDORSE NATIONS' LEAGUE.

Clubs, Churches and Fraternal Orders Eager to Help Enforce Peace.

The League to Enforce Peace, California division, has received the following resolutions indorsing the League of Nations from the following clubs, churches, fraternal, and other associations in Los Angeles county, which is regarded as a fair index of the State-wide approval President Wilson's stand has met with in California:

GERMANY'S DEFICIT IN WHEAT 3,600,000 TONS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERLIN, July 22.—The German deficit in food, the difference between the amount produced in Germany and Germany's normal needs, amounts to 3,600,000 tons of wheat, one million tons of meat and one million tons of fats, says the Imperial Food Ministry.

Immediate payment for these necessary foodstuffs with inland resources is unthinkable, the Ministry asserts. Only a long term credits can help and the acceptance of such credits is only possible if Germany works, for only then can the creditors have confidence in paying ability of Germany.

Immediate decisive effect of the removal of the blockade on the German food market is not expected by the Ministry but rather a long slow continuation of improvement which already makes itself felt. It declares that control of export must remain until the average between import and export has been established.

Germany must make up its mind to do without coffee very largely in the future, says the Imperial Commissioner for colonial goods.

Authorities say Germany must sharply restrict her imports of chocolate because of the low value of the mark and must try to rely on her own chocolate, the first production of which is expected soon.

KEPT DRUGS IN BANK VAULT.

Although Tulsa banks rank with the most substantial institutions of their kind in the State and southwest, Tulsa police discovered some time ago that one bank was serving as shelter for one of the most notorious crooks in the country and that its safety deposit vault was a hiding place for contraband goods, the sale of which is prohibited.

The police were tracking a drug addict whom they suspected of selling cocaine. With help of the bank officials, they discovered that the man wanted was depositing his wares in a safety deposit box and conducting a big business with the bank as his headquarters. Now the drug addict is in the penitentiary and the thousand dollars' worth of "coke" is being retained as evidence.—[Tulsa, Ok., World.

LLOYD GEORGE'S IRISH STAND IS DISCUSSED.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

DUBLIN, July 28.—Appearance in various London papers of the announcement that Premier Lloyd George is considering an offer to Ireland of dominion home rule with county option has created much discussion in political circles in Dublin.

Sir Horace Plunkett's new Dominion League, while willing to arrange special terms for Ulster within an Irish Dominion, is very strongly opposed to any arrangement by which any part of Ireland would be altogether outside the new Irish Parliament, and Sir Horace believes any such plan would be unworkable.

Ulster Unionists on the other hand are violently opposed to county option or indeed to any option. The furthest they have gone is to agree to the total exclusion from an Irish Parliament of the six northeastern counties without the preliminary of a plebiscite.

Many Sinn Feiners declare that, if county option were extended to all Ireland a plebiscite taken on home rule, many of the would adhere to the republic or nothing and it.

LAST OF WALKER FILIBUSTERS DIES.

IN CIVIL WAR HAD WON HONORS AS A COMMANDER OF CONFEDERATE SOLDIERS.

Dr. Daniel Washington Vowles, sole survivor of the famous Walker filibuster expedition that conquered Nicaragua in 1856-57, died in Quincy the other day, on the ninety-fifth anniversary of his birth. Old Confederates in butternut and veterans in blue officiated at his burial.

A captain in that daring band which followed Walker in the foreign but gallant effort to hold and rule a populous nation, he lived through an epoch of daring deeds, perilous adventures and unparalleled privations that are without compare in American history. Conquer they did, but holding was another matter. Established in the capital of Nicaragua with the rifles of 4000 adventure loving, dare-devil, fighting American legionaries supporting his reign, recognized as a sovereign by President Franklin Pierce, Walker dreamed of conquering all Central America. Rebellion supported by the armies of Costa Rica and the millions of Commodore Vanderbilt drove Walker from his throne and set Capt. Vowles a fugitive.

In his flight and final escape to the United States he lived through more adventures than novelists ever conceived, escaped machete, musket and bayonet and the dread yellow fever that took toll of many of his comrades.

A SECOND LOST CAUSE.

Survivor of one lost cause, he plunged a few years later in a greater war, exchanged his shoulder straps for the insignia of a colonel and, in the end jilted by the Goddess of Chance, fought for another lost cause. He won glory and honors in the Confederacy, and before the war closed was appointed commissioner for the trial of military offenses against the Confederate government in Richmond. Leaders of the Confederacy were his intimates and comrades in the East. In the West he was the idol of the Missouri soldiery because of his deeds at Lexington.

Few surviving Confederates of "Pap" Price's army have ever forgotten Col. Vowles, the hero of Lexington. There on a summer's day in 1864, when Gen. Sterling Price with his Missourians besieged Col. Mulligan intrenched behind the brick walls of a college, the Federal hold on the buiding seemed too strong to be shaken off. Rifle balls glanced from brick walls, and naked breasts were no match for breastworks of stone.

THE "HERO OF LEXINGTON."

Col. Vowles saw what was needed. In the warehouses of Lexington were hundreds of bales of hemp, strong but inflammable. Near was the Missouri River, and in the lull of the battle he set many negro slaves to rolling the hemp bales to the water and, when water soaked, rolling them back up the hill and against the college walls and earth ramparts. Behind the bales Jo Shelby's men, Cockrell's legion and Gen. Harris's recruits from Northeast Missouri swarmed. They gained the walls, gained the college and Mulligan surrendered.

For this clever strategy Col. Vowles won his commission as colonel.

Leading Missourians in the campaigns of the Mississippi, Col. Vowles and his regiment failed to break the iron cordon that Grant placed around Vicksburg. He won the new laurels, but the beleaguered city fell. His promotion to commissioner in Richmond followed.

After the war Col. Vowles was a physician in Washington and held a government position. He came West seeking a more congenial climate and continued in medical practice until after he was 85 years old.—[St. Louis Republic.

WANT MORE LIBERAL ENGLISH SHOE RATION.

RESTRICTIONS ON AMERICAN GOODS FORCE BRITISHERS TO PAY EXCESSIVE PRICES.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, July 25.—The American Chamber of Commerce in London is pressing the British Board of Trade for an increase in the ration of shoes from the United States, which now remains limited to 25 per cent. of the 1913 imports.

The individual importers have telegraphed W. H. McElwaine, president of the National Association of Boot and Shoe Manufacturers at Boston, urging that action be taken at Washington to obtain the removal of restrictions in England, which were operating against American shoe manufacturers. The American chamber in London has supported their stand.

It has been pointed out to the Board of Trade that while the boot and shoe concession remains limited to 25 per cent. of 1913, import, practically all the other major trades are enjoying at least a 50 per cent. concession. Furthermore, it is asserted, the British manufacturer is unable to supply the domestic trade with anything like the quantity of shoes in demand. Because of this scarcity the consumer is being forced to pay a high price, which would be materially decreased by allowing increased imports.

NOTABLE HONORS TO COL. LEWIS

Gets Distinguished Service Cross for Prowess.

Los Angeles Men Led by Him in Famous Battles.

Solved the Mystery of Death of Lieut. Umsted.

Unusual honors won by Col. Evan E. Lewis, known to hundreds of Southern California men who were in replacement units which went to the Twenty-sixth Division, are revealed in War Department General Orders which have just reached the Soldiers' and Sailors' Replacement Bureau.

Many Los Angeles men served under Col. Lewis when the latter was major in the 102nd Infantry at Marcheville, and when he came back from the hospital and commanded this unit in the terrific action near Beaumont.

Col. Lewis, a regular army officer, was popular with local newspaper men who formed his acquaintance on the Mexicon border and at the time of the Vera Cruz expedition. Recently he was instrumental in obtaining reports which solved the mystery surrounding the death in action of First Lieut. Rolla P. Umsted, one of the most widely-known officers of the old California National Guard, and who won renown with the 16th Infantry. Lewis received his commission as colonel recently, and is now in the office of the Chief of Staff, Washington, D. C.

Leading the list under the government heading "Award of Distinguished Service Cross," is the following:

By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved July 9, 1918 (Bul. No. 43, W. D., 1918), the Distinguished Service Cross was awarded by the commanding general, American Expeditionary Forces, for extraordinary heroism in action in Europe to the following-named officers and enlisted men of the American Expeditionary Forces:

The citation in General Orders, No. 147, War Department, 1918, relating to Maj. Evan E. Lewis, is rescinded and the following substituted therefor:

Evan E. Lewis, major, 102nd Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Marcheville, France, September 26, 1918. Being second in command of the assaulting troops, he displayed great bravery and rare initiative. While under terrific artillery and machine-gun fire he reorganized scattered units, established and organized positions in depth, set up liaison from front to rear, and in hand-to-hand fighting personally led his men, inspiring in them a confidence and tenacity of purpose that were productive of success.

He is also awarded an oak-leaf cluster to be worn with the Distinguished Service Cross for the following act of extraordinary heroism in action near Beaumont, France, November 10, 1918: Commanding his regiment, he personally led the advance of his front line, under a heavy artillery and machine-gun fire, and gained the absolute confidence of his troops by his example of courage and coolness.

MOTHER LOVE EXISTS IN WOMAN TERRORIST.

CAPTURED RED GUARD WEEPS OVER SCRAPBOOK OF BABIES' PICTURES.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

KEM (Russian Lapland) July 5.—Among the uniformed Bolsheviki captured by the Allied troops on the Murmansk Railway front, where American railway troops operated for several months, was a woman, Olga Semenova Petomtzeva, now serving as a cook for a Canadian mess, who presented the strange contrast of an Amazon who cried over a baby's photograph.

Mrs. Petomtzeva, who is 22 years old, was taken prisoner by Canadian troops at Urosozero, when dressed in a Red Guard uniform, trousers and all, and with the Russian ammunition pouches strung over her breasts.

She said she had left Petrograd on April 4 to join her husband, who was a soldier in a Finnish regiment fighting the Allies on this front. For some time she led the life of a soldier, with her husband. The latter escaped at Urosozero.

Mrs. Petomtzeva broke down and cried, say Allied officers, when she was questioned about a scrapbook she carried, in which she had pasted pictures, cut from magazines, of many babies. She said her own baby had died and that she had no photograph of him, and that she was trying to find in the magazines a picture that resembled him.

THE WHITE HOUSE AN EXPENSIVE PLACE.

Just one hundred years ago President Monroe indulged in a little extravagance. He "blew himself" to a bathub. It cost $20, and for a long time thereafter was the only bathub in the White House.

The historic mansion has been pretty expensive from first to last. Up to date considerably more than three million dollars has been spent on it, including repairs and refurnishing.

Its cornerstone was laid by George Washington in a bare field October 1, 1792. Since then it has been twice rebuilt—after the British burned it and again during the Roosevlt administration. It was commonly called in early days the Great House, or the President's Palace.

Recently Mr. Tumulty again gave out the announcement that the White House would be closed to visitors for some time to come, "because of necessary repairs." It seems forever to be needing repairs and refurnishing, and for the latter purpose much more than one million dollars has been expended since the beginning.

The original cost of the building was $333,207. Its reconstruction after the British raid of 1814 involved an expenditure of $246,490, the house being gutted and its walls so far destroyed that the greater part of them had to be replaced above the first story with new brick and fresh cut stone.

Inevitably there will be a third rebuilding some day. Plans and a model of the White House as it ought to be, with wings added, have already been made. The wings are embraced by exterior colonnades. In the east wing is to be a great reception room; in the west wing the state dining room. On the second floor of each wing are to be five bedrooms. Thus the President will have about twenty bedrooms at his disposal, and will be enabled to offer a much freer hospitality. Conservatories in the rear will complete a magnificent quadrangle, and the whole effect will be very beautiful.

The cost of rebuilding the White House in this style will be in the neighborhood of two million dollars.—[Kansas City Sar.

HARD TO OBEY TWO MASTERS, HE QUITS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, July 25.—Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, head of the Department of Overseas Trade, has resigned his position, protesting that he has constantly been hung up by the hybrid political nature of the department.

The Department of Overseas Trade is a comparatively new project of the government having been created specially to provide neutral ground on which the Foreign Office and the Board of Trade might cooperate to further British trade interests. Responsibility to two masters is partly blamed for the difficulties Sir Arthur encountered.

Modernizing Daily Tasks Means Their Elimination in the PROGRESSIVE HOME

In line with progression comes the Housewife, who is ever alert to learn of the new and strength-saving devices employed in the household—and for this woman there is always something truly wonderful presenting itself, inspiring her to new interest and zeal in her endeavors to make her home what most people content themselves in believing exists only in ideals.

She has found that around each task where drudgery has lurked in the past that some happy influence is waiting to lift it high above such depressing atmosphere; that there are ideas, in a state of materialization, ready to step in and throttle cares and clear the air of cloudy worries, bringing rest and comfort and, best of all—happy hearts.

Every day that a home is without the appliances which relieve the Housewife of the heaviest strain of work, there is strength, time and mostly energy wasted. To the woman who thinks these things are only an added expense and fails to discount their real value, let the woman who knows tell her what it means to the enviroment of the real successful home.

How to Beautify a Summer Soiled Face

It's really a simple matter to renovate a face soiled by sun, winds or dirt. Ordinary mercolized wax, used like cold cream, will transform the worst old complexion into one of snowy whiteness and velvety softness. It literally peels off the outer veil of surface skin, but so gently, gradually, there's no discomfort. The wornout skin comes off, not in patches, but evenly, in tiny particles, leaving no evidence of the treatment. The younger, healthier under-skin forming the new complexion, is one of captivating loveliness. One ounce of mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, is enough to remove any tanned, reddened, pimpled, freckled or blotchy skin. Apply before retiring, washing it off mornings.—[Advertisement.

OPULENT BORAX LAND RETAINED.

Ten-Million-Dollar Company Wins Title in Court.

Beats Locators' Drive Upon Sixteen Rich Claims.

Court Holds Terms of Mine Laws Honestly Met.

In the action brought by the United States Borax Company against J. P. Hughes and others, to quiet title to sixteen borax mining claims in Inyo county, Judge Trippet yesterday handed down an opinion finding for the contentions of the corporation that it had complied with the mining laws in the exploitation and development of the claims involved in the suit.

The United States Borax Company, an English corporation, has immense holdings of borax in the vicinity of Death Valley. It is a $10,000,000 corporation with immense reduction and refining works at Oakland and Bayonne, N. J. The value of its property already patented is in the millions, there being enough of the mineral in sight to supply the world for hundreds of years, solid mountains of borax being no unusual feature of its holdings.

The testimony taken in the case required about two months of the court's time almost a year ago, and among the witnesses was "Borax" Smith, the famous figure in the field of Death Valley borax mining, who appeared in behalf of the United States Borax Company. Smith was the original locator of the property, but afterward disposed of his interest to a corporation that was later on merged into the United States Borax Company. There were scores of witnesses on both sides, for the most part experts acquainted with the borax field and old-time prospectors who had outstripped the Grim Reaper in Death Valley.

J. P. Hughes and others, in 1916 and 1917, filed mining claims on the property covered by the suit, that had been located by the company seventeen years before. At the same time, the Hughes group of locaters set up the contention that the big borax corporation had forfeited its title to the sixteen claims, covering rich borax ledges, by failing to do the required amount of annual assessment work and by failing to resume work upon these claims prior to the location of the defendants.

The crux of the litigation was whether or not the company did perform the work under the mining laws, and what constitutes a fair day's work in that arid and heated region. One of the points made by Mr. Hughes and the codefendants was that the company had put too high a valuation on the work that it was admitted it had performed.

Judge Trippet in his opinion holds that the United States Borax Company made an honest endeavor to do the work required and did perform it to the satisfaction of the land officials, hence it is entitled to a clear title to the sixteen claims.

The United States Borax Company was represented by James F. Peck, F. J. Solinsky, and Peck, Bucker and Cole of San Francisco; while S. E. Vermilyea and S. L. Carpenter of Los Angeles appeared for Mr. Hughes and others.

RADIO CHANCES IN MANY FIELDS.

Uncle Sam Seeks Operators for Signal Corps Both Here and Abroad.

The army recruiting service in the San Fernando Building is anxious to secure radio operators for the Signal Corps for service in Siberia, Europe, and on the Mexican border. Young men who have had previous military training can get a one-year enlistment and others three years.

This is a great opportunity for young men who are anxious to become expert operators, as they will get the best training from the most efficient teachers. They also will be able to go to Europe and see the battlefields of the great war. Good men who are anxious to better themselves will be given every encouragement.

A term of service in the Signal Corps of the army will always be the best recommendation they can have in securing civilian employment after discharge from the army.

PROTECT TOURISTS.

Business Men Would Curb Cabbies, Hotel Runners and "Pests."

In a letter addressed to the City Council, the Chamber of Commerce yesterday protested, in the interests of the many tourists who daily are arriving in Los Angeles, against the annoying situation that exists at the railway stations upon the arrival of trains. The communication was, in part, as follows:

"Immediately a newcomer to the city reaches the sidewalk he is importuned loudly by solicitors for taxicabs, hotels and other lines of business and frequently is seized and hauled about, to his dismay and disgust. This is a costly nuisance that is a relic of bygone days. Los Angeles is the only city of considerable size where it is tolerated. Because this city is the Mecca for tourists, we should lead all other cities in courtesy and consideration toward our visitors."

TO TEMPLAR MEETING.

Judge Bledsoe and Others Going to Philadelphia Conclave.

Federal Judge Bledsoe, who is Grand Commander of the Knights Templar of California, will leave tomorrow for Philadelphia, where he will attend the triennial conclave of the Knights Templar of the United States.

Accompanying him will be Judge William Waste of the First District Court of Appeal of San Francisco and William White of the same city. Gen. Robert Wankowski, who is Deputy Grand Commander of the California Knights Templar, has been in France, but is expected to be in Philadelphia for the grand conclave, September 9, 10, 11 and 12.

While in the East Judge Bledsoe will visit Pittsburgh, Washington and New York and will return to Los Angeles about September 23.

TO STORE MORE "GAS."

The Fire Commission will send to the City Council this morning a recommendation that garages be allowed underground storage capacity for 2440 gallons instead of 1200 gallons, the present provision. This is to be urged on the ground that the present storage capacity at garages is so small that it requires a constant operation of gasoline tank wagons on the streets, and thus increases the fire hazard.

AGAINST PATENT PAVING.

Local Property Owners' League Issues a Statement to the Public.

The following statement entitled "Why Patented Pavements Should be Prohibited in Los Angeles" has been issued by the Property Owners' Protective League:

The paving ordinances in the city of Los Angeles are being redrafted. At present they provide for the use of patented pavements. The Property Owners' Protective League has been formed to oppose the use of all classes of pavement that exact a royalty. You are vitally interested in this matter.

Mayor Snyder says, "the time has come when Los Angeles must be saved from the corrupting influence of a paving monopoly, when her property owners must be spared the double expense of using a patented pavement." The Mayor's position is a correct one and now is the time to back him up in it.

WHAT IS PATENTED PAVEMENT?

It is mixture of rock, sand and asphalt combined in definite proportions. It is only one of the many possible combinations of these materials commonly used in road building. It has no element of superiority over numerous other mixtures of the same materials which are not patented; in fact, competent engineers all over the country declare that the nonpatented pavements are better, and as a consequence most of the large cities in the country do not permit the patented types to be used.

The "patent" does not contribute anything to the actual value of the road; it simply furnishes a legal way for the patent owner to collect a royalty.

Patented pavements always require the payment of a large royalty to the patent holder, thereby increasing the cost of street improvements to the property owners. This fact is self-evident.

There is still another fact, even more serious. Experience has shown that the patent owner, by secretly rebating a part of his royalty to a favored contractor, is able to decide who is the successful bidder and thereby stifle competition. This is the case in Los Angeles and other cities where patented pavements have been used. Without competition among contractors the property owner is sure to pay an excessive price for his improvements.

Why pay a royalty when there are many better pavements in general use which do not afford opportunity for profiteering?

The following cities are among those which have thrown out patented pavements: San Francisco, Seattle, Minneapolis, Youngstown, O.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Milwaukee, Akron, New York City, Kansas City, Columbus, Atlanta, Ga., and many others. The Highway Commission of California prohibits its use on any State highways. The commissioners of nearly all other States have taken the same action.

Here is an easy way to convince yourself of the relative merits of patented and nonpatented pavements. Sunset boulevard was paved with the patented type and already a large portion of the surface has worn out and it has been necessary to resurface the same at heavy expense to the city. The balance is in such condition that it will have to be resurfaced at an early date.

Wilshire boulevard is also a patented pavement, and its history is especially interesting. At the time it was paved it was the most expensive job ever laid in the city. It is protected by ordinance from heavy trucking and teaming. Nevertheless it has developed bumps and corrugations, particularly from Catalina street west, that make it anything but a desirable thoroughfare to drive over, in spite of the fact that travel is practically restricted to pleasure vehicles.

In contrast to these two boulevards, Western avenue and Figueroa street, south of Washington, are paved with nonpatented materials, neither of these streets are protected; they are open to all classes of traffic. Notwithstanding their constant use by the heaviest trucks and teams, they still present a perfect surface and stand as a credit to the city and to the property owners who paid for them.

If we eliminate patented pavements we will get value received from our street funds and banish the paving trust with its royalties and monopolies.

NEW ROADS FOR VENTURA.

Ventura county voted in favor of a bond issue of $580,000 for the construction of new roads by an overwhelming majority last Tuesday. The money obtained by this bond issue will be used for the construction of thirty-six miles of new road. A splendid scenic highway from Santa Paula to the Ojai Valley will be built, with numerous connecting links to other roads. A significant feature of the election was the fact that the State Highway bonds, which were voted on July 1, passed by only twenty-four votes over the necessary two-thirds, while the county bonds passed by at least a three to one vote.

The success of the county election was due largely to the efforts of the Automobile Club of Southern California, which sent a representative to Ventura county to aid in a publicity campaign preceding the election. Through this representative 5000 windshield stickers, 750 display cards, 100 blue print maps of the proposed additions to the roads, and seventy-five automobile banners were distributed throughout the county. The automobile club will send a representative to San Luis Obispo county, where a road bond issue of $1,500,000 is to be submitted to a vote on September 3. The representative will remain there the entire time, aiding the Chamber of Commerce, and the supporters of the bill, to pass it.

TO LAY CORNER-STONE OF U.S.C. BUILDING.

ADDRESS BY BISHOP AT THE OPENING OF SEMESTER. ADDS TO FACULTY.

Plans are being completed for the laying of the corner-stone of the $500,000 administration building of the University of Southern California at 10 a.m. on the opening day of the fall semester, September 29. At the ceremony, which will be attended by faculty and student body, Bishop Adna Wright Leonard will make the principal address. Dr. George Finley Bovard, president of the university, will preside.

Work will be rushed on the building, which will be of fireproof construction containing an auditorium to seat 3000 people, and it is expected to be dedicated on the fortieth anniversary of the university at the close of the coming school year. This will be the first of a series of buildings to be erected on the campus in line with the greater university programme.

Dr. Bovard yesterday announced the appointment of Prof. Louis Wann, Ph. D., as a member of the English department. Dr. Wann will come to Los Angeles from Lawrence College, Appleton, Wis., where he served as head of the English department. For four years he was assistant professor of English in the University of Wisconsin, where he received his doctor's degree. Dr. Wann will arrive in Los Angeles for the opening of the fall semester.

CONCRETE WORK WILL BE TAUGHT AT NIGHT.

An evening class in reinforced concrete is being organized to meet in room 106 of the civil engineering building at the University of Southern California, corner of Thirty-fifth place and University avenue.

The class will meet on Monday and Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 8:15, beginning this week.

The course will include a brief study of strength of materials, the design of reinforced concrete slabs, rectangular beams, T beams, double reinforced beams, columns, brackets, retaining walls, foundations, stairs, elevators, wind stresses, chimneys, water towers, dams, reservoirs, culverts, and bridges.

A study will be made of the Los Angeles building ordinances and a small reinforced concrete building will be designed complete. Several test beams will be designed, made up and tested in the testing laboratory, and numerous tests will be made on reinforcing steel. The first course will probably take about six months, but any portion of the work may be taken separately.

An Old Fault Finder.

An irritable and fault-finding disposition is often caused by indigestion. A man with good digestion and bowels that act regularly is usually good-natured. When troubled with indigestion or constipation take Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. They also cause a gentle movement of the bowels.—[Advertisement.

SOUTHWESTERN'S NEW ACCOUNTING COURSE.

The Southwestern University School of Commerce and Finance in the Wilcox Building will extend its curriculum further for the coming term. Accounting will be taught from the beginning of book-keeping down to the final drill for the C. P. A. examinations under the direction of Reynold E. Blight, C. P. A. dean.

Successful candidates of the school in the recent C. P. A. examinations, and all of whom are well engaged, are C. E. Van Dame, R. S. Stone, W. H. Teasley, C. O. La Rue, A. D. McLeod, H. J. Stevenson, H. A. Wheeler, and A. R. Heron. Large classes are expected at the opening of the school next month on account of the great demand for accountants.

OLDEST LIVING LANGUAGE.

"Viri trahite jugum"—"men drag the yoke"—sighed the Roman politician when Nero turned down the request of the Amalgamated Toga Makers' Union for an eight-hour day and raised taxes to pay for the autumn series of orgies and a new fiddle.

"Vyrai, traukite jungan," echoes the Lithuanian of the present day as he and his fellow-refugees shoulder their packs and set out for the return trip to the farms whence they were driven by the Germans before Lithuania had set up its present republican form of self-government.

This striking similarity between the modern Lithuanian and the ancient Latin languages is no mere coincident applying to those few words only. Lithuanian is the oldest living language in the world today. It resembles most the primitive Sanskrit and is probably older than Greek or Latin, with which philologists find it has much in common. It is entirely different from German and Slavic tongues.

Prof. A. Meillet of the College of France, says: "If you wish to hear from the human lips some echo of what the language originally common to the Indo-European may have been, go and listen to Lithuanian peasants talking."

Emanuel Kant, the German philosopher, wrote 119 years ago: "Lithuania, having a loyal character, deserves the protection of the state. She must be preserved, for her tongue possesses the key which opens all the enigmas not only of philology but of history."—[Bulletin of Lithuanian National Council.

" 'Two hundred! How long have you been working?'

" 'Two years, ma'am.' "—[Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

PHANTOMS OF THE DESERT.

"Bill" Hart Resurrects the Spirit of 'Fifties.

Historical Atmosphere in "Wagon Tracks."

Romance of Fur Cap and the Buckskin Costume.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT.

"Perhaps it's a mirage."

"No, it looks too real for that."

"Then it must be some sort of gypsy caravan."

"It seems more like there was a railroad strike, and somebody had started traveling in the fashion of fifty years ago."

At that we brought the motor car to a stop, and leaned over to look at the phantom horses, mules and canvas-topped wagons toiling across the desert about a mile or two from the ridge road we were traveling toward Victorville. Our attention had been immediately attracted by the strange vision of the past, which we, the four of us, bent on a day's outing, had come upon quite suddenly after running through Cajon Pass to the stonepiles of the gods. We had just been talking of the difficulties encountered by the pioneers in western civilization, and the view of the wagon train flashed before our eyes seemed to hit upon our stirred imaginations like a spark to some inflammable material. We were all excitement at once.

Then someone threw cold water on the whole procession by saying, "I'll bet it's a picture.

"Anyhow, let's go and see."

So we started the car and swung off a side road down into the valley and out onto the sand of the desert. As we drew near to the wagon train, which was now at a standstill, and about which lounged strangely-varied groups of white men and Indians, it was easy to descry the camera, which was grinding away before a tall man in buckskin clothes and wearing a fur cap that looked like it was built for the polar regions instead of for these torrid surroundings.

The tall man, holding a dipper in his hand, stooped down and held it out for a thin, hollow-eyed dog, who drank it feverishly. The man patted the dog and the director said "cut."

Then the man rose to his full height, and took off his bearskin cap, and—we recognized our hero of the western drama, Bill Hart.

A CHAPTER OF HISTORY.

Now that was my first acquaintance with "Wagon Tracks," the unusual reproduction of historical atmosphere of the building up of the great West, which is to show at the California Theater this week.

Hart spent several weeks in the vicinity of Victorville during the making of the picture last spring, amid a perfect whirlwind of work. It wasn't parlor work, either; the conditions were primitive. In fact, during those two weeks, some of the members of the company said that if traveling the Santa Fe Trail in 1850 was anything like the two weeks they spent on the hot desert, they were glad they were not living in an age of romance.

"Wagon Tracks" tells the story of the Santa Fe Trail, the sun-blistered pathway to the West, over which marched the pioneers. Its eastern terminus lay close to the heart of the States.

"Picture with me," said Hart to me recently, "Westport Landing, the original site of thriving Kansas City in the year 1850. Here the steamboats from St. Louis landed their human cargoes of brave and optimistic adventurers. Some were home builders—sons of the soil—some were gentlewomen, some were men seeking to recoup lost fortunes, and many were gamblers, outcasts and thieves.

"Thirty miles from Westport Landing, which is on Missouri soil, is Council Grove, Kan. In those days Council Grove was the eastern gateway of the Santa Fe Trail, and the starting point of the lumbering wagon trains. Led by veteran desert guides the pioneers in their white-sailed armadas braved the perils of the wilderness to reach the threshold of the promised land. Today the plains and deserts of the West still reveal tragedies that overtook many of those empire builders."

It is out of this strange mingling of human fate and chance that the plot of "Wagon Tracks" has been built. The story is by C. Gardner Sullivan, and while the story will be the chief interest, Hart has been particularly anxious that the feature shall strongly delineate the hardships of the frontiersman in his struggle with the primitive spirit of the hills, the desert and its denizens.

There were several different locations during the making of the picture. The river scenes were staged in the vicinity of Sacramento, the members of the company visiting Fort Sutter, to view a landmark of the advance guard of civilization.

The most difficult scenes were those in the desert, because of the vast number of accessories used. It took eighteen cars to transport the stock required for drawing the twenty-five prairie schooners. A great variety of costumes and props were required. Fortunately destiny played into the hands of the troupe, and they were able to add many natural touches.

Hart has striven in "Wagon Tracks" to get away from popularly-conceived and often times false ideas of the West. For instance, that matter of the fur cap.

"Why do I wear my fur cap in the desert? Because I want everybody to know that in those days Kit Carson and his kind wore fur caps all the time," declared Hart. "The BILL RUSSELL ASSISTS.

A Honeymoon Trip, as Related by Ella, the Extra Girl.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

You know Don Quixote, dearie, that there Spanish Happy Holligan guy, that was always moving in and pulling phoney stunts with sawmills, and rescuing fair damsels and things on his funny old nag, well, dearie, Billy Russell says that Don Quixote person ain't got a single thing on him and his little old flying machine and that when it comes to pulling off elopements his name is certainly John D. Don Quixote! Billy says that as a combination to make a high grade of trouble for a flying machine he knows the recipe. It's a patent machine, two elopers of assorted sexes, a green parrot that's lived in Mexico, an Angora cat and a bone-headed cop.

Ella, the Extra Girl, had just come into the dressing-room at the Gargantuan studio, surprising the New Girl in the act of reading a letter. Ella coolly took the letter from the New Girl's unprotesting hand, and folded it away.

Now, dearie, if you can stop reading Dick's correspondence intended only for my loving eyes, I'll pour a great tale of love and adventure into your shell-like ear. Not that it matters much about Dick's letters. He says spelling and grammar cramp his style awful and anyhow actions speak louder than words.

Speaking of Billy Russell and the elopement he pulled for two loving Sunshine comedy hearts, it would all have been just like a feature fillum, dearie, if it hadn't been for the desert isle and the infernal machine, but you know as well as I do how in real life fate will muff the swellest plot and make it all look like a Jazzy Sennett comedy. So that part of the time, Bill looks like Mercury that used to fetch and carry night telegrams for the gods, and part of the time he looks like a Billikins.

Like all the rest of the picture stars of course Billy Russell had to learn to fly. But little did Bill think, that morning last week when he motored down to the Fox studio to commence his new picture, that that very day he was to start out on a errand of mercy, much less a career of wild adventure.

You see Chester Conklin and Millie Bliss, of Sunshine comedies, being in love with each other, and Millie having parents who refuse to let their child wed a comedian who throws pies, though Chester has got a heart of gold even if a pie-throwing calling, was all broke up. Chet said he would stop throwing pies and play Hamlet, only then he was afraid he wouldn't be able to support Millie in the style to which she had been accustomed, and Millie said she didn't care at all about his comedying so long as she could see the love light shining in Chet's earnest though pie-dimmed eyes.

Millie is little and cute, and she came up to Bill crying, so that Bill stopped reading his new scenario to listen to her troubles. And Bill says it was right that minute that his airship dashed into his mind. I was standing near and heard him say: "Little girl, are you game?"

And Millie says: "Well, if I ain't, Daniel wasn't!" Meaning she works all the time with the lions in the Sunshine comedies.

THE ELOPEMENT PLANNED.

"That's so," says Bill. And then I was thrilled to the marrow, for I heard him say: "You and Chet are going to elope in my new flying machine tomorrow afternoon! That's settled, so go and pack! We'll take off to San Francisco and you can stop at Ventura, or Santa Barbara, or any place your little heart desires and be married, and then we'll go on!"

"Oh, you darling!" says Millie, grabbing him around the neck. Just then Chet hove in sight all covered with cream-puff and Millie flew to him and told him the good news. It seemed Millie's parents was away on a vacation and they had been talking about eloping that very day, but was afraid to motor anywhere because they might be discovered, and they couldn't go on the train on account of the strike.

Then Millie ran over to me and begged me to come home with her and help her to pack, and asked me not to tell, which I ain't until now when Millie and Chet is safe in their own bungalow, where the mince-pie ceases troubling and the cream-puffs is at rest, as the poet says.

When we got over to Millie's house, she decided to leave all her dresses behind only the one she wore and took only her lingerie, which I suppose is natural in a bride and then the telephone rang'

It was grandmaw on the line and she said that on account of the railroad strike would Millie and Chet take the extra white Angora kitten she had promised his sister up in San Francisco. Millie laughed and said certainly, a white cat was always good luck. No sooner was we back packing than the door bell rang, and it was Rea Marvel, Millie's bosom friend, bringing a green parrot with her. It seemed, Rea wanted the bird sent to San Francisco, to be turned over to a famous bird dealer up there who could alter a parrot's line of conversation by putting red pepper on his tongue when he says the wrong things. Rea said the parrot had lived in Mexico, and all he would say was: "Hurrah for Villa! Down with William J. Bryan!" and whilst Bryan was no more, politically speaking, still the neighbors was talking so about it, she was getting sensitive. Millie called Chet up, and he said a honeymoon didn't seem no place for a Bolshevik parrot that might be a spy, still if Millie wanted it, all right. But he seemed to feel right then something awful would happen and it did.

Millie merely hoped the Angora and parrot would get on, because quarrels on honeymoons is awful things, but of course in this happy hour one must thing of others, so she took the parrot.

Just a minute after Rea left, in came Maud Wayne, and she said she was so glad they were going by airplane because her aunt had a package she wanted to send to her aged uncle in San Francisco. But she didn't tell us what was in the package—and oh, list you to me, dearie, if ever anybody wants to wish a strange package on you, don't you have it, for it might be loaded, but gawd knows it don't make no difference whether loaded or not if a bone-headed cop gets camping on your trail.

No sooner was Millie and I left alone in her room again, wrinkling over the problem whether the hair should be worn slicked back in an airplane, or ought it be done in curl-papers, or might a few tantalizing curls be depended on to stay curled peeking out from beneath the helmet, when a distant aunt of Maud Wayne's—Maudie rightly says she ain't to blame for the aunt or the way she acted—telephoned and wanted to know would Chet and Millie take a twin baby up north to its mother? She said she's been caring for it but now the mother wanted it, and she couldn't afford to motor clear up there.

CHET DRAWS THE LINE.

Millie got so nervous she sat down and cried. She said what had she ever done that she should have so many of other folk's burdens to bear, much less have a baby wished on her that would be sure to get her and her poor dear innocent Chester talked about. But she's a sweet thing, and after a while she dried her eyes and said she'd ask Chester. But Chester was firm. Chester said an airship was no fit place for a baby whether separated from its twin or not, let alone a honeymoon, and he'd make a bally animal trainer out of hisself, but blamed if he'd be chauffeur to a twin!

Well, they finally got everything into the airship, and took off from Mercury Field next afternoon, with all harmonious except the Angora cat and the Bolshevik parrot, who had to be confined in separate cages. Lieuts. Allee and Thompson and Hawkins waved their hands, and Billie expected to make Ventura within an hour.

Oh, dearie, I wish you could hear Millie tell about that wonderful flight! The little old airplane just purred her way along like a dream, and Chet and Millie held hands, sitting there side by side back of Bill Russell, and they felt they were all alone in a big wonderful, beautiful universe.

But all too soon—alas!—all was changed—and by that mysterious package of Maude Wayne's aunt's! They landed in a Ventura bean field, and Millie and Chet were just about to go get their license, leaving Billy in charge of the machine, when one of the crowd that soon gathered,—one of them misplaced traffic cops—wanted to know what they had in the fusilage. "Why—why—just trousseau," stammered Mildred. But he was a suspicious guy, and insisted on dragging out everything and looking it over. You'd-a thought that innocent little Angora kitten had a police record, the way he looked at it, but for once the parrot shut up. Anyway, the wedding was held up. And then he found that mysterious package of Maude Wayne's aunt's. He asked Billie to open it, but he wouldn't. Far be it from him, he said, to delve into the secrets of Maude's aunt! So the guy opened it himself. And by heaven, what he took out did look strange. They all had to admit that, Millie said.

What, indeed, was this strange instrument they were harboring? It was made of steel or wrought iron, and it was about as big as a good-sized kettle. The suspicious guy said it seemed to him like a contraption to hold a bomb. Millie broke in, pretending it was a patent arrangement for making tea, but the suspicious guy merely asked in sepulchral but logical ones — "Where's your fire?" Sure enough, there wasn't any place for a fire or to hitch it up to electricity.

"Pooh, pooh! It's just a patent book-jack," said Chester.

"Well, why didn't you say so before?" asked the suspicious guy. Which was so logical nobody could answer. But anyhow he let them keep the thing.

But Chet and Millie was so nervous they didn't want to stay there to get married, wanting to go right on to Santa Barbara, which they hoped to make before the marriage license bureau closed. They began to have an awful feeling they were never going to get married at all, Millie said, though Billie gave the airship the gun and headed for Santa Barbara, with the tachometer registering ninety miles.

Billy Russell said he knew the County Clerk and a minister in Santa Barbara that used to play in pictures on account of his beautiful whiskers, and promised Millie and Chet they should surely be married this time. But little did he reck. In the first place, Chet and Millie quarreled. Chet said something sarcastic about doing errands for all your friends, and Millie slapped back. Chet said bitterly Millie had funny friends that sent queer things along with them on their first and only honeymoon, and Millie said, what did Chet marry her for anyhow if he didn't expect to have anything but clear sailing all through life?

It was nearly night by the time Santa Barbara lay beneath their feet, and Chet and Millie almost forgot and made up, but not quite. Bill Russell's sight is like a hawk's, and though they made a Chinese landing, as he called it—with the wing low, which jolted them a bit—still they landed safe enough in a big vacant lot. A number of citizens had gathered to watch them, and it was then that the parrot screamed: "Hurrah for Villa! Down with William J. Bryan!"

Some of the folks thought it was Chet yelling, and one man started toward him, but nobody said anything, and pretty soon Billy Russell was shaking hands with some cowboys and asking one of them to watch the machine while they all went downtown for dinner. The man who had started so when the parrot yelled, followed the party, and kept watching Chet. He slunk off a while, but came back. While they were dining, a messenger boy came in, bringing a message for Chet. It was signed "Friend," and said the writer wanted to see him at the Hotel Potter. He was a bit mystified, but thought it was somebody putting up a job on him for fun, and went away in good humor. Millie wouldn't bid him good-by, though.

THE PARROT AND THE CAT.

Millie and Bill Russell returned to the machine, and there was a policeman with the strange man, and they were looking at the things in the fuselage. The strange man said, "Where was the fellow that had yelled 'Hurrah for Villa!'" and Bill said "That wasn't a fellow, but a parrot," and they said, "Yes, it was! Well, then, where's the parrot?" Sure enough, where was he? There was the Angora all right. Then Millie remembered, she had let the things out to stretch, a few minutes, and had forgotten to put them back in their cages. Then it dawned on her the cat had eaten the parrot! The fight must have taken place outside, though, as there wasn't a feather left in the fuselage, but one green feather still stuck to kitty's lips, which was proof enough for us, but wasn't proof to the strange man and the cop. Also they found Maude's aunt's package.

The policeman wanted to take it, and would have, only he knew Bill and didn't want to hurt Bill's feelings. He said the iron instruments looked to him like a part of a counterfeiter's outfit he had helped seize once. Also he said it looked like a thing he captured once from a gang of smugglers that the smugglers used to hide things in, pretending it was a patent stove. Oh, Millie said, if only they had thought to ask Maude's aunt what the thing really was! The strange man they saw was fumbling with the package and then he disappeared, but

The Lamp Should Be Decorative as Well as Useful

While its function as a source of light is very essential, the almost unlimited possibilities of the lamp in the decorative scheme of home furnishing make its careful selection of first importance.

The lamp is the first thing you see when you enter the room. In daylight hours it provides the touch of color and variety of proportion which make for effective furnishing. Lighted, its soft glow dignifies and lends elegance to the surroundings. It should be chosen with thoughtful consideration for its effectiveness under both conditions.

The "California" specializes in unusual lamps of all types—floor lamps, piano lamps, chair lamps, davenport lamps, hall lamps, boudoir lamps, library lamps, reading lamps, and wonderful shades of individual creation for each and every purpose.

When you contemplate the selection of a lamp to contribute to the beauty and comfort of your home, we sincerely believe you will find it to your best interest to come and see our very comprehensive showing.

OF ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

The Body Fair.

The empty marvel of a splendid cage
With fretted gold and twisted silver wire
Thy body seems, and mine a lover's rage
That gilds thy painted shows with rich desire.
And 'round the precious metal of the bars
Flowers scarlet-hearted, and pale passion-flowers,
And crowded jasmine mingle as the stars,
Dewy with scent of kisses, warm with showers.
Of marble, lily and pure snow, the floor;
The window stained with sunlit ruby shine;
Of azure water clear the sapphire door
That never turns on hinges crystalline;
The bird within is mute and does not sing,
And dull his tuneless note, and clipt his wing.

A Fly in the Ointment.

Some time ago I invited readers of art and artists to express themselves in regard to the two societies, the California Progressive Group and the California Art Club, and to the right of both to have the privilege of holding exhibitions in the gallery at Exposition Park.

Recently Miss Helena Dunlap declared that she was ready to express herself, and the paragraphs that follow are the sum and substance of her letter to the editor of Art and Artists. Miss Dunlap, as we all know, is a painter of unusual talent and accomplishment, and what she has to say is worth our consideration, whether she expresses it with the brush or the pen.

Miss Dunlap begins with a reference to the "attitude of the California Art Club toward our group" (the California Progressive Group.) She has been a member of the California Art Club for eight years, and during that time, she says, she has given them the best from her brush each year—until recently. Of late she has not exhibited with this club at all.

She calls our attention to the well-known fact that many artists differ on the question as to what is good or bad art. She become dissatisfied with the California Art Club because, she says, they always had the same people on the jury each year—deciding each year what was good art—and as they decided each year that the same things were good or the same things were bad, the young men with newer ideas did not receive their due.

Miss Dunlap was in favor of a change in the jury each year, and in making it a rule that those serving on the jury one year could not serve the following year, so that the same idea as to what was good would not prevail every year. This she considers fair to all, and the other arrangement unfair to all the members of the California Art Club.

However, she goes on to say, this matter was not decided on at the last meeting that was called for the making of the new constitution, and a great deal of hard feeling was the result, as those who had served on the jury year after year wished to continue to do so, regardless of whether it was fair or not. There were other changes made that, in Miss Dunlap's opinion, makes the California Art Club a benefit to the entire club rather than a few men.

She has been accused, she avers, of having only selfish aims and of being a trouble-maker. She therefore believes that some men (she will not say all) hold such an attitude toward women that when they (the women) stand up for what they believe to be right and just, they are at once accused of being "trouble-makers."

The Los Angeles Modern Art Society was formed three years ago with the aim and ideal of giving the young men and women with newer ideas a chance to show their work to full advantage. "Equal chance was our motto," writes Miss Dunlap, "full liberty, no rules, our officers only holding office to take care of the business end of things and not to be the 'big bugs' of the club."

She unhesitatingly declares that the two annual exhibitions of the new club have been good exhibitions. The second exhibition raised $200 for the Red Cross. The honorary members of the club consist of the best men from New York and elsewhere, she says, men whose standing as artists is unquestioned. She believes that the club, if for no other reason, has been worth while because it has fully recognized two young native California artists before they died. The older group of artists are resentful toward the new club, she says, and would go to any length to prevent it from being a success.

Miss Dunlap has never been opposed to the Ten Painters' organization. She believes that these men have banded together, and that they belong together. She would never oppose any organization whose object was the advantageous placing of their works before the public.

When the members of the California Progressive Group went before the board of governors of the museum, she says, that they might put in their plea for the use of the museum for an annual exhibition, they found there the officers of the California Art Club—C. P. Townsley, president; Jack Wilkinson Smith, vice-president; Benjamin Brown and Max Wieczorek. She and the other members were much surprised to see these men from the California. They were there, Miss Dunlap, says, to use their influence to keep the newer group from the use of the museum. Mr. Townsley, she declares, read a paper against modern art, and also made a personal (though, of course, verbal) attack on Miss Shore and her.

They also, she goes on to state, handed in a petition signed with about thirty-five names of members of the California Art Club. They used this against the new organization, she says, though she feels positive that when the members of the California Art Club signed this paper they did not know for what purpose it was intended. That was kept secret, Miss Dunlap declares. As it was a paper that any one would sign, she says, they succeeded in securing about thirty-five names, but this does not represent the majority of the California Art Club.

Miss Duplap thinks that the officers of the California Art Club were entirely out of order when they appeared representing an organization and did not have the majority of that organization with them. "But when this is made public," she writes, "I suppose they will scout out and get the mapority—but the fact remains that the majority was not made when they acted."

Another plea put forth, says Miss Dunlap, was that there should be but one organization in Los Angeles—though two of those most active are members of the Ten Painters Club!! (The exclamation marks are Miss Dunlap's own.) Of course, the Ten Painters' Club, she says sarcastically, have the exclusive right to form another club—and all the rest of the members of the California Art Club must remain members of just one club or they are disloyal to the California Art Club. Miss Dunlap finds this "a very strange situation!!"

Some of the members of the Ten Painters' Club, she goes on to explain, have said that they have the right because the Ten Painters' Club is only commercial. She herself feels that all exhibitions are commercial, more or less, "because all artists hope to sell their work—so there is no difference."

Miss Dunlap ends by asserting that she has written the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and that the public should understand it.

Art Club's Exhibition.

The tenth annual exhibition of the California Art Club will open the first week in October, to continue through the month. The press view will be given October 1; reception and first view, Thursday, October 2, from 8 to 11 p.m.; public opening October 3. The jury of selection meets Monday and Tuesday, September 29 and 30; the hanging committee meets September 30.

Two prizes will be given by Clarence A. Black of Santa Barbara. The first prize will be $150 for the best picture in the exhibition; the second prize of $100 will go to the next best picture.

The California Art Club is the largest organization of painters and sculptors on the west coast, and its annual exhibitions have been growing steadily in strength and importance. The tenth annual exhibition will undoubtedly prove to be the best the club has so far given us.

International Studio.

The International Studio is not now the plethoric art journal it used to be—the war conditions thinned it a good deal—but it keeps up its old standard, and the articles are as readable, the illustrations as good as ever before. Among the papers in the August number are: "A Recent Memorial by Joseph Maxwell Miller," by Warren Wilmer Brown, with four illustrations; "Brooklyn's Arch of Triumph," by Frank Owen Payne, illustrated; "The Art of William C. Robb," by Malcolm C. Salaman, with eight illustrations; "M. Fernand Scoufiaire, Dessinateur," by Walter Bayes, with eight illustrations; "The Paintings of Max Kuehne," by A. E. Gallatin, illustrated; "Shakespeare, the Colorist," "Studio Talk, War Memorials," etc.

LANDED IN TREE.

When His Motor Stopped Air Mail Pilot Guides Machine into Tree.

Samuel M. Eaton, Jr., pilot of a Washington-New York mail airplane, the other day sent his machine crashing into the top of a tall tree in Germantown, when his engine "froze" from lack of oil. The long branches of the tree caught the plane tightly and held it high in the air, the aviator wedged in his seat, although unhurt. After remaining in this perch for half an hour he was rescued by firemen, who put a long ladder against the tree and helped him to the ground.

Eaton has a home with his wife and children in Philadelphia.

Eaton left College Point, Md., that morning to carry the air mail to New York. All went well until he reached the area over West Philadelphia. Then his oil failed him, and his Liberty motor began to creak from want of lubricant. As he was over the city there was no place for the aviator to land, so he decided to continue, hoping to reach Bustleton Field. Meanwhile he used the emergency hand pump in an attempt to keep his motor lubricated. However, the motor suddenly stopped and the hand pump failed to give enough oil.

There was no place for Eaton to alight, as he was flying over houses at the time, and the yards and lawns were too small. So he took a chance. Ahead was the big tree. As he floated downward without power he directed his machine into the topmost limbs of the tree.

The branches stopped the plane and held it firmly. However, a branch flew across the fuselage in such a way that the aviator could not get out of his seat. The tail of the machine flew up and the nose down. There, Eaton and his plane hung in midair.

Someone telephoned for firemen, who came with a truck and raised one of the long ladders. While an interested crowd looked on, the firemen climbed up the ladder and extricated the aviator from his seat, carrying him to the ground amid cheers.—[Philadelphia Record.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED.

I am a stenographer, and the boss I had last week, which was the first and last week I worked there, was short, fat, terribly homely and also cranky.

One morning, not having anything to do, I started to write some personal letters. I finished four when I was called in to take dictation. After I finished his letters I took them in and started to do some other work. About fifteen minutes later he rang for me. I went in. Two of the salesmen were also in there. All he said was: "I am glad to note what you say in the last paragraph of this letter," and handed them back to me.

I had given him the wrong letters, and the one he referred to was one I had written to my chum, describing my new place. I described him as being fat as two barrels, a face like a baby hippopotamus, and positively the crankiest man I had ever met, and what was worse I had drawn a sketch of him in pencil, which wouldn't flatter anybody. In the last paragraph I said, "I intend to quit Saturday," but instead I quit on that same day, which was Friday.—[N. W. W., in Chicago Tribune.

and they felt quiet and deeply peaceful and happy. Millie said it softened her and made her think how deeply she loved Chet and how good he really was and no wonder he worried about the thing Maude's aunt had sent.

Bill took off in an awful silence. I guess he reckoned the lovers would make up and maybe they would have, too, only — Millie reached over timidly to take Chet's hand, like the sweet thing she is. Suddenly the moon came out bright from behind a cloud—and it wasn't Chet at all, but the strange man! She gave a horrible yell, and Bill, who was just then banking for a turn nearly let go of the stick, and instead gave the ship too much rudder and she skidded something awful.

"Your friend is a counterfeiter and a Bolshevik, and he's safe in jail back there!" shouted the stranger.

Millie shrieked again, and tried to tell Bill Russell, but Bill couldn't hear on account of the motor, and Millie said it was the most awful moment of her life. And it kept on being awful, because she couldn't tell Bill. She just sat back huddled up. But she knew, she said, Chet never counterfeited anything but smiles when he had neuralgia, to which he was subject.

At last they landed at Oakland, near dawn, before anybody was about, in a field. Then Bill saw he had the stranger aboard instead of Chet, but he never turned a hair, which made it so horrible to Millie she felt she was in a nightmare. Millie said she could have torn his eyes out for being so calm, but after all, as it turned out, he knew what he was about all the time. Millie wondered wildly what had become of her dear Chet. Oh, she said to herself, if anything had happened to him, never would she play Sunshine comedy again. She'd settle down into the drama and play sad parts—always with the thought of Chet and his dear pie-stopping face.

The stranger would give no account of himself, but seemed nervous and in a hurry to get away. Bill got a cop to guard the flyer and then he said, "Let's go down and have breakfast! After that we'll go down to the Sheriff's office in San Francisco and investigate this bomb and smuggling business!" The man looked awfully surprised, but said "all right."

So they went across the bay, and down to the Sheriff's office, and Millie says that before she could realize what was happening, Billie Russell had clapped his hand on the stranger's shoulder, and had exclaimed:

"Arrest that man!"

Millie says she gasped and nearly sank to the floor. what with the awful things she'd been through.

"He's a smuggler!" went on Billy. "Search him!"

Sure enough, they found little packages of opium all sewed into his clothes. He had a mysterious grip with him, too, and when they opened it, they found—Maudie's aunt's package! He was about to board a steamer for Japan, and had taken this way to get to San Francisco. It seemed, after they investigated, he was a fellow the authorities had been trying their best to get hold of, and Bill had known all about him before, when he, Billy, was working at the American studios in Santa Barbara, and was glad enough that the fellow thus placed himself within his clutches.

As for the supposed infernal machine, Billy Russell asked the stranger what he wanted of it.

The fellow confessed he believed it was the machine for which he had been looking for a long while, to be used in smuggling. Everybody was aghast at that, and then Billy had a bright thought.

"Why," he said, "Maudie's aunt's elderly uncle is right here in San Francisco. Maybe he'll know what the contraption is!"

They called up the old fellow. His voice was faint. We all stood breathless. Then Billy turned around solemnly. He tried to make his voice impressive, but it would shake.

"He says—'

"Yes?" from everybody.

"He says it's a patent rat trap. They've been awfully troubled with rats lately, and —"

But everybody was shrieking with laughter, even Millie.

WHERE'S CHET ANYHOW?

"What's become of Chet?" demanded Millie. Because, after all, what does a bride on a honeymoon care about a little old smuggler anyhow?"

"He'll be here!" said Billy, and then relapsed into one of his w.k. silent spells. So Millie had to wait. But that night, sure enough, Chet loomed up at the hotel, having motored up in record time, and guessing what hotel he'd find them at.

"And you weren't in jail at all?" demanded Millie tearfully, hugging Chet about the neck right in full view of everybody.

"Why, no, that was a phoney note that guy sent me himself to get me away, and Billie saw through it all, but let it go on in order to get him!"

Suddenly Millie and Chet remembered the reason they were in San Francisco was in order to get married, and they called the license clerk out of bed, got a minister and were married. Then they drove out to deliver the kitten, with which the parrot had seemed to agree, better dead than alive.

Next morning they started back to Los Angeles, but landed at Santa Barbara for gas, about mid-afternoon. Bill was gone about an hour and a half, and when he camo back to the hotel he found this note:

"Dear Bill: We thank you with all our hearts for all your kindness, but we're afraid we're Jonahs. So we're going it alone. Chet and Millie."

Somebody in the hotel—an old sea captain—said he had seen the two set out in a launch for Santa Cruz Islands. Bill was happy enough as he strayed down the beach with the captain, until he chanced to glance out at sea, and saw how terribly choppy the ocean was.

"Looks like it would be bad going for them youngsters out there!" said the captain. Bill just couldn't bear to give up those honeymooners till they were safe. That's Bill all over —finish what you start, says Bill. So he was just about to rush back to his machine, and take off to the islands, though it was an awfully risky thing to do in that wind, when the waves washed a bottle up at his feet. At first he didn't notice it really, then something inside caught his attention. It was a note.

Bill wonderingly pulled the cork out of the bottle, fished out the paper, and unfolded it. It said:

"We're cast away on a desert island. For heaven's sake, don't disturb us!" And it was signed, "Chet and Millie."

BOOKS 4200 YEARS OLD.

Prof. Langdon of Oxford, Eng., has discovered that one group of the famous Nippur tablets stored at the University of Pennsylvania are in reality the oldest school books known to exist. They show that the children of the ancients learned much that the boys and girls of today have to study. According to these tablets the children of 4200 years ago were taught arithmetic, geography, history and grammar just like the childen of today.

The multiplication tables are remarkably distinct, and in plain numerals show the incontrovertible fact that three times one are three and five times one are five.

On one tablet the school boy has been given a lesson in phonetic signs corresponding to the shorthand of modern times. The Sumerians, the authors of these tablets, also invented the use of writing syllables and combining them into words, being the first step toward the alphabet.—[Christian Herald.

ABOUT A LOS ANGELES FAMILY'S SOLDIER BOY.

Foussemagne. Congratulations.—Gen. Goybet, of the staff of the Military Governor of the Strasbourg subdivision, takes pleasure in tendering his congratulations to Marcel Picard, chasseur, the son of M. Aaron Picard, cattle dealer at Foussemagne, who gave proof of his initiative and courage in the arrest of a German disturber of peace.

(Certified copy of the original.)
Lieut.-Col. De Benoit.
Commander of the Sixth Regiment, African Chasseurs.

Our felicitations are hereby extended to our young townsman, who has won the regard of his leaders and his comrades.

Foussemagne. Shrewdness of the Intelligence Service.—The following information has just been received: After a careful search into a suspected plot, M. Marcel Picard, of Foussemagne, succeeded in arresting a leader in a scheme of treachery and Bolshevism, which threatened an incipient revolution in France. The young intelligence officer showed his initiative in quickly realizing that the revolutionaries were only waiting their chance to start trouble, and therefore devoting himself to the task of tracing the plotter and capturing him.

M. Picard is as shrewd as an experienced intelligence officer. His chiefs have most heartily commended him. We wish to extend our best wishes to the young officer.

USE FOR POTATO BUGS.

Michigan Makes Money Selling them for Fish Bait.

In the molten days of midsummer, in the Three Rivers (Mich.) country, when angleworms are scarce and the perch and bluegill may be ensnared if the proper bait is used, Eldon Ulrich, 10 years old, scores his financial successes. And, incidentally, he contributes a good tip to all fishermen.

Young Ulrich conceived the idea that the soft-shelled potato bug would make an excellent lure for fish, particularly when good angleworms were hard to obtain. He picked a canful of the bugs and experimented. The result was a handsome string. And from the day of his experiment his success began. The neighbors and truck gardeners welcomed him when he appeared to gather a supply, and the business and professional men, unable to solve the bait question, were ready customers. At 50 cents for a good-sized supply of the bugs, Ulrich has already accumulated a good bank account. His aim is to make enough to get a university education.

He digs angleworms in the low, marshy places for customers who will not accept his proved theory regarding the bugs, but his trade in that commodity grows less every day as the reports of his bug users are received. His idea for next year is to cultivate a patch of potatoes primarily for the bug crop.—[New York Evening Mail.

FINE ART OF CAMPING.

Moroccans Have Learned to Combine Picturesqueness and Utility.

The Moroccan encampment, whether it is military or that of some traveling band, is always picturesque. The tents of persons of distinction are often surmounted with copper balls and decorated with arabesques of cloth.

Camping is a fine art in Morocco, where the roads are almost impassable, and the chief means of transportation is by caravan. All day one rides across the great plains prodigally covered with iris, daffodils, daisies, buttercups and wild lavender. Perhaps a wild band of horsemen will gallop by, their robes, sea green, salmon-colored, and blue streaming in the wind, their horses richly caparisoned like those of some crusading king.

Occasionally one skirts a little village built of mud and watte and surrounded by fields of wheat and barley. Here and there the white domed shrine of some saint rises serenely above the plain. And at sundown the shepherds playing on their reed flutes drive their flocks of sheep and goats home from pasture. Then it is time to pitch the tents near a grove of orange trees or on a fairy carpet of red anemones. One dines on roasted sheep and cous-cous, and is lulled to sleep by the songs of the guard under the intense blue of the African sky.—[Argonaut.

Lazy Life During Hot Months Causes Lazy Liver

AT no other time is the girl so constant a companion of her mother as when she is emerging into womanhood. There are so many questions to ask; so much she needs to know.

And school is over. Here is now a lazy, inactive, carefree life. No wonder she is not always as lively and as well as she should be at her age. Let the mother inquire if the bowels are functioning properly, for there lies the basis of good and poor health.

It will usually be found that a laxative is needed, and none will give safer and quicker relief than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin which is just a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin. Taken tonight, it acts freely and pleasantly in the morning. The head is again clear, the body light. There is renewed interest in life.

A dose of Syrup Pepsin now and then is almost a necessity for everyone in hot weather. A bottle can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter being the family size, or a free trial bottle can be had by sending your address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 480 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

Beautiful Church Wedding.

St. John's Church was the scene on Wednesday evening last of one of the most beautiful weddings of the year, when Miss Evelyn Johnson and Joseph Brandon Bruner were married by Dr. George Davidson in the presence of 500 guests.

The church was adorned with a mass of orchids and greenery forming a rainbow color motif which was emphasized in the frocks of the bridesmaids.

The bride, who is one of the prettiest girls in the Southland, was given in marriage by her father, Dr. Milbank Johnson. She was attired in white-beaded Georgette and her tulle veil was arranged from an Egyptian-like head dress. Her shower bouquet was of orchids and ferns. Mrs. Leslie Webb was her sister's matron of honor and was gowned in champagne-colored Georgette with hat to match. Her bouquet was of multi-colored flowers.

The bridesmaids, Misses Mary Louise Nichols, Rosamond Craig, Louise Forve and Florence Marsh, were frocked in organdy, the skirts being of rainbow shades and the blouses of blue, pink, lavender and yellow respectively. Each girl carried a prayer book on which was her named embossed in gold.

Wedding Plans Changed.

Los Angeles society is to be disappointed in the change of plans for the wedding of Miss Dorothy Lindley and Robert Paine Fite. The ceremony is to take place Wednesday, September 10, but instead of being at St. John's Church at 8:30 o'clock as planned, Dr. George Davidson will read the service at 5 o'clock at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Lindley, parents of the bride-elect.

Invitations to the church and for a large reception to follow immediately after at the residence were addressed and ready to mail to several hundred friends, but because of the recent illness of Miss Dorothy, her parents found it advisable that there should be a quiet ceremony in the presence of the immediate family.

Mrs. Frank G. Fite, mother of the groom-to-be, and her daughter, Miss Lundy of Nashville, who have been at the Hotel Darby for some weeks, will leave for home the following day after the wedding. After October 1 the couple will be at home in the Mayfair apartments at 40 St. James Park.

Her only ornament was a string of pearls with a pendant of pearls, diamonds and sapphires, the gift of the groom. Her quaint bouquet was fashioned from Scotch heather and Bride roses. She was given away by her mother.

There were two bridesmaids, one attired in pale pink and the other in blue. They carried pink carnations and heather.

A Million Babies—and One Pair of Pink Cheeks

WHEN my doctor told me to give my baby Nestlé's Food because I couldn't nurse him, I said, "Have many babies been brought up on it?"

He smiled. "Right here in the United States" he said, "at this minute there are many thousands of babies keeping well and strong on Nestlé's. All over the world it's the same way—and that will give you some idea of how many babies have kept well on Nestlé's Food during the past fifty years."

And yet it wasn't all those millions of babies that convinced me. It was the pink cheeks of my own baby.

Nestlé's Milk Food is made out of pure milk, to which has been added just the right amount of cereal and of pure sugar. This is made into a white fluffy powder, which makes the curds of the milk easy to diges. You just add cold water, boil, and your baby has the food nearest to mother's milk—free from the germs of raw cow's milk—safe, clean—almost sure to bring him pink cheeks and a sturdy dimpled little body.

I found that the Nestlé Company likes to save babies and keep them well. They sent me free enough Nestlé's for 12 feedings and a very interesting and valuable Mother's Book about how to take care of babies. All you have to do is to fill out the coupon below.

Nestlé's is pure milk in powder form that is already modified and does not require the further addition of milk. Always pure and safe, always uniform, and free from the dangers of home modification, Nestlé's has stood the test of three generations and has today the largest sale of any baby food in the world.

FREE! Enough Nestlé's for 12 feedings. Send the coupon!

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE.

A Weekly News Letter from London.

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Aug. 19.—You wanted an Englishman at Washington; you have got one in Viscount Grey. If you met him in the Arctic circle or Terra del Fuego you would know at once he was English and a gentlemen. You might even take him, in spite of his fifty-seven years, as an Oxford graduate who has taken away degrees and brought away cups and ribbons as a doughty lawn tennis and cricket champion and all those prizes in athletics to which Englishmen of his class used to attach more importance than the triumphs in literature or mathematics.

There is in everything about him the look, demeanor and impression of the English university athlete. Though his fairly robust form is essentially slight, without a spare ounce of flesh, his walk has the still, quick stride of a man who tosses and catches balls with the lightning-like rapidity of the tennis court. His face has the regularity of a cameo and a rigidity of outline and still more an expression that would make him an ideal model for the sculptor or painter who wished to embody and express the English character with its excellencies and defects. The nose is acquiline, after the fashion which the Norman invaders with their strange persistency still preserve on the faces of all Englishmen of good family and ancient descent. The cheek bones are high, the mouth well shaped and firm, so also the chin, which, though not large, is firmness, even obstinacy, personified. The eyes are cold, blue and enigmatic, the complexion fresh though not high colored. The voices has a level coldness even in moments of intense excitement and historic utterances which manifests that particularly English characteristic, phlegmatic and passionless self-control.

LEISURELY TO THE EXTREME.

His character corresponds to the exterior. Whatever man's honor or veracity is questioned in England no man ever questioned either quality in Grey. It is in a sense that he thus embodies in the finest form what they regard as the highest virtues of their race, which accounts for the unanimous chorus of approval and even relief with which his appointment to the Washington embassy has brought forth among all Englishmen.

Another quality to be added is that this man with such singular gifts and appeal to the national sentiments always has been devoid of ambition. Gladstone, with his fiery anger and Celtic temperament found himself little in sympathy with this leisurely, phlegmatic and unhasting Saxon and used to accuse Grey of laziness. His own description of himself was given in private utterances to his friends in his youth that people always were telling him that the ball was at his foot to kick anywhere, but he did not care to kick the ball.

What success he has got in life has accordingly been almost thrust upon him. His ascendency over the House of Commons was extraordinary, apparently beyond all reasonable expectations, for he had none of those gifts of inspiring oratory such as Lloyd George or Churchill, nor that stateliness of phrase that makes the speeches of Asquith like extracts from a dialogue of Plato or an essay of Dean Swift. Grey never uttered a glowing or memorable sentence in his whole life. But standing up straight, making no gesture, not lifting his voice from its cold monotone, he never made a speech that did not sweep away all opposition. What he said seemed so clear, so cold, such common sense, such orderliness of mind and detachment, impartial judgment that any other course than that he advocated passed into the region of impossible things. His speech left the impression that his own conclusions were as inevitable as the processes of nature.

POWER PUZZLES MANY.

One not an Englishman like myself has often asked a little uncertainly whether these results of Grey's speeches were a sheer triumph of mind and not a triumph of manner and character, whether the stately pose and the handsome, typical Norman face, the suggestion of temperament remote from personal self-seeking or any of the ordinary devices of parliamentary orators were not the secret of the tremendous influence of his speeches rather than their mere intellectual qualities.

SELDOM HEARD IN HOUSE.

His popularity in the House of Commons was not won by any of the ordinary arts of public men, but rather in spite of his personal characteristics. He had some intimates, doubtless, but they were not among the rank and file in the House of Commons. He was the first Minister who ever dared to indulge in continual absence from the House of Commons. Immured in the Foreign Office and reading many hours daily dispatches from all parts of the world-wide British empire, he never came to his seat in the House of Commons except when he had questions to answer or a speech to make. Questions were allowed only on certain days, and never except on woman's suffrage, one of the few passionate ideals of this apparently cold-blooded, remote mind, did he make a speech on ordinary topics in a House of Commons debate. Though he might claim in the absence of the Prime Minister now and then to fulfill the dearly loved function of leading the House of Commons, Grey never led the House except on nights when he was left alone to defend his foreign policy. When he rushed down to vote on important divisions he never was once seen to indulge in the almost universal habit of friendly conversation between men dragging slowly through the weary process of voting.

FRIENDLY TO SPEAK TO.

To few men then outside his colleagues was Grey personally known, yet when you did speak to him you were surprised to find a friendly, frank, even rather shy man, and perhaps his shyness rather than his pride accounts for much of his extraordinary remoteness and loneliness amidst such a tempestuous and also comrade-like world as that of the House of Commons. I never saw him in either the dining or smoke room of the House of Commons, where even Lloyd George, in spite of his heavy duties and the glittering glory of the Premiership, occasionally dines and frequently takes his smoke.

It is known that Lord Grey for most of his life was quite a poor man, but this did not trouble a man of such ascetic simplicity in personal tastes. A great lover of fishing and nature, he used to take his week-end vacation by running down to a hut with two small rooms, which I have seen with my own eyes frequently, and his wife and himself lived on boxes of sardines and such modest canned food in the intervals of fishing in the beautiful rustic stream. There was significance in this modest home and the food of the powerful Foreign Minister of the British empire. This hut was in the grounds of a magnificent park, with a glorious old mansion which was then in possession of the enormously wealthy widow of Sam Lewis, the greatest and most successful Jewish moneylender that England ever saw.

LOSS OF WIFE A BLOW.

Lady Grey was the one known emotional point of Edward Grey's whole life. She was a brilliantly beautiful woman, with equally brilliant intellectual gifts, especially in conversation, and in contrast with her husband she was audaciously and often quite indiscreetly frank in her caustic comments on men and even women, with accordingly a host of adoring friends and some offended and estranged acquaintances. They had no children and were perhaps the more intimate friends and comrades, with a mutual adoration unbroken by one hour's estrangement or misunderstanding.

With her tragic death by a carriage accident what brilliant light relieved the general somberness of this man's life disappeared, and only in incessant work has he found such consolation as life leaves to one hopelessly bereaved, but I should add that nothing in word or look ever betrayed this or any other deeper emotions in this so typical Englishman, to whom the public manifestation of emotion would appear unmanliness, perhaps even bad manners.

His love of nature and knowledge of birds will be familiar to Americans by the many stories of his walks through the English countryside with Theodore Roosevelt. As to Ireland, Lord Grey's attitude has been consistent since Lloyd George took up home rule, and if Lloyd George wants any mediator between the estrangement of England and Irish sentiment, which Lloyd George's vacillations and tergiversations have produced, Grey is a most suitable mediator, but it will have to be on Grey's terms, for he is not a man to compromise, still less to desert principles, which his inflexible character never allows him to change or accommodate.

FARMS FOR SOLDIERS

What is the Best Way to Help the Movement?

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Aug. 6.—While everyone in and out of Congress is agreed that the soldier must have a farm if he wants one, considerable difficulty is being experienced in trying to decide upon the best plan by which he shall get it. Democrats and Republicans are vying with each other in an effort to please the soldier, and as a result of this rivalry the soldier is pretty sure to get almost anything that he wants within reason.

Several soldier land bills have been introduced in Congress, and others are being prepared for introduction. These bills vary greatly in their scheme of operation. There is the plan of Secretary Lane to reclaim millions of acres of unused land for farms for the soldiers, advancing a loan up to the amount of $2000 for improving and stocking purposes. Another bill, presented by Congressman Dick T. Morgan, of Oklahoma, would permit the soldier to obtain a loan of $4000 with which to purchase a farm or a homestead in the locality of his choice. A third measure is that introduced by Representative Clyde Kelly of Pennsylvania, which would have the United States government buy up great areas of farm, timber and mineral lands, build homes upon them, and lease them to the soldiers. The idea of this bill is to have the title to the lands remain in the government, so that speculation in them would be impossible.

Secretary Lane's bill seems to have gained the strongest support. It has the approval of President Wilson and has the backing of Representative Mondell, majority leader in the House. The measure was favorably reported out of the Public Land's Committee of the House the other day, and will be one of the first bills to receive consideration.

The Lane bill provides that the arid and cut-over lands shall be reclaimed by discharged soldiers and seamen, the men to be paid for their work. These men who do the reclamation work will have first call upon the improved land. The bill stipulates that "the Secretary may, through agreement with the soldiers, make provision for necessary improvements, but the contribution from the fund shall in no single case exceed $1200, nor in excess of three-quarters of the cost of the improvements." This money is to be repaid to the government within a period not to exceed twenty years at an interest rate of 4 per cent.

Under the terms of the measure, the Secretary is also authorized to make short-time loans up to the amount of $800 to a soldier settler for the purchase of necessary live stock and equipment. Repayment of such loans must be made during a period of five years at an interest rate of 4 per cent. Altogether a soldier settler would be able to borrow $2000 to improve and stock his farm.

All the soldier will have to pay for the land will be the actual cost of reclaiming it, according to the Lane plan. Upon entering into a contract for the purchase of the land, the soldier must make his first payment of 5 per cent. of the sale price. The balance shall be paid in amortizing payments, extending over a period not to exceed forty years. The farms will range in size from a fruit farm of thirty or forty acres to a stock farm of 160 acres.

Secretary Lane has received post cards and letters from 107,000 men in which they have asked all sorts of questions regarding his land proposition. A large percentage of these letters were from young men who lived in towns and cities before the war, and who expressed themselves as being anxious to settle down on a farm. A goodly number were from boys raised on farms who want to have farms of their own.

what evidence there was that the soldiers engaged in the great war were interested in the plan for providing them with farms, Secretary Lane took a poll of the officers ranking above the grade of captain still in the service, to find out their views and those of the men under them. The replies of the officers have convinced the Secretary that there is a strong demand for his plan, and that thousands of young men who fought in defense of their country now want the chance to own farms.

One reply received by the Secretary was from Maj.-Gen. Mark L. Hersey, Fourth Division, A.E.F., Germany. Out of 23,265 officers and men in his division, 4595 expressed themselves as interested in the plan. The largest percentage of would-be farmers was found among the men in the infantry, while the lowest percentage was among the headquarters troops.

Maj. R. M. Sawbridge, Thirteenth Field Artillery, Ahrweiler, Germany, in replying to Secretary Lane, said: "It now develops that there are sixty-five men in the battalion who are open to a farm proposition, or about 25 per cent. of the entire personnel. As to the desirability of your plan, it is difficult to conceive of opposition to it. The past experience of your department in the reclamation of land should make it evident that whether for men of the service or for others, the turning of arid or deforested areas into productive farms is of the greatest value to the country at large."

Col. William N. Haskell of the American relief mission to Rumania, writing from Bucharest, said: "No man who owns land will ever be a Bolshevist. Here in Rumania I am in close touch with Bolshevism; it is to the east of us in Bessarabia, to the west of us in Hungary and to the north of us in Russia. This country is opposed to Bolshevism for the simple reason that four-fifths of the population are attached to the soil; it is an agricultural country."

In all, Secretary Lane received several thousand answers from officers and all gave unqualified indorsement to his plan.

In opposition to Secretary Lane's scheme for locating soldiers on farms is the plan of Congressman Morgan. His bill proposes to promote a government corporation with $100,000,000 capital, subscribed by the Federal government. The corporation would be authorized to make loans up to $4000 to any honorably discharged soldier, sailor or marine, to be used in the purchase of a home. The location would depend upon the soldier himself. The loans would be carried by the government for a period not exceeding sixty years, with interest at the rate of 3½ per cent. The amount of the loan would equal the full appraised value of the home and improvements. The chief funds for financing the proposition would be obtained through the issue and sale of bonds by the corporation. To insure the sale of these bonds at a low rate of interest and in large quantities the government would guarantee the payment of both principal and interest and the bonds would be free from taxation.

If the Morgan bill were adopted more than $16,000,000,000 would have to be raised in bonds to finance the project.

In taking steps to provide farms for discharged soldiers the United States is following in the footsteps of Australia and Canada. In Australia the idea of providing a discharged soldier with a farm was worked out before the end of the war, so that when the Australians who fought in France returned home they could immediately apply for a farm in any one of the six Australian states. The discharged Australian could either secure a farm improved and ready for settlement and cultivation, or find a state board ready to lend him money to purchase one, give him practical instructions in farming and advice and direction in improving and cultivating his farm. The State of Queensland purchased 500,000 acres of privately owned land for discharged soldiers. The soldier can borrow $2500 for the erection of buildings and $3500 for equipment. He has forty years' time in which to repay the improvement loans and twenty-five years' time to pay the equipment loan at 3½ to 5 per cent.

The state of Victoria has provided irrigable lands and wheat-growing lands and has made available $11,250,000 with which to buy, subdivide and improve privately owned land. The state lends up to 75 per cent. of the value of permanent improvements and $2500 can be borrowed on thirty-one year's time. New South Wales has provided 1,500,000 acres for homestead entry by soldiers, the title to be a perpetual lease, the rent being 2½ per cent. on its capital value. The state will lend the settler $2500 to improve his home.

Canada has been equally generous to its soldiers. The Dominion government will lend a discharged soldier $2500 to improve his farm, at 5 per cent. interest, the money to be repaid in a period of twenty years. The province of Ontario will lend a soldier settler in the province $500 in addition, and some provinces will lend him up to $1500.

Taking into consideration what has been done for the returned soldier in Canada and Australia, it behooves our government, which has never been satisfied to be outdone by any other nation in the world in looking after its fighting men, to decide upon the means it intends to pursue in providing homes for those of our soldiers who want them.

TO SAVE HISTORIC STRUCTURE.

The first White House of the Confederacy, located in Montgomery, will not be destroyed. This announcement was made by Mrs. Belle Allen Ross, secretary of the First White House Association the other night, after she had returned from La Grange, where she closed a deal for the purchase of the house from the Danby estate.

It is understood the First White House Association only owns the building; but it is possible, with the assistance of the Alabama Legislature, which has appointed a committee of the Senate and House to see what could be done toward saving the property, an effort will be made to purchase the land on which the house is located.

Reports that the Alabama division of the Daughters of the Confederacy were trying to save the property were said by members of the First White House Association to be erroneous. The work was originally taken up by that body, but later the First White House Association was organized and chartered by the Legislature to take over the work. Since that time the association has been actively, but quietly at work with the result that it now owns the building, which has been saved to the people of the South as an historic structure.—[New Orleans Item.]

not spring into fame; his toward public recognition and delayed. But I recall those times, when debates dull and the House was near Lloyd George used to sit for in his corner seat listening the dreariest men and study fellows—and it is knowledge quite as much as his ener eloquence, which has been of his success. I first at a little dinner in the of Commons, twenty-six or seven years ago. He made across the table which I always remembered: "The best an unknown politician to known is to attack a big He will get many knockdown but he must jump up and the attack and never cease. public will take notice of remark I think was part conversation about the way Randolph Churchill had notoriety by his persistent onslaughts on old man Mr. Lloyd George fol the same tactics toward Mr. Chamberlain, then the fighter and strongest Min in Parliament. It was at the the South African War. The Welshman was opposed to that war; he was among those called pro-Boers, and was anything but popular with the mass of Britishers. He was denounced as a traitor to his country. I have heard men proclaim that he ought to be shot for delivering seditious speeches.

But the fierceness of his Welsh spirit was aroused. Night after night he attacked the Colonial Minister, as Mr. Chamberlain then was. He "found himself" as a speaker. He was vituperative, bitter; his words hissed and stung, and while the House raged with anger "Joe" lay back in his seat, his eyes closed, his sharp features alabaster in hue, pretending not to take the slightest notice. He was a master of invective himself and often did he swing the lash around the shoulders of the member for Carnavon. This did not daunt Lloyd George; it spurred him. He never held up in the fury of his criticism.

Then he developed a new vein, the deadly power of sarcasm. As I write I can almost see him, in a half-crouching position, his words soaked in vitriol, jeering, scoffing, piling ridicule on ridicule, arousing shouts of laughter at his cruel wit and wild protests against the unscrupulousness of many of his innuendoes—and all the time Chamberlain lay back as heedless as a mummy.

ATTACKS ON CHAMBERLAIN.

Though tremendously sincere, I fancy Lloyd George enjoyed the hate he aroused. He daringly went to preach anti-Chamberlainism in Mr. Chamberlain's home town, Birmingham, where "Joe" was worshipped. This was too much for the people of Birmingham. They threatened to lynch Lloyd George. They broke up his meeting, and he only escaped the fury of the mob by getting away disguised as a policeman.

When the South African War was over Mr. Lloyd George still pursued Mr. Chamberlain. Chamberlain launched his scheme of tariff reform, to induce England to abandon her free trade policy and adopt a policy of protecting British industries by the imposition of a scientific tariff, slight against British Dominions and heavy against foreign countries which tried to bar British goods by tariff walls—indeed a policy of retaliation.

Lloyd George was one of the chief free trade protagonists. Although the whole Liberal and Radical party were of the same mind he was the man who did most in combatting Mr. Chamberlain and his principal weapon was always ridicule and sarcasm. Of course, he was denounced as a demagogue, as a tickler of the groundlings, as an unscrupulous and unpatriotic little Welsh lawyer, as a fellow unworthy the attention of serious minded men.

When in 1906 the Unionists were defeated and the Liberals took office, England laughed when it was announced that Mr. Lloyd George was to be president of the Board of Trade. What did he know about trade—a man so unmethodical that he didn't know how to attend to his own correspondence! The appointment was treated as a joke; even his friends could not help smiling behind their fingers.

Yet he "made good;" he made very good. First the amiable Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman was his chief, and when "C-B" died and Mr. Asquith became Prime Minister Mr. Lloyd George took the second office in the government, that of Chancellor of the Exchequer. Soon he became a more dominant figure than Mr. Asquith. He proceeded to revolutionize taxation, loading burdens on the land-owners. Political foes saw in him a dangerous character. The advanced school of politicians saw he was a kindred soul to themselves. Half the country hailed him as a demigod; the other half spat out his name as a vicious setter of class against class.

His speeches in those days were all fire and fury; he was after the scalps of the wealthy; his language was often insulting. A notorious speech of his at Limehouse, in the east end of London, led to the coining of a word, "limehousing," meaning rudeness and vulgarity in debate.

"THE CLASSES" AGAINST HIM.

I remember the scene in 1910 when he introduced his dramatic budget in a speech lasting over four hours, which sounded the knell of the old order of domination, a wonderful, courageous, defiant oration, in the midst of which he broke down from mere physical exhaustion. There was a titanic struggle. All the "classes" were against the little Welshman. The House of Lords came near to smashing the Constitution. But he won.

The storm broke anew when he advanced his National Insurance Bill, a plan of compulsory insurance against unemployment, the main cost of which fell upon employers whether they were manufacturers or householders who employed "help." In all my political experience I can not remember any measure which set the whole of England by the ears as this compulsory insurance. There were leagues formed to deliberately defy the law. Again Mr. Lloyd George won.

He had the "masses" with him. But in every other circle his name was objurgated. One never went to a dinner party without the conversation turning to Mr. Lloyd George, to his brutality of speech, his mountebank caperings, his crime in advancing antagonism between different sections of the community, his evident purpose to rob everybody who had money and bring about the speedy ruin of industrial England. Some of the more sedate members of the government Liberal Party wagged their heads at the way "L.G." was setting the pace; but the more advanced wing of the party, the Radicals, the strong body of trade unionists, the Socialists, saw in him the instrument to bring their dreams to a realization.

Mr. Lloyd George gained his power by an alert knowledge of the drift of public opinion. Soundly democratic in instinct he was not tied to any hoary political formula. The requirements of today and tomorrow was the work of statesmen and not the adaptation of modern needs to any principles of half a century ago.

In one sense it may be said he had no principles; in another sense it can be said he had the best of principles, a sympathetic warm heart for all suffering, a determination that the toiler and the indigent aged were deserving of fullest consideration, a real affection for small nationalities, including his own of Wales, a hatred from sham and privilege. His methods were swift and sometimes crude; but he was always sincere. And he always won.

THEN CAME THE WAR.

Then came the war. When Germany threatened France the British Cabinet was divided in those tremulous days of late July, 1914, as to what course England should pursue. The majority was in favor of jumping to the aid of France. There was a strong minority, however, which hesitated, which held that the policy of the British was that of nonintervention. It should be remembered that the opposition in Parliament had long been preaching for preparedness against Germany, whose naval and military preparations were interpreted as a menace to Great Britain. The Liberals, particularly Mr. Lloyd George, had jeered at the Tories who saw "phantom armadas" crossing the North Sea to invade England. There were hours—we lived in momentous hours in London — when it looked as though there was going to be a ghastly schism in the Cabinet. Then Germany was guilty of the unparalleled crime and folly of outraging the neutrality of Belgium. In a moment the British Cabinet was united. The indignation of my countrymen was aflame. Britain served forty-eight hours' notice on Germany to get out of Belgium. As she did not it was Britain which declared war on Germany.

Impulsive, chivalrous, passionate under a sense of wrong to the weak, Mr. Lloyd George's hesitation changed to a fury of wrath against Germany. What happened later—Germany's subterfuge, her lying, her disobedience to the ordinary rules of humanity, her sins against the defenseless—accentuated his fervor. His speeches throughout Britain were like the speeding of the fiery cross.

It was a great moment in the history of the world—and it was a mighty occasion in the career of Mr. Lloyd George. Before the war he had been scorned as a Little Englander. Swift circumstances made him the Great Englander, and, as I believe history will prove, gave him the opportunity of becoming the greatest man in the world, for, notwithstanding the services to mankind by other statesmen, notably Mr. Woodrow Wilson, it was the sagacity, shrewdness and keen knowledge of affairs and men shown by the British Prime Minister at the Peace Conference in Paris which welded into actuality the hopes and ambitions of civilization.

When Britain, almost quixotically, declared war on Germany, she was absolutely unprepared for a great military expedition on the continent. Her army was insignificant and not well furnished. What troops there were hastened to France, and, facing overwhelming odds, the heroic but bloody retreat from Mons was the result. At the outbreak of hostilities Lord Haldane was Minister of War; but as he was supposed to have had German sympathies (indeed, in a peace-time speech he had declared Germany was his "spiritual home,") popular clamor both removed him and led to the appointment of Lord Kitchener of Khartoum in his place. Kitchener was the idol of the man in the street. His name was a magic slogan in raising a voluntary army of near 4,000,000 men before Britain adopted conscription. But Lord Kitchener was not a success as Minister of War. The task of "running the whole show" was too much for him; yet he was averse from delegating authority. There was muddling; there was insufficiency of shells; there were dark days when we were near our last shot.

BRITAIN UNPREPARED.

Most of the Cabinet stood in fear of Kitchener, for the public, not knowing the truth, adored him. Lloyd George had no fear of Kitchener nor indeed of any man. I have heard the whisper that there were stormy scenes between them when the Cabinet met at 10 Downing street. Lloyd George did not care a rap about the reputation of the individual. He has never had any solicitude for the feelings of anybody who seems to be blocking the way to what he considers to be the right course. He is appreciative, constantly eager to meet men who can assist, generous in his praise, ready to place immense powers in the hands of men whom he believes in; but he will readily fling a man aside if he fails expectations.

It would be a cruel thing to say there would have been a tragedy to British arms if Lord Kitchener had remained dictator of the army as he practically was when he went to the War Office as Minister. It is, however, not too much to say that it was Mr. Lloyd George who by his fearlessness avoided the possibility of tragedy. He contested with Kitchener in the Cabinet and the upshot was—long before Kitchener's lamentable death—that many of the duties of War Minister were delegated to other men. Mr. Lloyd George became Minister of Munitions.

Here another vein of the genius of the man revealed itself—organization. He called captains of industry together, got them into groups of munition production, rearranged profits, rearranged wages, provided that the ministry should "control" hundreds of the greatest concerns. He called to him men who had been his political opponents. He was frank with them; he got frankness and service in return. He did not dictate, nor dominate. He got the best out of men by letting them know he had confidence in them and when he told them what the country wanted they did it.

It took months before the whole of Britain was converted into a giant munition factory. Nothing was made which was not absolutely necessary for the prosecution of war. We British are a self-depreciatory people; we often made jokes about our own lack of organizing power. Yet to our own amazement we developed a nigh complete machine of war organization, providing munitions not only for our own army but for our Allies and for America. And the force behind it all was Mr. Lloyd George.

When it was seen advisable to have a coalition, on national government, Mr. Lloyd George worked with his old enemies Mr. Balfour, Mr. Bonar Law, Lord Curzon, Lord Milner. He was instrumental in getting trade unionists to relax some of their rules so that patriotic amateurs could work at the same benches with the trade unionists. When, owing to increased cost of living, there were demands for higher wages and threatened strikes, Mr. Lloyd George hastened down to the disturbed areas and secured a settlement. When compulsory military service was mooted there was the possibility of a revolt amongst English working men. It was Mr. Lloyd George's speeches which reminded them of the path of honor.

He was the clear thinking, strong man and though he was always willing to conciliate war-weary and war-racked men he never stood any nonsense. Many of his old associates thought he was drifting away; they did not like him hob-nobbing with Tories and capitalists; perhaps he showed too much love for the Empire to suit them. Anyway much distrust about his future as a radical politician began to manifest itself.

One of the causes of this was that practically everybody with whom he was formerly in antagonism, the landed classes, the capitalists, the middle classes, who inclined to the unionist party, whilst not accepting his political doctrines, recognized him as The Man to win the war. Those who had cursed him a few years before became his enthusiastic boosters.

All this time Mr. Asquith was Prime Minister. He was Mr. Lloyd George's chief. Mr. Asquith is a man of high dignity and noble attainments. But a feeling gradually spread throughout the country that as head of the government he was not showing the necessary "punch"—and the war was dragging on into years. All his colleagues had not the same tremendous energy as Mr. Lloyd George. Some ought to have been displaced, and he did not displace them. A belief grew up that he did not use the spur sufficiently.

Evidently Mr. Lloyd George came to the same conclusion. I have heard some people say he plotted Asquith's overthrow. That is nonsense except that he slowly and reluctantly came to the conclusion that Asquith, high principled though he was, was not the man to stimulate a tired and torn nation to the supreme effort. No doubt Mr. Lloyd George thought he himself was the man. There was no personal quarrel; but Lloyd George, as months went on and the war was indecisive, recognized that Asquith must cease to be Prime Minister. The time came when he must present an ultimatum; either he or Asquith must go. Asquith, like the courteous English gentleman he is, adopted the only course possible to avoid a conflict. He resigned.

BECOMES PRIME MINISTER.

Mr. Lloyd George became Prime Minister. He was hailed with a shout by the vast majority of the British people. But the old Liberals were angered. They had great esteem for Asquith and they alleged there had been foul play, and that Lloyd George had been a traitor, not to his country, but to his old colleagues. Mr. Asquith has never made a word of complaint. At the New Year there was a general election in Britain. Many of Mr. Lloyd George's old friends were now his enemies. At the polls Lloyd George had the greatest victory that has ever come to any British statesmen. The Asquithians, the extreme Radicals and the Socialists, were utterly routed. Mr. Asquith himself was defeated in a constituency which he had represented in Parliament for thirty years.

Mr. Lloyd George rides upon the storm. When the seas are tempestuous and the waters would engulf other men he mounts waves and directs them. Thus it would seem that circumstances have carried the British Prime Minister from a minor politician to a great imperialist.

Emotional and Celtic, he is influenced by the flood of public opinion, but in turn his personality has power over public opinion. He has the tenacity of a bulldog when he is convinced he is in the right. But he never concerns his mind about nonessentials. Sometimes he is accused of yielding where he is expected to stand firm, and it is said that he is an opportunist. I suppose he is an opportunist, but in the best meaning of the word; he makes use of opportunity; he will make any number of concessions until it would appear he had given away his case. He hasn't. He does not care who has the labels so long as he gets the goods.

And he is always gay humored, always with a twinkle in his eye, always gaining his way with an air of genial fellowship toward those who disagree with him, serious in great matters, but never taking himself too seriously. In the midst of grave crises, when it would be imagined such a statesman would be closeted with his principal advisers, you will read in the newspapers that Mr. Lloyd George spent yesterday playing golf at Walton Heath.

MASTERY OVER CONFERENCE.

The supreme qualities of "L. G." were shown during the Peace Conference. His characteristics are entirely different from those of Mr. Wilson and Mr. Clemenceau. Mr. Wilson has world views and is granite in conviction. Mr. Clemenceau thinks chiefly of France, is known as "the father of victory" by his countrymen and in forensics is called "the tiger."

America's President and France's Prime Minister have esteem for each other. But as both of them are adamant in their disposition, both with an inflexible spirit, it was in the very nature of things that frequently they would clash.

Those of us who were in Paris during the Peace Conference were constantly hearing stories of the two men reaching an impasse. I would not say, because somebody would probably contradict me, that if it had not been for Mr. Lloyd George the conference would have broken up during the first weeks, due apparently to irreconcilable differences. Yet it is now a matter of current history that when there was a deadlock it was invariably "L. G." who found the way out.

Again his personality, a mixture of amiability and astuteness, played a part. He was never irreconcilable. Persuasiveness, sweet reasonableness, concession, with the constant reminder that the world would never forgive the big five if they lacked unanimity, were his weapons.

The consequence was that frequently the outside world could not understand him. The people of Britain sometimes though he was lacking in firmness; it leaked out that he was not always backing France and the Parisian newspapers became critical; possibly in America there were some folk who thought that Lloyd George was too cunning for Wilson.

He was not cunning; he was truly sympathetic toward France; he never lost sight of the rights of the British empire. But he knew that the conference was not for the domination of any one power and that the very essence of agreement was concession.

Sometimes I used to meet him after he had a day of talk with Wilson and Clemenceau, and, over a cup of tea and a cigar he would be light-hearted and anecdotal. The conference has left its mark on other men. Mr. Lloyd George is as cheerful as a boy, but, always behind the smile and the laughing eyes is the calculating, weighing, accommodating brain, swift in the grasp of great problems and alert in devising solutions. In this respect it may quite truly be said that the peace treaty was a Lloyd George treaty.

What of his future? In British politics has he got so tied up with the Unionist party that he will have to abandon his old principles? Is he moving in a direction which is alienating him from the British proletariat and will the industrial classes sweep him from office and power at the next general election? These are the questions I am often asked in the United States.

Well, a great many of his present supporters are men who were formerly antagonistic and it is unquestionable that many men who accepted him as their champion in days gone by are now bitterly opposed to him.

But it must be borne in mind that in England the war destroyed the old political barriers; that foes and friends have for years been united in the same national cause; that although it is inevitable there will be rival camps the causes of dispute will be far other than the old problems; that the majority of the British people have no use for extremists whether of the reactionary or Bolshevist type; that many of the most ardent social reformers are to be found in the Unionist ranks now serving under Lloyd George; that there is growing up in the United Kingdom a great middle class party, level-headed, progressive, democratic to the core, a mass of quiet, but determined public opinion that faces the issues of the future with clear eyes—and there is no better evidence of this than the wonderful work, so little heralded to the outer world, but so pregnant in useful consequence, now being done by the British Ministry of Reconstruction.

Mr. Lloyd George is adaptive. He has a double sight in anticipating how the wheel of events will turn. He has no political principles in the manner of being chained to antiquated dogma. The expedient course is the right course. He seizes occasion on the wing. His gaze is ever turned forward. His heart is big and it is kind. He wins men to him by his fascination. When other men see only a bog of troubles before them, he sees the gleaming hills ahead. He finds the way for accomplishment. And when he speaks in that silver, undulating, cadenced Welsh voice of his, illuminating in phrase, rippling with mirth, tragic when drawing a picture of sadness, the mighty audience will laugh, and weep, and be under his spell.

The Prime Minister of Great Britain will have his ups and downs. Gusts of dissension will buffet his career. But he knows where he is traveling; he sights his goal and nothing can shake his pertinacity. He is 56 years of age, still comparatively young as the age of statesmen counts in England. He is not the kind of man to be cast derelict on political shoals—and he will continue to play a great part during the next quarter of a century in moulding the destiny of the British empire. He has confidence in himself.

STRANGE ANIMALS ONCE IN OREGON.

An interesting sidelight on the early history of Oregon at the time when the first ape-man stood erect and blinked his eyes at the sun is contained in an old letter from Prof. Condon of the University of Oregon, written thirty years ago to Mrs. Wallis Nash of Nashville, Or. The letter is an answer to some queries by Mrs. Nash in regard to the little three-toed horse, about the size of a good St. Bernard dog, which used to plod about in the Oregon marshes. Mrs. Nash found the letter a few days ago while looking through some old papers. Extracts from Prof. Condon's letter follow:

"There were in Oregon three or four species of these small horses. I have fragments of many individuals of several of these species. The one of which I have the most complete skeleton was about two feet high. He lived during the miocene tertiary times.

"My fossils would not warrant me in speaking of more than three hoofs on each foot; the center one on each foot being large and the side ones small. Each fetlock bone furnished him with what was an external hoof.

"Belonging to a later period than the miocene tertiary—that is, the pliocene—I have other horse remains. The older classification gives the name Hipparion to the pliocene horse. The side hoofs of this animal were still external, and therefore, to some extent, functional.

"Horses in Oregon, during the pliocene period, multiplied not only in numbers of individuals, but in species, varying in size until the horse proper, or equus, came on the stage with only rudimentary fragments of the metatarsal bones of the side hoofs provided for."—[Portland-Oregonian.

"NOT ENGLISH BUT AMERICAN"

Prof. Henry Mencken Teaches National Language.

Some Collegians Disapprove of His Theories.

Devoted Life to Studying its Various Dialects.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BALTIMORE (Md.) Aug. 26.—"Don't be afraid to use your native language, which is American, not English."

This is the behest to all Americans of Dr. Henry L. Mencken of this city, who has recently risen to unique fame as the first and only professor of the American language. In fact, he is a great deal more than that; he is the discoverer of our national tongue, the Christopher Columbus of Americanese. And like the fearless Christopher at the outset of his voyage, he faces some rough sailing. The comparison may be carried even further, for many of his fellow sailors on the good ship Language think he is cracked, and he may count himself lucky if the college professors and philologists do not make him walk the gang plank of shocked conservatism and drown in the Sea of Solemn Disapproval.

MENCKEN CREED.

The Mencken creed of linguistic Americanism is set forth in a volume boldly entitled "The American Language." Anticipating that nobody would read it, Mencken had the work published in a limited and numbered edition, but this already has been exhausted, and reviews of the book have appeared in a number of the most highbrow periodicals devoted to the science of language. These notices often register acute pain on the part of the reviewer, but non-the-less recognize the fact that Mencken has an idea and presents it in a plausible way. Prof. Mencken has devoted most of a long life to the study of the American language, and he has studied it, not in books, but in the place where it is found in all its purity and vigor; namely, on the street. Whenever he leaves his study for a brief constitutional, or on one of the errands of charity which occupy so much of his leisure, Prof. Mencken carries in the breast pocket of his Prince Albert, a note book and a pencil. If on the street car, for example, he overhears the conductor arguing with a passenger about the validity of a transfer in racy American argot, making the grammar of the good old English language jump through hoops and turn handsprings, spicing its vocabulary with bits of new and vivid slang, the learned professor pricks up his ears. He edges closer. The note book and pencil are surreptitiously produced, and the very latest and most spontaneous developments of the American language are forthwith recorded.

Many years of thiss ort of scientific eavesdropping have provided the savant with an enormous mass of pure Americanisms. In the quiet of his study, Prof. Mencken subjects these specimens to prolonged and heavy thought, bringing to bear upon them an analytical mind and an unrivalled erudition. These are the most important and revolutionary of his conclusions:

In the first place, the American language is one and fairly uniform from coast to coast, and from the Great Lakes to the Rio Grande. It is true that there are local dialects. It is true that Spanish influences the language in the Southwest, and Yiddish words creep into it from the East Side of New York. But Americans are always on the move and these localisms move with them. "Corral" is at home on Broadway, though it is a Spanish word, and a native of New Mexico may refer to money as "mazuma" without in the least suspecting that he has used Yiddish.

WHEN EXTREMES MEET.

The drummer from Boston and the one from San Francisco meet in a hotel lobby in Kasasasas.

"Le's go out and see if we can't rustle some booze in this burg," proposes the Californian.

"Nothing stirring; I'm on the wagon," says the virtuous one from Boston. And they understand each other perfectly, and you understand both of them, wherever you may live. But the conversation would be wholly unintelligible to an Englishman who had recently arrived in this country.

This, then, is the first and most important fact: there is an American language, which is current everywhere in the United States. It is a fact which has been overlooked by the American Dialect Society, and by numerous individual students who have devoted themselves to collecting local peculiarities of speech, while overlooking the grand and inspiring truth that we have a native tongue.

The second consideration for which Prof. Mencken solicits your attention is that the slang which we all use, which school marms and other pedagogues frown upon, which careful mothers chastise their children for using, which is excluded from our more formal literature and denied a place in most of our dictionaries, is, linguistically, the best thing we have. It enriches our language, making it more expressive; and expression is the only object of language. Furthermore, it shows that our language is young, alive and growing, and is one of the surest signs that we are still full of vitality as a nation.

Prof. Mencken compares us in this regard with England. The English do not invent nearly as much slang as we do; in fact they invent almost none. Moreover, the wise men of Great Britain are always inveighing against us for the use of slang. They complain that we are corrupting the King's English.

ENGLAND USES IT.

And yet, as Prof. Mencken conclusively shows, our slang is always getting into the English language as spoken in England. It is used over there because it is so useful. Eventually, some of it even appears in English dictionaries, where it is sometimes classified under the title "Americanism." But more often we are not even given credit for it.

Thus the English are caught by Prof. Mencken in the inconsistency of defaming our slang and using it at the same time.

He shows further, that in Shakespeare's time, when England was a young and vigorous country, she Pre-Release View of New Farrar Feature.

Fatty Arbuckle Special and "Miracle Man."

Premieres are becoming all the fashion in the screen world. Several will add special brightness to the silversheets this week, among them the Geraldine Farrar production, "The World and Its Woman," portraying conditions in Russia of the present. Another striking damatic attraction will be "The Miracle Man." For comedy headliner there will be Fatty Arbuckle's new special, "Back Stage."

There is a regular sunburst of locally new pictures along the Rialto, like Williams S. Hart's "Wagon Tracks," Wallace Reid's "The Valley of the Giants," Bryant Washburn's "A Very Good Young Man," Alice Brady's "Her Bridal night," and "Men, Women and Money" with Ethel Clayton and Lew Cody. Among the other stars are Norma Talmadge, Enid Bennett, Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Richard Bennett, Charlie Ray and Catherine Calvert, Bobby Harron and Lillian Gish, several of whom will be seen in revivals of their successes.

Geraldine Farrar and Lou Tellegen will make their initial screen appearance as co-stars at Clune's Auditorium commencing tomorrow. The Goldwyn production of "The World and Its Women," a dmaratic narrative of Russia of today will be presented for the first time on the silversheet. The story was written by Thompson Buchanan, author of "Civilian Clothes," and was directed by Frank Lloyd.

"The World and Its Woman" introduces Geraldine Farrar as an American girl in Russia and carries her life story from the time she was a child of 10, until, as a wom she escapes from the turmoil of political intrigue with which she has been surrounded, to make her way to America with the man of her choice, Prince Michel, acted by l Tellegen.

Supporting the stars are Naomi Childers, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Alec B. Francis, Rose Dione, May Giraci, Francis Marion, W. Lawson Butt and others. In one scene more than 2000 extras were used.

A prologue, said to be original in conception, will precede the picture. A special musical score has been arranged.

Grauman's.

Two special film productions will be on the Grauman programme this week. Thomas H. Ince will present "The Virtuous Thief," a Paramount in which is unfolded an intensely dramatic story of domestic entanglements. The other feature will be a pre-release national premier of "Back Stage," Fatty Arbuckle's first comedy under his new Paramount contract.

"Back Stage" is a burlesque on some of the most venerable of classic dramas, including the Greek drama and Shakespeare. The supporting cast includes Buster Keaton, Molly Malone and Albert St. John.

A Ball Room Dansant, directed by H. S. Linne, a new departure in musical numbers specially prepared by Arthur Kay, conductor of Grauman's Symphony Orchestra, two new solos by Milton Charles at the organ, and other features will complete the elaborate programme.

Kinema.

The story of "The Miracle Man" which opens today at the Kinema, deals with a notorious band of crooks operating in New York's Chinatown. Hearing of an ancient patriarch living out in the country and reputed to heal the sick and the crippled, they conceive the idea of using the old man's reputation for a gigantic swindle scheme. With this purpose in view they visit the Miracle Man. Then commences a transformation in the character of these crooks that forms one of the most fascinating stories of all time. The photoplay is founded on the stage success written by George M. Cohan.

From the sordid slums of Chinatown, New York, to the grandeur of high mountains and the ocean, the scenes and settings of "The Miracle Man" are said to be a continuous succession of beautiful and realistic effects.

The cast includes Thomas Meighan, Betty Compson, Lon Chaney, Joseph Dowling, Elinor Fair, J. M. Dumont, and others of high ability.

The Kinema Concert Orchestra has been specially enlarged for the presentation of Tucker's production. A musical score effectively augmenting the picture has also been arranged. A prologue will precede each showing.

New natural color prisma films and other added attractions are on the bill.

Clune's Broadway.

Wallace Reid in Capt. Peter B. Kyne's story of the wonderful California Redwoods, "The Valley of the Giants," will head the bill at Clune's Broadway, starting today.

There are many big scenes in the picture, and real thrills. One of the breath-taking incidents is the wild dash of a runaway lumber train down the steep mountain side. The freightened passengers in the caboose are rescued just as the train itself plunges over the steep embankment.

"The Valley of the Giants" was published in serial form in the Red Book.

The cast supporting Reid includes Grace Darmond, Charles Ogle, Noah Beery, Guy Oliver, Kay Laurel, Virginia Foltz, Will Brunton and Alice Taaffe.

Augmenting the Reid feature are several interesting extras, including the tenth episode of the Houdini serial.

Tally's.

Alice Brady will be seen in a zippy farce, "His Bridal Night," beginning tomorrow at Tally's. It is a story of twins and Alice Brady is the "twins." Miss Brady gives a characterization of two girls alike in age and appearance, but totally different in disposition. One is demure, thoughtful and conscientious, the other vivacious, headstrong and a bit wild. One of the girls is engaged to be married and her husband-to-be, on his wedding night, runs away with the wrong twin. Then the excitement begins.

"Ghost Coasts" is the title of the "Outing Chester" picture to show.

Alhambra.

Ethel Clayton, as a small town girl thrown suddenly into the vortex of high society life, where she becomes a near adventuress, living by her wits and beauty, and Lew Cody, as a millionaire cynic, who believes that every woman regardless of her social standing has a price, are the stars of Cosmo Hamilton's daring story, "Men, Women and Money," which is to open at the Alhambra Theater today.

The heroine is the daughter of worshiping parents, who stint and starve themselves in order that she may have the advantages that were denied them in their youth, and she thoughtlessly allows them to shower her with the good things of life and gradually drifts into the fastest New York set. Her adventures and trials, and finally her romance, which nearly passes her by, furnish the play's theme.

The stars are surrounded by Irving Cummings, Zasu Pitts, James Neill, Winifred Greenwood, Jane Wolfe, Sylvia Ashton and Edna Mae Cooper.

California.

William S. Hart's production, "Wagon Tracks," written by C. Gardner Sullivan, will open at the California Theater tomorrow. "Wagon Tracks" is full of historical interest, having to do with the experiences of a leader of the vast caravans of folk who plodded across the prairie via the old Santa Fe trail in the fifties. The play has a strong thread of romance, Jane Novak being the girl in the case. There are all the strange figures of the early era when men had to be strong in mind and muscle to win out against the tides that swept westward.

Another special on the new programme is the second of the Campbell comedies, featuring Joe Martin. The near-human ape is seen in a concoction called "The Jazz Monkey," said to be even more amusing that his first starring vehicle.

The California Colonial Trio will offer selections as a part of the musical programme.

Victory.

A typically amazing Washburn play will be presented beginning today at the Victory Theater, in "A Very Good Young Man."

The picture was directed by Donald Crips. It concerns a young man whose great and only fault in the eyes of the girl he wanted to marry was that he was too good. Driven to desperation by the girl's attitude, the boy gathers up a bag of the proverbial wild oats and heads for the garden of easy love. He falls a ready victim to a vampish hula dancer, and in the intoxication of her charms quite forgets "the girl," who suddenly discovers him in the very midst of his revel. One thing leads to another. He becomes bad, then worse. Finally, when he gives up the job of "bad boy" he finds the girl very reconciled to his ways, and, of course, everything ends happily.

The fourth of the Craig Kennedy detective pictures, titled "The Dungeon," is a feature, with Herbert Rawlinson.

Symphony.

The headline attraction at the Symphony Theater commencing today, will be Norma Talmadge in "The Social Secretary." This picture was one of Miss Talmadge's notable early successes.

The story deals with modern society and relates the heroism of a girl who, ill-treated by the world, sacrifices herself to save another girl threatened with disgrace. Her sacrifice, however, has a happy outcome for it brings her the man she loves. In Miss Talmadge's support appear Kate Lester and Gladden James.

The latest Christie comedy, "Love—In a Hurry," and other short subjects of timely interest are also on the bill.

Palace.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, so long absent from the screen, make their return this week at the Palace in a thrill drama entitled "Daring Hearts."

One of the strongest features of the picture is the large number of airplane scenes in which daring aviators perform some of the most difficult feats. The cast supporting the stars includes Jean Paige, L. Rogers Lytton, and others.

Another feature is the showing of Larry Semon's comedy "Between the Acts" which is said to be one of his best.

Mason.

"The End of the Road" starring Richard Bennett, begins the last week of its engagement at the Mason Operahouse today. The final performance will be given Saturday night. There will be two performances daily throughout the week.

Such a production as "The End of the Road," which deals with the danger of constamination through sex relationships, will always be judged from two opposed points of view. Those who do not believe in the hypothesis on which it is based will condemn it out and out. Those who accept it as sound principle will estimate its value by its apparent ability to accomplish its frankly avowed purpose. Considered from this latter point of view, it is accepted as one of the most valuable motion pictures of the kind.

The story of "The End of the Road" was conceived by Dr. Katherine Bement Davis, former commissioned of corrections of New York City and scenarioized in collaboration with E. H. Griffith, who directed the production.

Garrick.

Co-operating in the nation-wide drive for better pictures being conducted this week by Paramount-Artcraft, Manager Claude E. Halsell of the Garrick has secured the newest and best Paramount-Artcraft release, "The Career of Katherine Bush." The picture, which starts today, deals with Katherine Bush, who belongs to a plain, dull English family. She takes a position as a typist for a money lender and meets Lord Algernod Fitz-Rufus, a dashing young man about town. She uses him to learn the ways of a gentleman, and after a companionship of several weeks, realising Fitz-Rufus loves her and that marriage might interfere with the brilliant career she had mapped out, she refuses his hand.

Then she accepts a position as secretary to Lady Sarah Garribardine, and there meets a nephew of her employer, a young man who is unhappily married. Unusual complications follow.

The story is by Elinor Glynn and the leading role is taken by Catherine Calvert.

Quinn's Rialto.

Charlie Ray's popular soldier life feature, "Hay Foot, Straw Foot," will show at Quinn's Rialto Theater this week. This proved one of Ray's most notable successes at its recent first presentation in this city.

"Hay Foot, Straw Foot" is not a war play, but it is an admirable picture of the amusing phases of soldier life, especially during the breaking in days of the training. Ray gets many laughs out of the comedy situations.

Other interesting attractions are featured on the bill.

De Luxe.

Bobbie Harron, Lillian Gish and "Cutie Beautiful" will be the trio of stars at the De Luxe today and tomorrow. Griffith's appealing story, "True Heart Susie" is to be shown.

The picture portrays the constrasted characters of two girl types, the simple and true, and the frivolous. Miss Gish has the role of the faithful girl of the countryside, who remains the staunch friend of the ambitious young man even after he marries to a light-hearted city charmer, portrayed by Clarine Seymour.

Bobbie Harron is the young man of ambitions, who becomes infatuated with the vivacious belle from the big city, and marries her, but later realizes the realness of the affection of his boyhood companion.

PLAYCRAFTERS TO MEET.

The Playcrafters will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in room 435, Blanchard Hall. Miss Abbie Simmons will read for criticism and discussion, a three-act play dealing with women and their activities in all ages.

NEW BILLS AT THE THEATERS.

"Heart of Wetona" is a Stock Attraction.

"Time, Place and Girl" to Have Revival.

"Civilian Clothes" is Near Hundred Mark.

A new play, a new musical comedy and changed vaudeville bills will lend brightness to the stage attractions of the week. The play is "The Heart of Wetona," in which Lewis Stone, Florence Oakley and Byron Beasley will have especially suitable roles. The new musical comedy is "The Time, the Place and the Girl," a popular success of some years ago which is to have a revival. Its music is of delectable quality. The vaudeville acts of the week have all the mirth and melody which go to make good summer entertainment. "Civilian Clothes" will soon pass the hundred mark in its performance record.

Majestic.

"The Heart of Wetona," the David Belasco-Charles Frohman success, will it is said, give Florence Oakley her best role since the reopening of the Majestic by Thomas Wikes' company. The George Scarborough drama will have its first performance tonight, with Lewis S. Stone in the character of the Indian agent.

The story concerns the betrayal of Wetona, the Indian maid born of an Indian father and white mother, by the son of a preacher and of her ultimate disillusionment, the revenge taken on the white man by the tribe and of the girl's search for happiness. She finds it, of course, in the arms of Stone. The romance is a pretty one, enlivened at times with melodrama of a thrilling nature.

Byron Beasley will play Quannah, the chieftain and father of Wetona. Donald Stuart, George Pearce, Alice Bromley Wilson, David M. Hartford, Bettie Wales, Grace Morse and others appear.

Morosco.

The one hundredth performance of "Civilian Clothes" will be given this week, and it is estimated that considerably more than 100,000 persons have already seen this comedy success.

The great popularity of the new play is due in a great measure to its ultra-modern vein of philasaphy. The play begins where the war left off, it is the first exposition of the new conditions.

Clyde Fillmore, a clever young Eastern actor, is making the impression of his career in the leading role. Miss Eleanor Woodruff, leading lady, is also adding to her laurels.

Orpheum.

Heading the Orpheum bill this week Emma Haig and Jack Waldron will be seen in their own original 1919 conception of song and dance. Miss Haig is from the Follies. Waldron has lately returned from service in France with the Seventy-seventh Division.

William L. Gibson and Regina Connelli are announced to appear in Aaron Hoffman's comedy, "The Honeymoon," said to be replete with humor.

Mixing witticisms with music ranging from popular to classical compositions is the forte of Oscar Loraine, who bills himself, "The Violin Nuttist." Others are Bill Bailey and Lynn Cowan, the banjoker and the songster, formerly with Blossom Seeley, but now in their own act, who are assisted by Estelle Davis; Millicent Mower, the "spirit of music," and the holdovers, Pianoville, "Smiling" Billy Mason and Alice Forrest and Harry Watson, Jr.

Hippodrome.

Dorothy Green and Arthur Ashley come to the Hippodrome Sunday for three days in "The Praise Agent" a light film comedy.

The Winter Garden Four top the vaudeville show in harmony and comedy singing. Clara Theodoro's Trio are amusing gymnasts, while Logan Dunn and Hazel in "Two Nuts and a Kernal" have a surprise. Davis and McCoy are nut comedians, the Church Sisters are known as the dancing banjo girls, and Jim and Joe Freeman in "The Recruit and the Wop" have a laughable talking skit.

Pelton's Burbank.

Remember that song, "Hello, Hello, It's a Different Girl Again," which had a run some several years ago. That's one of the musical hits of "The Time, the Place and the Girl" which opens this afternoon at Pelton's Burbank. They're going to include a number of the popular selections from the piece as well as some up-to-date novelties in the musical programme.

"The Time, the Place and the Girl" is the third show presented at the Burbank since its reopening. Both "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" and "The Yankee Prince," the two previous offerings, have had a two-weeks' run. And it is expected that the new show will keep pace with the others, as it was a distinct success when originally presented.

New costumes, and scenery are to add color to the production.

Pantages.

Primrose Minstrels, the organization made famous by the noted blackface entertainer and of which he was the head until his last illness, will be the headliner at Pantages, beginning tomorrow. Mrs. George Primrose acts as interlocuter and the end men are John Goss, Jimmie O'Dea, E. Booth Platt, Dan Haley, Richard Roberts and Harry Stevers. It is announced that a regular old-time minstrel performance will be given. The Revue de Luxe, as an added attraction, presents girls and a man in instrumental and vocal solos, duets, trios and ensembles. Others on the bill are Joan Hardcastle and company in terpsichorean novelties, including Greek dances, a sunrise dance, bathing girls' dance and others; Leroy & Dhesdner in a singing and dancing sketch; Mlle. Nina Booth, offering old-time melodies on the banjo; Booth & Leander in a comedy bicycle act, called "Look at it Now;" and a new Harold Lloyd film comedy.

FOUND THE ORIENT LESS HAZARDOUS.

ETHEL CLAYTON SAYS THAT POLISHED FLOORS ARE MORE DANGEROUS.

When Ethel Clayton, Lasky star, returned from her tour of the Orient, she announced that she had made a vow to spend all the rest of her life within the borders of her own country. She had encountered some wild experiences overseas, and for many long weeks was known as the "lost star of the silver screen."

Recent happenings, however, have led her to believe that she will be safer in the Orient than she is right at home.

Though she had a stormy time of it while across the Pacific, the Paramount-Artcraft star returned in the very best of health. A short time ago she and her mother and brother moved into a new home in Hollywood. They were just settled down to enjoy the simple life and Miss Clayton was blissfully strolling through the various rooms to see just how quiet and peaceful life could be. The mother was reclining in the porch swing, and the star's brother was lounging in his den.

A terrifying crash brought them up standing. They ran headlong to the source of the noise, and there was Miss Clayton prostrate on the floor. She had fallen over a rolled-up rug. She was not herself for several days, and while she was tending her bruised face she had an abundance of time to cogitate on the relative perils of hazardous trips through the Orient and a life of peace in her own home. And she was inclined to break at once the vow she made when she returned to her own country.

FATTY SHEDS TEARS OVER SHAKESPEARE.

IT HURT HIM TO BURLESQUE THE BARD IN HIS NEW COMEDY.

Fatty Arbuckle admits to a love for Shakespeare, and says that it almost broke his heart to burlesque the dramatist in his comedy, "Back Stage," which is to have its premiere at Grauman's this week.

In the following feeling manner does Fatty speak of his admiration for the Bard of Avon: "All my fat little life, I have been an ardent Shakespearean scholar, unbeknownst, as it were, to the world without. Many times in early boyhood I would carefully drape my enbonpoint over some grassy knoll, carefully arrange my chins in some luxuriously restful way, and proceed to transport myself into the past with Romeo and Marc Antony, Antonio and Hamlet. I used to picture myself as Romeo.

"Now with all my reverence for Shakespeare I am obliged to burlesque Antony, Othello, Romeo and other characters, merely for the sake of earning a living by pleasing the laughter-hungry masses. Probably the hardest blow to an already broken heart is that I have to see many of my beloved Shakespearean characters a la Al. St. John. Ah, if Shakespeare himself, like Hamlet, should roam the earth again, and see some loved child of his brain wearing the gross contour and the supremely terrible face of Al St. John."

Roscoe has raved so much about his fall from grace, that Sid Grauman has offered to pour balm on his wounded heart by allowing him to conduct the symphony orchestra during the presentation of "Back Stage." And Fatty says he may accept.

PEPPYGRAMS BY FILM STARS.

Here are some of the bits of wisdom and wit from the lips of your favorite film stars.

Bryant Washburn: You can lead a girl with baby blue eyes before the camera, but you can't make her act.

Wanda Hawley: Motion pictures may be silent drama, but not when an extra looks in the camera.

Maj. Robert Warwick: Sherman said something about war; he might have included mob scenes.

Mary MacLaren: Smile in the face of difficulties and you can laugh when things go right.

Fatty Arbuckle: Nobody loves a fat man—unless he's in trouble.

Gloria Swanson: To be great is to be misunderstood; but I'm willing.

Donald Crisp: A director is paid to think, but no law stipulates that he should do all the thinking.

George Melford: The ripest fruit falls first, says Shakespeare. Sometimes it is the greenest.

Theodore Roberts: Society is an incubator which vainly endeavors to hatch peacocks from rotten eggs.

Margaret Loomis: She who hesitates is bossed.

Wallace Reid: Speed on, oh dark blue racing car, speed on!

Bebe Daniels: Hitch your wagon to a star—if he's not marcel-waved.

Raymond Hatton: Speaking of race problems, there's the Pacific Coast League race.

MIDGET ELEPHANTS APPEAR IN FILM.

Donald Crisp, director of "It Pays to Advertise," the Bryant Washburn picture now being produced at the Lasky studio, was seeking some unusual means of advertising "Thirteen Soap," which is a feature of the story. To be in keeping with the modern tone of the picture it was necessary to find something out of the ordinary. It so happened that Singer's Midgets were playing at a local vaudeville theater and were unable to get out of town owing to the car strike and it was decided to secure from them a number of midget elephants employed in their act. These small pachyderms, properly caparisoned with huge banners advertising "Thirteen Soap," were used in the scenes and paraded through some of the downtown streets, much to the amusement of the public, who thought that a Lilliputian circus was in town.

MANY PARAMOUNT PICTURES BILLED.

SPECIAL CAMPAIGN SHOWS EFFECTS IN OFFERINGS OF WEEK.

The motion-picture drive that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has launched is revealed in the fact that more than fifty local theaters are playing the Paramount Artcraft programme. Among them are Grauman's, where Vivian Martin in "The Virtuous Thief" will be shown; the Kinema Theater, playing George Loane Tucker's production of the "Miracle Man;" Clune's Broadway Theater, where Wallace Reid breaks into the celluloid in his greatest success, "The Valley of the Giants;" California Theater, with William S. Hart in "Wagon Track;" the Alhambra, where Ethel Clayton is appearing in "Men, Women and Money," and the Victory, which will show Bryant Washburn, in "A Very Good Young Man." Coincident with Paramount-Artcraft week, the film company is inaugurating its selective booking plan.

UNUSUAL SETTING IN GOLDWYN PLAY.

One of the most solid and true-to-detail settings probably ever constructed for a motion picture was the huge street scene, occupying over three acres at the Goldwyn studios, used in staging the mob scenes in Geraldine Farrar's latest production, "The World and Its Woman," which is to show at Clune's Auditorium this week. It was built on solid concrete foundations, with heavy timber throughout. The street proper was graded, oiled and covered with light gravel. The sidewalks were laid with cement. The walls of the buildings, several of which were over fifty feet tall, were covered with genuine plaster, button-lath being used. This style of lath is used only for permanent buildings, and construction men wondered at its being used by the Goldwyn company.

FOUR PLAYERS FOR STRAND COMEDIES.

Beginning a new series of Strand comedies, the Southern California Producing Company has formed a stock company around four leading players, who will appear together in pairs in each alternate picture. Gertrude Selby and Katharine Lewis are announced as the two featured feminine stars in the new releases. Harry Depp and James Liddy are the juvenile men.

Seven of the new series of Strand comedies are already produced or are in production at the Strand studio. Miss Selby, who was formerly a leading woman in dramatic productions and in comedies, appears with Depp in the first of a new series entitled "Betty and the Boys." In the second release, "Good Gracious Grace," Miss Lewis, and Mr. Liddy, formerly leading man with Kolb and Dill, are featured. The third and fourth releases will present Miss Selby and Mr. Depp together, while the next two pictures will present Miss Lewis and Mr. Liddy in the leading roles.

One of the forthcoming releases, it is expected, will include all four of the players.

ZASU SAYS LEAVE WELL ENOUGH ALONE.

"Sometimes 'tis well to let well enough alone," ZaSu Pitts ruefully reminisced the other day, and explained that she drew her philosophic remark from the following experience:

"Passing one of the picture theaters in Hollywood one day with two friends we noticed an announcement of one of the latest Brentwood pictures in big letters, reading, 'SaZu Pitts in "Better Times."' I was too thrilled by the appearance of what was intended to be my name to notice or even to care much how it was spelled. One of my friends, however, thinking it was too bad that the spelling shouldn't be correct in my home town, insisted on stopping and asking the young lady at the box office if it would be too much trouble to have the letters S and Z transposed to make Zasu, as I was christened.

"The box office girl assured us it should be, but happening to pass the theater an hour or so later, I blinked and gulped as I finally realized that my name had been eliminated altogether, and the sign made to read, 'All-star Cast in "Better Times."' Now do you wonder that I say, 'Let well enough alone?'"

GERALDINE FARRAR NOW ECONOMIZES.

Geraldine Farrar of all people is economizing. It is all on account of her extravagant investment in clothes when she left New York to come to the Goldwyn studios. Eighty thousand dollars' worth of Paris frocks, hats and coats was packed into thirty-four trunks, and the other day when she made her last payment she announced the fact with almost a quiver in her voice. "Isn't it dreadful!" she exclaimed, "but I couldn't help it because I was so glad to return to pictures. From now on it will be nothing but rags, I vow."

Proof of the diva's remark is found in the fact that to date none of her associates at the Goldwyn studios has seen her wear the same gown, wrap or hat more than once, and she never wears for personal use what she dons for screen work.

WOULDN'T LET THE MAN KID HIS ACT.

"Smiling" Bill Parsons while busily engaged in trouping all over the national stage in the interests of his last comedy "Oh, Bill Behave" stopped in the middle of a scene, and cocking his ear on one side listened intently.

"What the deuce is the matter, Bill?" queried Director Harry Edwards, "that business isn't in the script."

"I know it," replied "Smiling" William, "and neither is that noise I hear."

He walked over to the side lines where several suitcase actors were sitting, and proceeded to investigate the cause of the disturbance. He was on the point of giving up his search when one old man piped up.

"Maybe you heard me, Mr. Parsons. "I've got asthma awfully bad and once in a while I make a funny noise."

"That's what it was, all right," replied Bill. "I don't care as long as it's asthma, but I thought someone was hissing my act."

ALICE LAKE'S FILM SCHOOLING IN FILMS.

"Do you know what my idea of a wonderful time is?" asked Alice Lake at the Metro studio recently. And then the clever little actress explained the source of her dramatic talent.

"I just love these picture shows—the 5-cent kind that 'ain't no more.' Where they have cowboy heroes and wicked sheriffs and and double-crossing vilyuns and wirestappers and racing express trains bandits and beautiful maidens in distress and custard pies and beautiful mush and a tin-paniano for orchestra!"

"There's no kick to the cheap picture show nowadays," continued Miss Lake brightly. "It's like our near-but-yet-so-far beer—wonderful if you are a hound for water. It's because the high class show shows the real thrillers now. The producers learned that the good, old spine shiver has a worldwide appeal, and they're putting them in the best houses.

"But those good old days—it wasn't so very long ago at that—I'd stay in a show all afternoon and sometimes at the exciting moments I'd jump on my chair and root for the hero. But the best fun came after the show, at home. Then I'd act the whole thing over again and play every part myself."

In a Dramatic Story of Pioneers.

William S. Hart.

PHANTOMS OF THE DESERT.

desert heat didn't matter. The fur cap was simply the standard dress of the period."

Hart is, perhaps, the only man in the picture business who could properly visualized a concrete type to portray the entranceof the early pioneer. He knows all the angles on the western pioneer, because first of all he has the western spirit within himself, and second, because during his experience he has come into contact with no end of characters who really were on the ground when western civilization was born.

Hart can tell you anecdotes by the hour of the good men and the "bad men" who helped make pioneer history. He is a sort of encyclopedia of the life which men like Mark Twain write about in his "Roughing It." In "Wagon Tracks," he has endeavored to tell the story of a trail to the West, which perhaps has not been so romantically colored as the narratives of the more northern routes, but in which he has found just as much of romance, and perhaps more of atmosphere

NEW BOOKING PLAN.

Famous Players Launch Their New Selective Project.

The opening of National Paramount-Artcraft Week by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will take place tomorrow. Over 150 theaters in Southern California and Arizona will play this programme, it is stated.

"This is the biggest drive that has ever been started for the betterment of the industry," said Cecil B. De Mille, director-general of Famous Player-Lasky Corporation, while conversing on the subject yesterday. "The selective booking plan means more richly produced and more thoroughly finished pictures, as well as stories better known to the public.

Harry Ballance, branch manager of the local exchange, with the accredited aid of a loyal staff succeeded in covering all outlying territory by truck. These trucks were equipped with two drivers so they could be driven night and day in order to reach the mountain territory of Arizona.

FOX DIRECTOR TO SACRAMENTO FAIR.

Scott Dunlap and his photographer, George Schneiderman, of the William Fox studios in Hollywood, have gone to the State fair at Sacramento to photograph one of the most important races of the meet for a picture on which they are now working with Albert Ray and Elinor Fair.

For some days Mr. Dunlap has been doing "The Little Prayer for Rain" in which Mr. Fair will be a jockey, and win a thrilling race on a horse never supposed to be in the money, against the whole book making ring of the track.

OPENS OFFICE HERE.

E. Laning Masters, Inc., of 1482 Broadway, the most important marketing agency in New York for the products of independent producers, are expanding their operations to include the Pacific Coast and have appointed Philip H. White their western representative with offices at 307 and 308 Wright and Callender Building, to handle all business on the Coast. With the establishment of this office it is no longer necessary for producers to incur the expense of taking their product East to arrange for State right sales, according to Mr. White.

NEGRO "CO-OP" STORE.

St. Louis Members of Black Race Have Raised $15,000.

Subscriptions are being taken among negroes here to establish a department store, which is to be operated exclusively by and for members of the race. At a meeting held at the Metropolitan A.M.E. Church it was announced that more than $15,000 had been subscribed.

The movement is partly due to a speech recently made here by Col. Charles Young of the United States army, a negro, in which he urged negroes to own and operate their own business institutions of all kinds. Such a plan previously had been discussed among negro leaders here, but Col. Young's speech caused it to bear fruit.

Voluntary segregation has been urged as a solution of the race problem, and persons of both races who have studied the question say it should begin with the establishment of negro commercial enterprises, in order that the race may be self sufficient.

The Rev. B. G. Shaw, pastor of the Metropolitan church, is in charge of the taking of subscriptions. He said that it would not be possible to start the proposed store with less than $20,000.

It would be operated on the cooperative plan, so that the customers would not only deal with members of their own race, but also would get lower prices. No person will be allowed to hold more than $100 worth of stock in the concern.

If the store proves a success, the next logical move will be to establish a negro bank, Shaw said. He believes that such a bank, with a capital of at least one quarter million dollars, can be established here.

"They say we are free, but everybody knows that the negroes are still slaves, economically," he said. "We have to buy from the white man, borrow from the white man, trade with the white man—on his own terms—and, what is more important, we have to depend on him for work. I believe the white people would like to see us learn to depend on ourselves."—[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A PERFECT EVENING SPOILED.

"Isn't it glorious here?" she exclaimed when the waiter had taken their orders.

"Do you think so?" he replied.

"It's perfectly lovely. Everything is in such beautiful harmony—the fountain, the trees, the swaying lanterns, the music—everything is ideal. It's like fairyland."

"I'm glad you like it."

"I'm simply enchanted. Doesn't it make you feel as if you had stepped out of the everyday world into something strange and new?"

"Not a bit."

"What's the matter? You don't seem to be enjoying yourself."

"My boss is sitting at the third table over there to your left, and I can tell by his look that he's wondering how I can afford to blow myself at a place like this."—[Dayton News.

MUSICAL.

SISTINE CHOIR.

UNIQUE VOCAL ENSEMBLE VISITING AMERICA.

For the first time in their history, the quartette of soloists from the Sistine Choir at Rome is making a concert tour, having arrived recently, under American chaperonage, at Boston. They repaired at once to New York where they will begin their tour, which is almost as keen an adventure to these men, who, until now had never left Italy, as it is a novelty for the Americans who are entertaining them.

None of the singers speaks English, although Signor Gentilli, the contralto of the party, assures his hosts that his few adjectives, such as "charming" and "delightful" constitute a knowledge of the language, and certainly they make of him the linguist of the party.

Signor Gabrielli, who looks like a bass, and sings soprano, is causing much concern apropos the draughts with which he has met since he set sail.

The basso is Signor Des Santos, who served thirty-four months in the Italian army, and was recalled from the front to take part in the Easter services at the Vatican.

The quartette is accompanied by letters from dignitaries at Rome, including Cardinal Merry del Valle, which are to sustain their position of superiority and dignity throughout their exile in a land which is showing keen interest in entertaining them. The quartette will arrive here early next spring and will sing in solo and in ensemble.

Tandler Selecting Music.

The Los Angeles Symphony's initial concert of the season will take place November 21, and a programme that will excel any of former years is promised by the management, which has already arranged for a splendid selection of new music for the event.

Conductor Tandler, who is now in the East, has secured the new symphonic numbers from a wide choice which was open to him, and he has arranged with the large Symphonic organizations of the East for an exchange of such music as is not available because of the confusion from the war. The local Symphony's own library of symphonic music is reputed to be the largest west of Chicago, and the new music augmenting this will allow for the widest possible selection of numbers in the making up of the programmes.

Word from Conductor Tandler is that he was in conference with Emil Oberhoffer, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, at his summer residence on Orchard Lake, and that from him he had obtained suggestions as to new music and new effects, which are to be introduced by Mr. Oberhoffer this season. Through the aid of Mr. Oberhoffer, Mr. Tandler, also was able to secure several woodwind players of notable distinction, who will become members of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra this year. These latter, with a number of new instruments, are expected to arrive in Los Angeles shortly, when the difficulties of trans-continental transit are ended.

Philharmonious Music.

The first music for the library of the Philharmonic Orchestra has arrived and includes among other numbers the Saint-Saens C Minor Symphony No. 3, with its famous organ part; "Romeo and Juliet" Fantasie, after Shakespeare (Tschaikowsky); "La Peri" (Little Poem Dance), by Dukas; "The Culprit Fay" Hadley); Overture, "Cockaigne" (Elgar); Suite A Minor (MacDowell); Suite Symphonie "Printemps" (Debussy); "Rhapsodie Roumain" (Enesco); "The Isle of the Dead" (Rachmaninoff), and an extensive collection of the standard classics, without which symphony programmes cannot be made. This selection was made by Walter Rothwell, upon his return to New York.

Mr. Rothwell will bring with him to California early next month the complete programmes for the season, with the concerto and aria numbers to be given by the soloists. He will meet Rudolph Ganz, the first soloist, upon the latters' return from Switzerland, next week. He plans for a day at the summer home of Mme. Stanley, the first vocal soloist, and will interview Leo Ornstein and Sophie Braslau before coming West.

Ilya Bronson, the new solo violoncellist, just engaged, will probably accompany Mr. Rothwell. Bronson is a Russian by birth, but has for some years past been an American citizen. He was graduated with honors from the Conservatory at Odessa, and continued for two years after with Paul Liengel, probably the best-known 'cello teacher in that country. He has done routine orchestral playing under Nikisch, and toured the continent as soloist before coming to America, in 1906, when he became solo 'cellist of the New York Symphony, later joining the New York Philharmonic.

Arthur Hackett,

Lyric tenor, who will assist Geraldine Farrar in her approaching recital here.

Hackett to Sing With Farrar.

Chance had much to do with the remarkable success of Arthur Hackett, the American tenor, who is to be heard here in joint recital with Geraldine Farrar, October 2.

Hackett for several years had been a resident of Boston, where he sang in a church and accepted as many little engagements throughout New England as came to him in the course of a season.

In September, 1916, it was decided to give a short season of "Pop" concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston, with a part of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and it was planned to make these concerts largely operatic. There was no difficulty in getting a soprano, contralto and bass, but when it came to the engagement of a tenor everything went awry. Finally, someone suggested Arthur Hackett.

Charles A. Ellis, who was then the manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, had never heard Hackett sing, but one time was sufficient for his engagement. On the first night he stood revealed as a tenor of most unusual qualities, both in voice and musicianship, and his singing was quite the feature of the season. As a direct result of his success in these concerts, he was engaged at once to go with Geraldine Farrar on a short concert tour during the autumn, and he was likewise engaged to sing the very difficult tenor part in Liszt's "Faust" Symphony, given four times in Boston and once in New York by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

"Miracle Man" Setting.

George Mulford and Benjamin Laetitsky have arranged a very unusual series of musical selections to accompany the presentation of the "Miracle Man" this week at the Kinema. Some of the numbers played during the feature are the Largo from the New World Symphony by Dvorak; a Nocturne, Op. 15, No. 1, by Chopin; excerpts from the "Lenore" Symphony by J. Raff; Victor Herbert's "Serenade;" "En Mer," by Augusta Holmes; "The Spinning Wheel," by Saint-Saens; the Prelude du Deluge by the same composer; Rachmaninoff's "In the Silence of Night;" Vieuxtemps's "Reverie;" the Prelude to Act IV of Massenet's "Herodiade;" "Night of Love," by Augusta Holmes: "Valse Triste by Sibelius, and "Serenade Norse" by G. Sandre.

Students' Stage Benefit.

Several of the students of the Marion Warde School gave a series of one-act plays at the benefit of the Brotherhood of Yeoman Friday evening. Among those appearing were Wallace Wadsworth, Jack Matthews, Kenneth Chryst, Murray Tweedy, Karl McMann, Ruth Freda and Katherine Tweedy, Doris Evans, Lillian Whiteford, Elsa Day, Genevieve Waller and Flora Houstan. Wallace Wadsworth gave a group of readings at the last meeting of the Half Century Club and Kenneth Chryst was heard at the annual festival of the National Foresters of America Wednesday evening. Miss Warde is planning a number of interesting affairs for the coming season.

Godowsky's Secretary Stays.

Herbert Douglas, pianist, who came to this city as Leopold Godowsky's secretary, has made arrangements to start a series of classes in Symphony Hall, of the Blanchard Building. Mr. Douglas intends to remain in Los Angeles, devoting his time to teaching and recital work. He formerly taught piano in New York. He studied under Rafael Joseffy. Mr. Douglas is a contributor to the Art Publication Society's "Progress Series of Piano Lessons," in which Mr. Godowsky is also interested.

Returns from Vacation.

Sada Grumbling, violinist, who has been spending the summer at Big Bear Lake and in Yosemite Valley, plans to reopen her studio here September 1.

Joseph Dupuy's Plans.

Under the direction of Joseph Dupuy, the Orpheus Club is planning a series of concerts which will rival any previous year. Many of the members of the club who were in the service have returned, and the ranks of the organization have been strengthened as well as through the acquiring of new members. Mr. Dupuy has recently moved his studio to the ground floor of the Blanchard Building, in order to be better able to carry on his work of teaching, and give special attention to the vocal development of the members of the club.

During the period that immediately followed the entrance of the United States into the European conflict, the club experienced many difficulties because of the depletion of its membership, but wherever anybody dropped out his place was hastily filled, and the club succeeded in effectively maintaining its standard for choral work.

College to Open Term.

The Davis Musical College has announced that its fall term will reopen Tuesday, the faculty of the college this year including Dr. Eugene Davis and Henrietta Russel in the piano department; Mrs. Eugene Davis in the vocal; Dr. Roy Hastings, organ; John Marquardt, violin; Mrs. John Marquardt, harp; Louise Hutinet, cornet; and other brass instruments; H. T. Espinoza, saxophone and reed instruments; Vivienne Stafford, banjo, mandolin and steel string instruments; Mme. Matildita, dancing. There will be special classes in solfeggio, harmony composition, public school music and history of music.

"MARSE HENRY" ON CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

Arthur was a man of surpassing sweetness and grace. As handsome as Pierce, as affable as McKinley, he was a more experienced and dextrous politician than either. He had been put on the ticket with Garfield to placate Conkling. All sorts of stories to his discredit were told during the campaign. The Democrats made him out a tricky and typical New York politician. He was, on the contrary, a many-sided accomplished man, who had a taking way of adjusting all conditions and adapting himself to all companies.

With a sister as charming and tactful as he for head of his domestic fabric, the White House bloomed again. He possessed the knack of surrounding himself with all sorts of agreeable people, Frederick Frelinghuysen was Secretary of State, and Robert Lincoln, continued from the Garfield Cabinet, Secretary of War. Then there were three irresistibles—Walter Gresham, Frank Hatton and Ben Brewster. His home contingent, "Clint" Wheeler, "Steve" French and "Jake" Hess—pictured as "ward heelers"—were, in point of fact, efficient and all-around companionable men, capable and loyal.—[Henry Watterson, in Saturday Evening Post.

PIONEERS OF NEW MUSIC ERA.

BY JEANNE REDMAN.

Now that the new music season is about to open, and there is promised by the symphonic organizations, the new—in the sense of modern—compositions, it is well to formulate, for the benefit of those who will not agree that the younger men have written any music, a few of the causes beneath these different inspirations.

To begin with, modern music is not a hysterical outburst of the Bolsheviki in art, any more than cubism or synchronism are parallel manias of the younger painters. Modern music is the natural outcome of the environmental conditions under which we live today. Such environment, it must be evident to all, has an enormous influence on our emotions and thoughts. It sets a standard of intensity in our desires, it establishes a norm, as it were, for a definite emotional reaction and it changes our whole outlook on and vision of the world of thought and feeling.

It is easily to be imagined that the thrills gotten by a young lady of sixty years ago were produced by far less deviation from the commonplace than is necessary to obtain the like result on the girl of today. The very speed of contemporary life, its swift changing of conditions, its unrest, has evolved an entirely different degree of emotional susceptibility for which a more intense art stimulation alone can compensate.

Naturally every one who listens to music cannot appreciate the orchestral complexities of the more modern men, and these persons, as a rule intolerant of anything that does not flatter their mentality by adapting itself to their limitations, decry its importance. They ask and with reason, why, if this new art is more relevant to them, they do not care for it; indeed why Beethoven, Brahms, Mozart, Schubert or Haydn still hold an ascendency over their appreciation to the total exclusion of the latest.

Such a question cannot be answered in a moment or by resorting to personalities. The chief reason why these older masters are still supreme is simply that modern methods, while going beyond the masters of other days, have never numbered so great a genius as any one of the five mentioned.

Again, it is easy to realize that the particular type of music with which we have been born and reared naturally seems more satisfactory than any novelty.

THE CONSERVATIVE ATTITUDE.

The influence of the familiar on our minds is unmeasurable. We go to vaudeville to hear old jokes, we settle ourselves with a sigh of contentment when we have reached a familiar home even though our peregrinations have taken us to what we know to be infinitely superior interiors. We dine year after year on the same cuisine, and only tentatively indulge in foreign gastronomic rarities. But with the spirit of cosmopolitanism these definite emotional and mental ruts will be, to some degree, done away with, and our minds will receive with tolerance and openness new stimuli even as we have adapted our formerly slow and tedious locomotions to the swiftness of the automobile and the airplane.

When that time comes, and it is very nearly upon us, we will listen to music, read literature and see paintings from a standpoint heretofore impossible, and our judgments will be those dictated by impersonal criticism rather than theories of conservatism.

Modern music did not grow over night. Weber came before Wagner and the tendencies which this operatic giant focussed and organized were extant long before him even. Richard Strauss, Moussorgsky, Cesar Franck, Debussy, to name only a few and these not the most modern by any means, have developed slowly and on the foundation, firmly implanted, of a precise tradition.

Naturally when young men take over the governance of movements there is a tendency to give to the public an overmeasure of their qualities. Thus in the case of Strauss we have that arriviste spirit which is ever telling itself that it will go still further! Until finally it shuffles into a degeneration and then to oblivion. His complexities of orchestration were carried incommensurately beyond his ability at organizing them and the consequence has given us reason to believe that some of his work is a joke, to him as well as to us. But his original inspiration was very genuine and extremely well understood.

The Impressionist school of painters are Strassesque, although they antidated him many decades. His beginnings date in painting history back to 1820 or 1830.

IMPRESSIONIST INFLUNENCE.

The perfect parallel lies in his enlarging his orchestral effects, by breaking up his orchestra into a myriad parts and using them all in their purity. His aim was what might be called unity in multiplicity, and if his genius had been that of a Beethoven, his modern methods would have so greatly won the day that I do not hesitate to say that the old masters would have been superseded. But it was not, and his place in history is that of innovation rather than of achievement, a definite step in method, but not in result. Schoeneberg has complicated things for the same of mathematical amusement. He and the group about him are the neoimpressionists of the orchestra, and here musical methods have stopped.

There remains yet to be produced a man who will express the classical principles by modern methods, and until that time comes we can only listen to what is given us and leave our minds, always ready to reject that which is not familiar, open to what these intellectuals can supply.

There is much that is fine and pure in them, and they, the extreme swing of the pendulum of reaction, can serve as a veritable education to the great works that are bound toward us and that will reach us in the near future.

Let us neither scoff at modernity nor stupidly accept it because we wish to appear up to the minute. Let us look at it intellectually for the moment, in the same spirit in which it comes from the composer's brain, and by comparison with the old, see its possibilities of advantage, as well as its shortcomings of form.

SERVED IN ITALY.

Veteran of War Heads New Music School.

Recently returned to this country from service in the Italian army, Ellis Rhodes, formerly a pupil of Carl Bronson of this city, and who has directed oratorio and choral organizations in New York, has been chosen as the artistic director of the new California School of Arts, which has taken over the Temple of Arts, formerly headed by Florencio Constantino. The new educational project is backed by J. B. Van Nuys and his associates, it is announced. R. W. E. Cole is general manager, and France Goldwater, secretary and registrar.

Mr. Rhodes started his musical education with Mr. Bronson here. He then went to Italy and studied in Milan with Sebastiano Breda. Later he took a course in Berlin, under the direction of France Emmerich. He again returned to Southern Europe and studied at Palermo, Sicily. Returning to America he came under the tutelage of Herbert Witherspoon of New York and later of Eduardo Sacedote of Chicago.

Following the outbreak of the war, Mr. Rhodes went overseas in Y.M.C.A. work, and while abroad joined the Italian Army. He was discharged April of this year. Upon his return to Los Angeles he made plans for the establishment of a school of music and art in this city, the upshot of which is that he has been chosen to direct the destinies of the new school.

Prior to his service abroad, Mr. Rhodes was in charge of the vocal department of Simpson College. He is a member of the Gamut Club of this city, and of the Sinponian Greek letter musical fraternity, of which he hopes to establish a branch here.

Of the faculty of the Temple of Arts Henry Mapes, of St. Louis, is still interested in the new school, but aside from this it is planned to completely reorganize the institution.

A HEROIC DOG.

Judge T has given his life for liberty. In a letter received by the Red Cross was the news that somewhere in France there is a little grave bearing the epitaph:

"Here lies a heroic dog—Judge T."

Judge T was a Great Dane. He was presented to the Red Cross last summer by Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Tabbart of Richmond Hill, N. Y. He had received some training at the police department stables and went right into the thick of things when he arrived in France. When he wasn't harnessed to a stretcher and carrying wounded soldiers from the field he was loping from one army headquarters to another with messages. Once he discovered two wounded soldiers who were sinking in a water-filled shell hole and saved them from drowning. At the construction of a bridge over the Meuse, the engineers picked Judge to take a rope in his teeth and swim to the other side in the face of enemy sniping.

Judge caught the idea at once, and paddeled his way across. The raking fire couldn't keep him from swimming back on a second trip, but on the third trip a sniper marked the white mark on his forehead. There was a shot, and Judge's labors for America were over.

A party of doughboys, at the risk of their lives, recovered the body and buried it near the spot.—[Our Animals.

BALLADS CUTTING OUT JAZZ MUSIC.

POPULAR SONG PUBLISHER SAYS TASTE OF PUBLIC IS VEERING.

That the heart interest ballad and the novelty song are likely to displace jazz is the forecast of the popular music situation, as given by Sam Fox, head of the Sam Fox Publishing Company, of Cleveland, who is at present visiting in this city. Mr. Fox is stopping at the Garden Court Apartments on Hollywood Boulevard, and expects to spend about a month in Los Angeles and vicinity with his wife and son. He will return to the East at the end of that time, while his family will remain here for the winter.

"This is not to say that jazz is doomed, because it still remains highly popular as dance music," said Mr. Fox. "But the tendency is toward a greater liking on the part of the people for the better class of popular songs, especially the ballads. In anticipation of this demand, I am bringing out a large number of these songs myself this fall, as well as the novelties.

"The Oriental song is very popular at present. But the Oriental fever like the craving for Irish songs has always prevailed intermittently. These songs seem to have a run for a time, and then the demand falls off, only to become evident again later on."

Among the novelty songs which Fox is planning to introduce this fall is one called "Taxi," which is very typical. He has been induced to bring out this type of song largely as a result of the success of such numbers as "Mieow" the words of which were written by a local musican and lyric writer, Harry D. Kerr.

Mr. Fox hints at the possibility of establishing a publishing house in this section of the country, because of the chances to be in closer touch with the picture business. He has made a special study of the needs of pictures in relation to popular music.

RECITALIST STAYS HERE.

Genevieve Hubbard, who has recently become a member of the local musical colony, will give a series of recital teas at her studios in the Blanchard Building, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoon of this week. Miss Hubbard is a reader and teacher of expression, and has appeared in Boston and eastern cities. She plans recitals in Los Angeles and other parts of Southern California during the coming season. At present she is busy with arranging the production of a play, "A Modern Cinderella," for the Methodist Church of Huntington Park.

RENT FOR SOLDIERS.

Law Prevents Profiteering Landlords From Gouging Dependents.

Landlords should bear in mind that the Soldiers' and Sailors' Relief Act is still inforce, and that attempts to increase the rent of soldiers' and sailors' families of dependents are in violation of the spirit, if not the letter, of that law. So says former Municipal Justice William Armstrong.

About a year ago Judge Armstrong announced that he would give his legal services gratis to any dependent of a soldier or sailor threatened with eviction. Since that time he has saved hundreds of such dependents from being put upon the street. In some cases municipal court justices did not fully understand the extent of their power to prevent such evictions until Judge Armstrong interpreted the federal act to them.

"A large number of New York landlords seem to think, now that peace conditions prevail, they can increase the rent of soldiers' and sailors' dependents at their pleasure," said Judge Armstrong. "They are as much mistaken as they were a year ago, and I shall be glad to render any service to such tenants free of charge."—[New York Evening World.

The Starr Singing Throat

The Violin, Piano and the—

Starr PHONOGRAPH

all have the same secret of tone purity—the silver grain spruce tone chambers which are a feature of each.

Judge for Yourself

You may judge for yourself which construction insures the best musical results. The facts are self-evident—but a demonstration will emphasize it. Please come in and hear the Starr—or we will gladly send one to your home.

—For hundreds of years—ever since the first violin was made—musical instrument makers have known that silver grain spruce was the most sweetly vibrant of all woods for use in musical instruments.

—In hundreds of years nothing has ever been found to equal it.

—It is the wood that is used EXCLUSIVELY in the tone chambers of the Starr Phonograph—there is not an atom of metal or veneering or coarse, cheap wood used in the Starr tone chambers.

—And that is one very good reason why there is no phonograph which even compares with the Starr in tone quality—for there is no other phonograph which uses silver grain spruce exclusively in the tone chambers—all other phonographs use either metal horns, or horns made of strips of veneering with glue between, or coarse, cheap wood without musical quality.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY LADY JANE.

There is rejoicing in the Philanthrophy and Civics Club over the report of the membership committee which announces among it new members four presidents of local clubs. Arrangements for the club garden party to be given at the home of Mrs. H. H. Brisacher, 3103 South Figueroa street, are now complete. The afternoon will be spent by the members and guests in the old-fashioned garden back of the house. There will be cards, instrumental and vocal music and esthetic dancing. A gypsy fortuneteller will have her booth.

Big Sisters' League.

At the meeting of the Big Sisters League carnival committee following the City Club meeting last Monday, the chairmen of subcommittees reported good progress. Mrs. E. E. Leighton, chairman of the committee on dolls, reported many responses from the screen stars, and her display of fancy dressed dolls will be one of the artistic features of the carnival.

The cigars and cigarettes will be in charge of Mrs. Margie Beaumont of the Bryson Apartments and the home-made candies will be sold by Mrs. John T. Coleman. Mrs. J. E. Brown, of the Wednesday Morning Club will have charge of a band of "Gypsy" fortune-tellers—all in native costume.

Other encouraging reports were made by Mrs. R. E. Bliss, hot sandwiches; Mrs. E. T. Hughes, fruit drinks; Mrs. J. C. Tobinski, soft drinks; Mrs. John L. Butler, ice cream.

Mrs. Clarence Van Graham and Mme. Boccasini will have a stock of goods in the "country store" that will appeal to all housewives. Mrs. Jay H. Gardena Woman's Club.

The year book of the Woman's Progressive Club of Gardena Valley which holds its initial meeting of the year next Wednesday, shows as an outline of the year's work such topics as "Our Club, Our Community, State, Nation, Civics, Philanthropy, Music, and Art." There are others, as Home Economics, My Son and Your Daughter, My Neighbor, Birthdays, Dancing, etc. There will be a "Flower Day" and a "Husbands' Evening." Reciprocity Day is put down for May 13, and the annual luncheon will be June 24. Mrs. Imogene Graham and her committee are now working out details of delightful things in music and literature, and developing plans for the presentation by prominent speakers and members of the club of the vital things of today.

OUR JOB.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

Women hate muddle and confusion. We just naturally prefer law and order, conventions, dockets, set customs, accepted vogues. Of course, masculinity likes to saddle us with all the caprice and disconcerting variableness, lack of logic and all that sort of thing; but that is only another of the good old fallacies. The normal woman wants things just so. Even her hectic annual house-cleaning is but a means to this end. When women stir things up, it is with a definite object to settle them back again into a stern new orderliness.

Yet here is a man-governed world in a chaotic muddle. Masculinity everywhere is divided up into selfish classes, all fighting each other and each day sees the confusion worse confounded. Whether it is politics or business, national or international affairs, the men don't seem to be able to run a single department without fights and arguments. As sure as you see a well-ordered, smoothly-running business concern, minus a half a dozen extraneous fights, you will find that some bright woman is taking care of the detail end of the thing, upholding the system, offsetting the volatile ebullience of the males of the species. The percentage of women that fail in business is infinitesimal, but statistics show that 90 per cent. of the men who start in business for themselves make a hash of it—and this, in spite of the fact that all the training and traditions are in masculine favor, and women are necessarily a bunch of amateurs anyway.

Just at present our own precious city is in a most unholy chaos. Various classes of men are snarling at each other, declining to discuss things as man to man, blaming each other for all the ills that flesh is heir to, whining in factions and balling up the whole works. Women were supposed to enjoy a monopoly of spite; yet spite seems to be the pet weapon for settling little differences. If a section of men want anything changed, the only way they know to do it is to victimize the rest of the community. When women do this sort of thing, as in the case of the militant suffragettes, mankind promptly combines to condemn 'em, and remind them that votes and privileges are won by diplomatic ladylike methods—bless their illogical hearts. A precious lot of diplomacy the men are using just now, for instance. Can't you imagine the united contempt and cussfulness that would assail women if we all elected to go out on strike for every little grievance? Just supposing that it was a few sisterhoods and woman's clubs federations that were balling up the country, and the leaders thereof complaining that they had lost control—ugh! Why any modest little deputy club president can count on the natural orderliness of her flock to avoid such a wretched debacle.

Of course the sensible and logical thing for women to do in this crisis is to take over the management of the country. But that being rather more than we can hope for, men being as pig-headed and self-sufficient as they are, the next best thing is for arbitration boards composed entirely of women to be instituted in every department of commerce and business, and let us straighten things out once and for all. We could listen to and sympathize with both sides of every controversy without any musty old prejudices to besmirch our minds, ask a few leading questions from our own enlightened point of view which would assuredly expose a vast amount of incredible stupidity and selfish blindness, have a few words to say about duties as well as rights, dispense a few little cheerful encouragements and soothing mixtures, and generally salvage any sweet reasonableness that masculinity may yet be capable of. We should probably begin by making the irascible patients put out their crusty tongues, administer a few doses of political castor oil and a few gargles, and revive the old slipper for use on the old historical spot for the more intractable sinners.

Mother, you see, has to think for the whole family and she is a tyrant for community consideration. Put a few capable mammas on this job of cleaning up the muddle and we should soon know who was who. Anyway, if there is going to be any temperamental nagging, any special privileges, any best cuts of the roast or most comfortable chairs, mother has an inalienable right to 'em. If we women are supposed to be the protected privileged darlings, it is time we saw that we got the protection. Otherwise we had better take over the role of protector ourselves. We could not make a worse hash of it.

BEETHOVEN
MENDELSSOHN

Just imagine playing the most difficult compositions of the inspired composers of the world with the brilliancy, feeling and expression of an accomplished pianist without requiring even an elementary knowledge of music.

THE SOLOELLE

is positively the only player piano that enables those not keyboard proficient to produce music that sparkles with tone-color—music that vibrates with joy—with pathos—with human emotion—with life.

The Soloelle, alone of all player pianos, is a musically satisfying and artistic instrument. With it you can accomplish what no other player piano permits you to do—because every other player piano is lacking in the two essentials that are the basic fundamentals of musical expression.

First: Complete and unrestricted individual controls of Melody and Accompaniment.*
Second: Control of Tone-Color—the charm and essence of musical expression.*

When grand opera stars—when skilled musicians—when masters of the piano—when authorities on the piano and other things connected with the musical profession—when owners of player pianos all join in proclaiming the Soloelle an artistic instrument, you owe it to yourself at least to investigate this wonderful player piano.

Hear the Soloelle and you will at once realize that no better player piano can possibly give you such thorough musical enjoyment.

Has Your Officer Hung Up His Coat?

© House & Garden

Are you faced with the exciting problem of buying everything for a new house at once—because the captain insisted on a wedding the very minute he was mustered out?

Here's a room to be happy in. The walls are butter-colored, the woodwork soft grey. The rag rugs are woodsy brown, and the black-grounded chintz grows the gayest of fruit and flowers all over one of those fat, comfortable couches you just can't keep away from.

Let's not try! The fire fairly purrs "Tea." There are magazines on the table at our elbow.

How did the owners of this house spell "home" so easily, so graciously? The room is in just proportion—that's first. Each piece of furniture is good in itself, from the tall Welsh dresser to the little Lancashire chairs. These things, with the lovely clean colour of the background, make a room to be remembered. But—not from one's check-stubs.

House & Garden maintains a special department for the owners of the small house and the moderate income—with plans, pictures, prices attached. Try these next six numbers.

THE THIRTEENTH LABOR.

BY EUGENE BROWN.

The twelve laborers of Hercules had been completed. Cerberus had been taken back to his kennel and the heavyweight hero had mopped the cinders of Hades from his eyes. Now bathed and anointed, he sat at ease, while his valet, Philocletes, dropped a dainty cube of ice into the beaker of soda and Scotch at his elbow.

"This is the life!" he exclaimed. "It's nice to loaf for a while; but I mustn't grow stale, or the dogs will get me. A champion can't take any chances of slumping in his work."

His mind reverted to the deeds he had accomplished. With his own hands he had choked to death and peeled the pelt from the massive Nemean lion. He had slain the poison-breathed Hydra in its own miasmic swamp. He had ungirdled the powerful queen of the Amazons. He had invaded the orchard of the Hesperides and robbed it of its greatest treasure. He had rounded up the herds of Geryon and driven them into the corral of his taskmaster. He had turned the channel of the River Alpheus to flush the stockyards of Augeas. He had butchered the giant Cacus in his own cave in Mt. Aventine. He had lassoed and branded the Creton bull and chased the Centours into the brush. He had rounded up the wild boar of South Halstead street and stuck him full of toothpicks. He had even married two wives. Surely, Richard K. Fox would give him a dozen pages in any blue book of champions. He had met all comers. He was the go-get-'em bird of all time.

As he reflected his huge fists clenched and his shoulder muscles twitched involuntarily. It was sweet to rest, but in his soul was the lust of conflict. He was no cream cheese candidate for the Hall of Fame.

The bell rang. There was a messenger without. The soft-sandaled valet answered and presently stood in the door way holding the missive aloft.

"Perhaps it is from Omphale," murmured the champion, who blushed as he remembered the days in which he did Kensington embroidery and china painting in the boudoir of the beautous queen.

"Nay," exclaimed the valet. "It has a Washington postmark."

"Jumping Jupiter!" snorted Hercules. "Where in Hades is that?"

"It isn't in Hades," responded the valet. "It is several degrees farther south. The last time you were in Hades you might have seen it from the back porch if you had had your glasses with you. You can tell it by the white dome over the arena where the gladiators try out their voices."

"Read the words of the messenger," commanded the champion. Hercules had been so busy violating the eight-hour law that his education had been neglected. His valet was therefore also his secretary.

"It is from old Vox Populi," explained the general menial. "Written by his understudy, one Woodrow Wilson. He says something about your being a bush leaguer."

"For the love of Aphrodite what's that?" exclaimed Hercules.

"I don't know exactly, but he says you made your reputation doing Carl Hagenbeck stunts. If you think you're such a swell performer with the wild animals, why don't you get busy with the holy terror of the universe? He says you held up the world for one day while relieving Atlas of his job and now why don't you go after the critter that is holding up the earth all the time? It must be some monster at that. He says that it has a hide like a rhinoceros, teeth like a buzzsaw claws like a tiger, the eye of a buzzard, the scent of a blood hound and the disposition of a hyena. It has the strength of a mastadon, the sublety of a serpent, the audacity of a lion, the digestion of an ostrich and the manners of a jackal. They have tried to fight it by hitching up an elephant, a donkey, a moose and a camel, but couldn't make any impression on it.

"And what do they call this monster?" inquired Hercules.

"Hicostaliving," replied the secretary.

"Good night!" exclaimed the champion.

"That's what Vax Populi says," continued the valet. "But there isn't even a chance for a good night. It seems that this thing has 2.75 per cent. of cascara in its veins and not only rages in the daytime, but works while you sleep. It's no trouble to find it. It stalks abroad at any old time and defies everybody. They've tried everything from injunctions to silent prayer without being able to leash the ravager."

"Looks like a job for me," exclaimed the champion, grimly, as he flexed his muscles and fondled his massive club.

"That's what Vox Populi says," resumed the secretary, with an appraising glance at the ponderous bludgeon. "And he says if you have a big brother with an ax to bring him along, too. You'll need him."

"Suffering Sisyphus!" exclaimed Hercules. "Is it as bad as that? You better ring up the old man and tell him where I've gone, in case anything should happen."

"Here's your rabbit's foot, too," said the valet. "It might be a good thing to have. Vox Populi says that the monster has just demanded another tithe of tribute from all the people. He has the appetite and conscience of a walking delegate. Just to amuse himself he will take little girls and pinch them black and blue. When he sees a hungry man he will take a slab of bacon and hold it up just beyond his reach. When there is a barefooted woman he will dangle a pair of shoes from the top of a telephone pole. Then she will have to go over the hot sands with blistered feet because she has searched her husband's pants' pockets in vain. He has lost his all for gasoline in another of the monster's raids. No one escapes this nemesis. He stalks through the palace of the plutocrat as well as the hut of the hobo."

"Shades of Tantalus!" exclaimed the champion. "Give me another shot of that 'toxicated iron. I may need it. Listen: I'm going out to get this bird—but you needn't sit up for me. I can see where I've got something ahead of me. I'm no pink tea performer and this wampus is not to be chloroformed with chesty conversation anyhow. He wants something with more of a wallop than a sleeping powder. I'm going after him, but I'm offering no alibis. If I don't come back, locate my remains as well as you can and see that my pallbearers are properly refreshed. This is a job that belongs in the trouble department. Tell the old man that I had good spirits in me"—here he glanced appraisingly at his empty beaker—"and tell June not to wear crepe for me—that fat heifer wouldn't do it anyhow, and good night!"

With these last words the champion seized anew his club, threw his lion skin over his shoulders and stalked forth on his greatest quest—the overthrow of the malignant monster, Hicostoliving.

Sadly the faithful secretary placed a record of "It's a Long, Long Way" on the phonograph, and then with his nose against the window, he watched the massive figure of his master as it disappeared in the gloaming.

He crossed himself.

"NOT ENGLISH BUT AMERICAN"

was almost as proliferous of slang as we are today. Her conservatism, her tendency to embalm her native speech in formalisms and bury it in dictionaries, is distinctly a symptom of old age, as conservatism is always a symptom of old age. It is overpopulated England, the England which is dependent for her very existence as an empire upon control of the seas, the England which ran to us for help when she got into a fight, that scorns our racy and expressive slang, and seeks to overawe us with the moribund elegance of her own book language.

The difference between the two national spirits, as shown in the use of language, is well illustrated by comparison of the British term "whisky and soda" with the American "highball." The two mean the same thing. But the British term is a mere description in formal language, while the American word is an expressive and original name.

This particular Americanism originated way back in the days of the California gold rush, when any drink of whisky was called a ball. Ball was a term then used to mean a bullet, and was probably extended to include a drink because a single dose of the poison served over the San Francisco bars in those days would often leave a man considerably more than half shot.

ORIGIN OF HIGHBALL.

This is a hypothetical explanation; but it is known that when the effete custom of mixing whisky with water was introduced, highball was evolved by reason of the fact that a tall glass was necessary to accommodate the mixture.

That Americans have not lost any of their youthful exuberance of imagination in naming drinks is proved by the host of terms to which prohibition has given birth. "Near-beer" is the oldest and most widely known, and the "spitohell cocktail" is one of the newest.

Slang has had some defenders before Prof. Mencken, but he is the first to come out boldly in support of the alterations in classical English grammar which give so much pain to the ears of those who consider themselves cultured.

Take the case of "ain't." It is good American to say I ain't, you ain't, and they ain't. "Ain't" does duty as singular and plural, as first, second and third person. It is a verb of all work.

Prof. Mencken defends this usage on the ground that it is logical. The use of "ain't" saves space and time, it avoids such painful locutions as "am I not?" And it does not cause any confusion of meaning. "Ain't" may not be good English, but it is good American. And it is good language, because it serves the purpose of language, which is to express an idea as clearly, briefly and vigorously as possible.

For the use of nearly all the other characteristic American alterations of English grammar, Prof. Mencken finds equally sound justification. And he points out that this tendency toward simplification, like the use of slang, is proof that our language is still alive and developing. He shows that all the higher types of language have been evolved by just such a process of simplification. It is the man in the street, innocent of books, who is building the language of the future, and not the professor with his nose in a dictionary.

MUST DEVELOP.

You should not gather from all this that the learned Mencken would have the vulgate American adopted forthwith as our official language, taught in the schools and used in government documents and in literature. He realizes that this must come about gradually. But he wishes Americans to be aware that they have a language. He admonishes the man in the street not to be ashamed of the language which serves his purposes so well, and he utters a dignified reprimand to those fashionable folks and literary snobs who ape the English in grammar, in spelling and even in pronunciation.

Above all, he pleads for a more liberal and intelligent attitude toward language in the schools. Poor little Johnny is set before a grammar filled with rules which he cannot understand, and could not remember if he did understand them. He struggles in vain with the science of syntax, and then goes home and tells his mother that it's no use going to school because "he ain't gonna learn nothing there nohow."

And there is something, besides the grammar of the future, in what he says.

America Leads Again.

What is described as the largest fire in the world is reported from New York. If America can bring it off three years in succession we understand that the fire becomes her own property.—[Punch, London.

Silk Lamp Shades of Varied Charm

—The last touch that gives a satisfactory finish to the tout ensemble of any room in your house is the addition of a beautiful shade for either table or floor lamp.
—In our lamp shade department are to be found the new frames, fabrics and trimmings.
—If it be your pleasure, we will design and complete a shade for you in our studio, in any colorings that you may suggest. 4th floor.

Individual Service

Is Service In Every Sense Of The Word

—And what is the real significance of the word "Service?" Our own Webster tells us that service is "the performance of labor for the benefit of another" and we think the words very well describe the work undertaken by every member of our Department of Individual Service.

—Have you ever made use of this department? If not, we invite you to do so at your earliest convenience.
—If you are uncertain as to what costume to choose for any special occasion, if you desire ideas as to how to make the new mid-season frock you are planning, if you would like to have a little inside information as to the late fashion touches, let us tell you that the Department of Individual Service will help you with the best advice at its disposal.

—Then, too, the new fashion journals are here for your perusal; and please note that all service is rendered gratis. Second Floor.

Observing Gingham Week In the House Dress Section

Since the dresses carried in this department are made, for the most part, of pretty gingham, needs be that we observe National Gingham Week, September 2 to 6 inclusive, by featuring gingham house dresses of unusual charm at prices that are strikingly moderate.

New Porch Dresses $5.95

—Although we call them "Porch" dresses, their wear need by no means be restricted to that pleasant part of the house. These frocks are equally appropriate for wearing in the house or on the street. One particularly pretty model is in brown plaid patterning, the collar and cuffs of white pique, bands of the same material used for trimming the pocket.

Checked Gingham Dress $4.95

—This model is in dainty little checks of pink, blue, green or lavender with white. It has a long shawl collar which extends to the waistline, this collar being edged with white.
—The long sleeves have turn-back cuffs and the trim belt fastens with pearl buttons.

Pink Chambray Dress $8.50

—This is a very dainty frock, indeed, made of plain pink chambray with collar, cuffs and small vestee of white pique. The front and pockets are embroidered in black and white.
—The dress fastens down the front with nine large pearl buttons.

The Makers of Welworth Blouses
Are Now Sending Us
Lovely Silk Blouses to Sell at $5.00

—This is quite a departure for this well known manufacturing firm—hitherto they have devoted their energies to the making of lingerie blouses.
—So great has been their success in this line that they have decided to branch out into making, as well, blouses of georgette, crepe de chine and satin.

—We have made arrangements with the Welworth firm to carry these silk blouses exclusively in Los Angeles, just as we now carry their lingerie blouses.

—We have no hesitation in saying that these silk blouses will be quite as wonderful values as are the wash blouses turned out by this company.

—We have pictured six of the models now to be had in our Blouse Section.

—You will notice they are made on the smartest lines, showing touches of embroidery, tucking and hemstitching as well as the effective use of lace for trimming.

—Included, too, are tailored blouses with the two-in-one collars that are so much liked.

—The materials used are of very fine quality and all blouses are exceptionally good value at $5.

FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

BY ADELAIDE BYRD

MAKING ENDS MEET IN THE LUNCHEON SET

THE more we know the more we simplify. That holds good in every field. Needlework is not an exception. When the luncheon set first appeared it was hailed with enthusiasm, which has increased steadily, as it has been developing along various lines. It was very effective and then, too, it was more easily laundered than the tablecloth. Surely that was ample reason for its popularity.

It started with an elaborate system of doilies which, of course, we still use. However, for the more practical among us, the newest development will be more acceptable than the round-dollie set, for the reasons that using this set, the table will have no space exposed to disfiguring marks, and, since it entirely covers the table, it may be used not only for luncheon, but for dinner also—and so much more effectively than the regulation tablecloth.

Its seven pieces reiterate graphically the axiom learned in geometry long ago that the whole is equal to the sum of all its parts. (By the way, we shall have to use geometry some more in the course of transferring it.) Every part fits every other part and all of them together make a circle which is forty-five inches in diameter.

It may be worked solid with eyelets or in outline with eyelets. Either an all-white set or a two-color scheme would be effective. If, for example, you have a mahogany dining-room set, would you not like it in two shades of yellow? With a floral centerpiece of yellow it would be lovely, truly, don't you think so? Two shades of blue or two shades of nile green might be used also.

An all-white set is always good and in some cases is more desirable than a colored set. That is a matter of personal opinion entirely. But there is a set rule for transferring it.

The portion of the center hexagonal dollie shown is repeated to make one side. The same is true of the portion of the place mat shown.

The best way to begin would be to use a string with a radius of twenty-two and one-half inches and mark off an arc on your circular piece of linen, which is equal to twice the portion of the place mat shown here. By keeping that string carefully operating from exactly the same point (which is very carefully the center of your material) and marking off equal arcs, you will have six equal divisions—the six place mats.

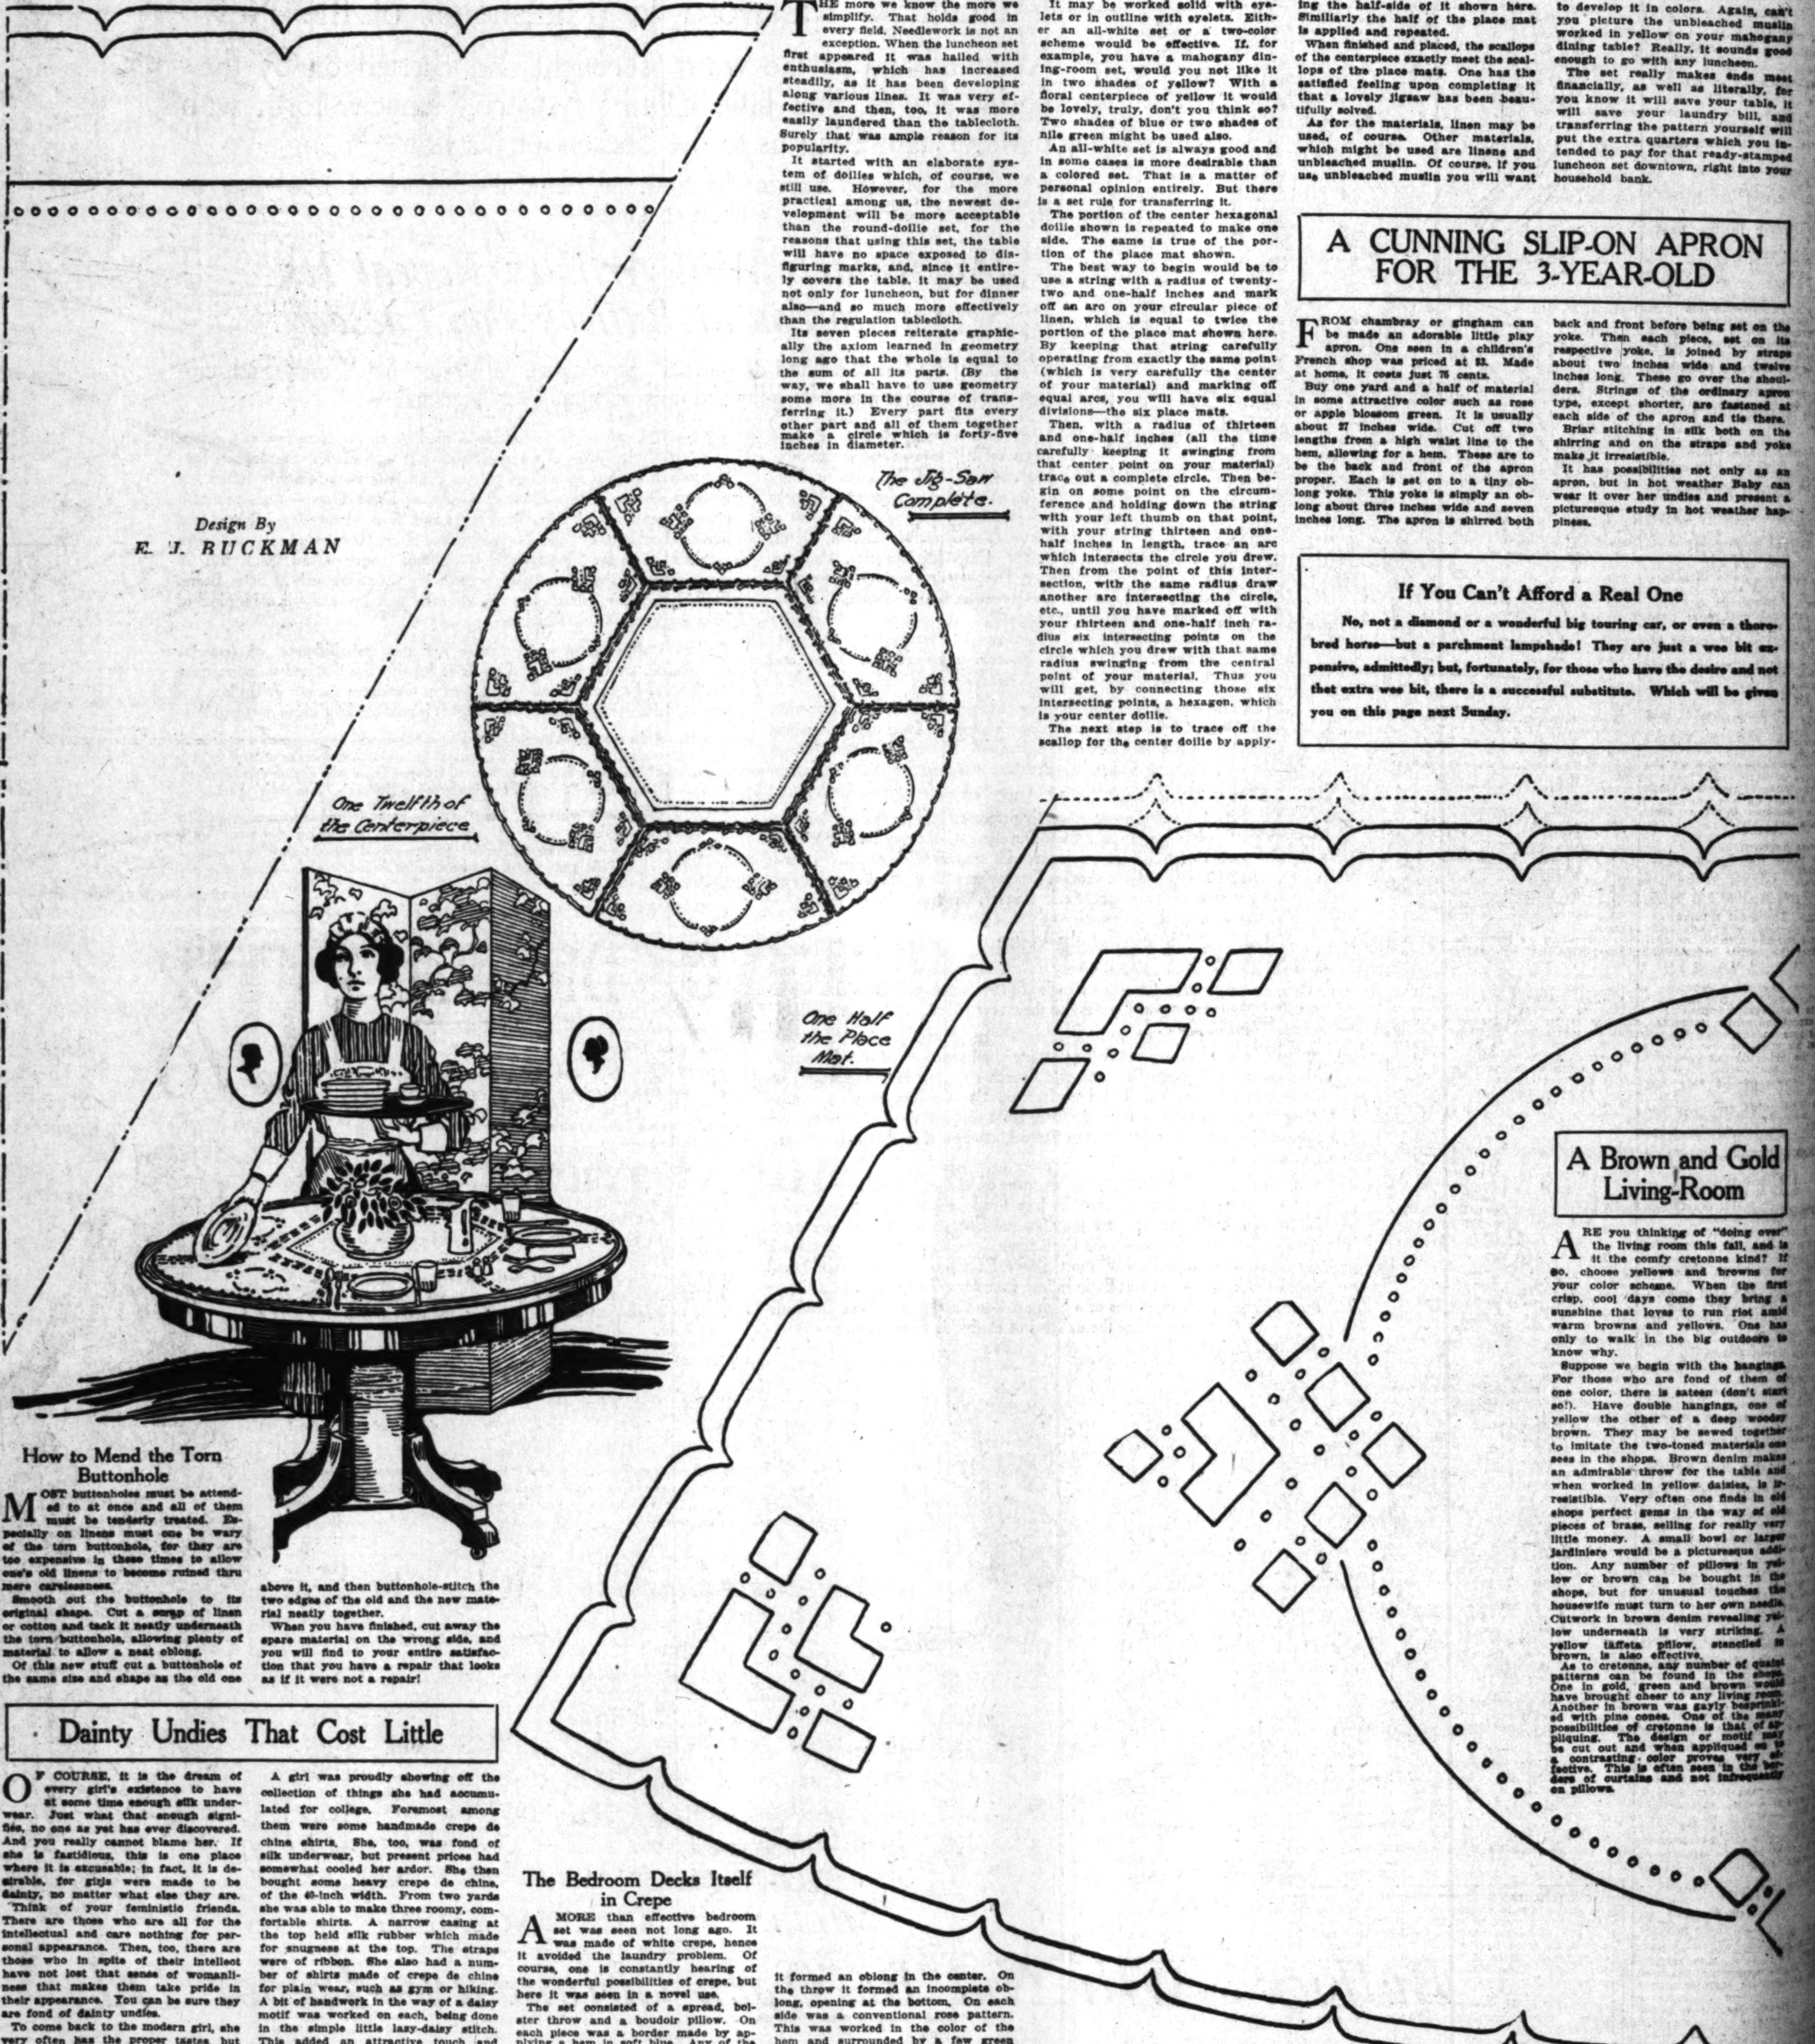
Then, with a radius of thirteen and one-half inches (all the time carefully keeping it swinging from that center point on your material) trace out a complete circle. Then begin on some point on the circumference and holding down the string with your left thumb on that point, with your string thirteen and one-half inches in length, trace an arc which intersects the circle you drew. Then from the point of this intersection, with the same radius draw another arc intersecting the circle, etc., until you have marked off with your thirteen and one-half inch radius six intersecting points on the circle which you drew with that same radius swinging from the central point of your material. Thus you will get, by connecting those six intersecting points, a hexagon, which is your center dollie.

The next step is to trace off the scallop for the center dollie by applying the half-side of it shown here. Similiarly the half of the place mat is applied and repeated.

When finished and placed, the scallops of the centerpiece exactly meet the scallops of the place mats. One has the satisfied feeling upon completing it that a lovely jigsaw has been beautifully solved.

As for the materials, linen may be used, of course. Other materials, which might be used are linene and unbleached muslin. Of course, if you use unbleached muslin you will want to develop it in colors. Again, can't you picture the unbleached muslin worked in yellow on your mahogany dining table? Really, it sounds good enough to go with any luncheon.

The set really makes ends meet financially, as well as literally, for you know it will save your table, it will save your laundry bill, and transferring the pattern yourself will put the extra quarters which you intended to pay for that ready-stamped luncheon set downtown, right into your household bank.



A CUNNING SLIP-ON APRON FOR THE 3-YEAR-OLD

FROM chambray or gingham can be made an adorable little play apron. One seen in a children's French shop was priced at $3. Made at home, it costs just 75 cents.

Buy one yard and a half of material in some attractive color such as rose or apple blossom green. It is usually about 27 inches wide. Cut off two lengths from a high waist line to the hem, allowing for a hem. These are to be the back and front of the apron proper. Each is set on to a tiny oblong yoke. This yoke is simply an oblong about three inches wide and seven inches long. The apron is shirred both back and front before being set on the yoke. Then each piece, set on its respective yoke, is joined by straps about two inches wide and twelve inches long. These go over the shoulders. Strings of the ordinary apron type, except shorter, are fastened at each side of the apron and tie there.

Briar stitching in silk both on the shirring and on the straps and yoke make it irresistible.

It has possibilities not only as an apron, but in hot weather Baby can wear it over her undies and present a picturesque study in hot weather happiness.

If You Can't Afford a Real One

No, not a diamond or a wonderful big touring car, or even a thorobred horse—but a parchment lampshade! They are just a wee bit expensive, admittedly; but, fortunately, for those who have the desire and not that extra wee bit, there is a successful substitute. Which will be given you on this page next Sunday.

A Brown and Gold Living-Room

ARE you thinking of "doing over" the living room this fall, and is it the comfy cretonne kind? If so, choose yellows and browns for your color scheme. When the first crisp, cool days come they bring a sunshine that loves to run riot amid warm browns and yellows. One has only to walk in the big outdoors to know why.

Suppose we begin with the hangings. For those who are fond of them of one color, there is sateen (don't start so!). Have double hangings, one of yellow the other of a deep woodsy brown. They may be sewed together to imitate the two-toned materials one sees in the shops. Brown denim makes an admirable throw for the table and when worked in yellow daisies, is irresistible. Very often one finds in old shops perfect gems in the way of old pieces of brass, selling for really very little money. A small bowl or larger jardiniere would be a picturesque addition. Any number of pillows in yellow or brown can be bought in the shops, but for unusual touches the housewife must turn to her own needle. Cutwork in brown denim revealing yellow underneath is very striking. A yellow taffeta pillow, stenciled in brown, is also effective.

As to cretonne, any number of quaint patterns can be found in the shops. One in gold, green and brown would have brought cheer to any living room. Another in brown was gayly besprinkled with pine cones. One of the many possibilities of cretonne is that of appliquing. The design or motif may be cut out and when appliqued on to a contrasting color proves very effective. This is often seen in the borders of curtains and not infrequently on pillows.

How to Mend the Torn Buttonhole

MOST buttonholes must be attended to at once and all of them must be tenderly treated. Especially on linens must one be wary of the torn buttonhole, for they are too expensive in these times to allow one's old linens to become ruined thru mere carelessness.

Smooth out the buttonhole to its original shape. Cut a scrap of linen or cotton and tack it neatly underneath the torn buttonhole, allowing plenty of material to allow a neat oblong.

Of this new stuff cut a buttonhole of the same size and shape as the old one above it, and then buttonhole-stitch the two edges of the old and the new material neatly together.

When you have finished, cut away the spare material on the wrong side, and you will find to your entire satisfaction that you have a repair that looks as if it were not a repair!

Dainty Undies That Cost Little

OF COURSE, it is the dream of every girl's existence to have at some time enough silk underwear. Just what that enough signifies, no one as yet has ever discovered. And you really cannot blame her. If she is fastidious, this is one place where it is excusable; in fact, it is desirable, for girls were made to be dainty, no matter what else they are.

Think of your feministic friends. There are those who are all for the intellectual and care nothing for personal appearance. Then, too, there are those who in spite of their intellect have not lost that sense of womanliness that makes them take pride in their appearance. You can be sure they are fond of dainty undies.

To come back to the modern girl, she very often has the proper tastes, but like most of us, lacks the essential, in other words, the wherewithal. Then comes the question what is she to do?

A girl was proudly showing off the collection of things she had accumulated for college. Foremost among them were some handmade crepe de chine shirts. She, too, was fond of silk underwear, but present prices had somewhat cooled her ardor. She then bought some heavy crepe de chine, of the 40-inch width. From two yards she was able to make three roomy, comfortable shirts. A narrow casing at the top held silk rubber which made for snugness at the top. The straps were of ribbon. She also had a number of shirts made of crepe de chine for plain wear, such as gym or hiking. A bit of handwork in the way of a daisy motif was worked on each, being done in the simple little lazy-daisy stitch. This added an attractive touch and served to mark them as distinct from the more expensive shirts of her roommates.

The Bedroom Decks Itself in Crepe

A MORE than effective bedroom set was seen not long ago. It was made of white crepe, hence it avoided the laundry problem. Of course, one is constantly hearing of the wonderful possibilities of crepe, but here it was seen in a novel use.

The set consisted of a spread, bolster throw and a boudoir pillow. On each piece was a border made by applying a hem in soft blue. Any of the pastel colors would have done as well. A trellis design (simply a border of squares) in dull brown, was then worked in the outline stitch. On the spread it formed an oblong in the center. On the throw it formed an incomplete oblong, opening at the bottom. On each side was a conventional rose pattern. This was worked in the color of the hem and surrounded by a few green leaves. Because of its dainty color scheme it gave a rather aristocratic touch to an otherwise rather plebeian crepe.

The People and Their Troubles

DOROTHY DIX TALKS

ow to Become a Social Success.

BY DOROTHY DIX.

A young man writes me a letter in which he asks he may become a success in society, and be of those whose name is on every invitation list, d who get the perpetual glad hand of welcome in ir circle.

This is a question that many other correspond- s ask, for while social success may not be the hest point of human achievement, it is one that peals to the vast majority of people. We all de- s to be liked and admired, to be sought after, to favored guests wherever we go, and there is no er illusion dearer to our hearts than the belief we have a magnetic personality.

Now, just what it takes to make one a social suc- is one of the profound mysteries of life. It t money. Anyone with a heavy enough pocket- k can break into society, but he can't buy liking r he gets there. A French chef and vintage s may attract you to a man's table without at- ting you to the man himself.

Beauty will not make one a social ess. Extraordinarily handsome n and women, who are living pic- s, are generally disliked by their n sex and feared by the opposite Liking isn't founded on jealousy d envy. Furthermore, people who 100 per cent. good lookers nearly all vain and egotistical, d vanity and egotism are two s that we only forgive in our ves.

Birth doesn't make one a social ess, for when a blue-blooded ocrat begins to shin up his ily tree the world hastens to e him alone on his arboreal h. There is nothing in America lonesome than a pedigree. family coat of arms of too y of us sport a pick and shovel pant, or a washtub couchant.

So much for the things that do not ls for popularity. On the other d, we all know plenty of people o have no particular attraction t we can put our finger on— o are neither witty nor wise, nor some, nor rich, nor in any way arkable—but who are universal rites in society, and we natural- y wondered why.

The answer is very simple. The t of popularity consists in hero- when being bored. None of us escape the affliction, but most us endure it under protest, and not attempt to conceal our suf- gs from the borer. The popu- person is the one who can sus- agonies of ennui and make no , even though his own vanity love of talking are gnawing at vitals. It is a Spartan virtue, it pays large dividends in popu- ty.

Of course heroism in being bored s for entire immolation of self. is a chastening truth, but a truth ertheless, that nobody wants to r about us, but they are eternal- absorbed in every detail about mselves. The most brilliant con- ationalist who ever adorned a on, does not begin to be the spell- der that the astute individual is who will let us tell him the story of r lives.

Therefore, the first requisite of who would be popular is an ity to maintain a rapt and ab- ed expression while listening to ing personal details. He must er let his eyes wander from the of the old lady who is giving all the fascinating details of last illness, and what she did Johnnie when he had the les forty years ago.

Nor must he let his attention from the old soldier who is telling, for the millionth time, how he alone and unaided put down the Confedercy, and he must listen with bated breath to the golf fiend who expatiates on his phenomenal skill in teeing off and to the automobilist who has got the most marvelous car that was ever made.

It isn't easy to do this. It takes the courage of a hero and the self abnegation of a martyr, but the man who can do it has made his calling and election sure in society. He may dine where he chooses, and spend his week-ends at country places, and his name will never be among those forgotten when a hostess is giving theater parties.

Another important qualification as a social success is a free and spontaneous laugh. We like those who listen to our troubles, but we adore those who laugh at our jokes. The man who can greet an oft-heard story with a smile instead of a groan, and whose laugh is hung on a hair trigger that any old chestnut will explode, has nothing short of a death grip on the affections of his fellow-men.

The chief thing that the aspirant for social success must guard against is the temptation to retaliate. Nothing is more fatal to popularity. When Smith relates the clever things his little Mary said it is a terrible mistake to expect to charm him by repeating the infantile bon mots of your little Bobby. He wonders why you should drag that brat into the conversation and expect anyone to want to hear about him.

When Brown recounts his thrilling adventure with mountain lions in Colorado, it isn't for the purpose of hearing the particulars of the big game you shot in India. You might have killed every tiger in the British empire without raising a thrill in his breast. He is amazed that you even expected him to be interested in your personal experiences.

And when we leave the club it is observable that we fight shy of each other's society while there is quite a scramble for the company of little Meekins who has no children, and has never had any adventures that he feels called upon to relate. "Nice fellow, that Meekins," we say as we invite him to dinner, "doesn't talk much, but he is remarkably interesting. And so intelligent! Fine sense of humor, never misses the point of a joke."

Society is made up of the bored and the bores, and our popularity depends on whether we do the talkng or the listening.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

Poor, Poor Bandits.

MAYER (Ariz.) Aug. 26.—[To Editor of The Times:] It shocks to see in The Times the account the rescue of those aviators. Not much the rescue as the fact that pt. Matlack, an officer in the erican Army, deliberately stole large amount of perfectly good ey from those poor hard-work- bandits. Worse yet, The Times its story, seems to condone, if to praise this action.

This is decidedly wrong. What, ask you, is to become of this in- ry of our sister republic which so long flourished, if its custo- ers persist in the practice of with- ding its gains? And why do the people and the press unite denouncing such procedure? en Raisuli and those Greek ands who carried off Miss —it was Miss Stone, wasn't —never were treated like that. this precedent is allowed to stand challenged it will inevitably fol- that a great many of our lead- black handers, Bolsheviks and er varieties of brigand will be ed to abandon their chosen pro- ssion and go to work. Which uld be too horrible to contem- le.

Don't you think you could get some the California statesmen to bring ssure to bear on the government the end that this outrage be pun- ed and reparation made to the ims? I would speak to some those in this State, but I have a picion that it would not be ad- able. They might say rude ngs to me.

In accordance with our well- own Mexican policy a personal ology accompanied by 1000 $20 d pieces on a silver salver—what- r that is—should go at once to se poor cheated bandits. And pt. Matlack should be banished to am or the Isle of Yap to medi- e on the outraged honor of a great tion.

Trusting that you will see to this, am

Respectfully,

C. E. ROE.

P.S.: Speaking of islands, permit to suggest that his nibs, the ex- iser, be sent to Molokai. As ty James would say, he would ke an excellent Molokaiser.

Hearts and Legs.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—[To e Editor of The Times:] A lit- tale of two headlines: "$50,000 art balm; young lady gets neat for broken heart." Poor dear; ly $50,000 for an aching, bleed- heart. Perhaps three whole ths will elapse before she can ain her faith in human nature and in man especially. Profligate man must be taught that the affections of young women are not to be dealt with lightly. Ah, yes—that jury was to be commended. It was typically American.

"Young man awarded $8000." Why? Oh, he lost his legs. Run over by a street car. The case is reported in 29 Cal.App.Dec.492. Nothing much to it, though. He tried to beat a car over a crossing and the car won. Of course, the car was a good block away when he started across, and it was traveling at thirty-five miles an hour at a place where twenty is the limit. But then, electric trains have schedules to live up to. They cannot be hindered by mere laws.

What wonderful values we place on the various parts of our anatomies. Even on our so-called "emotions." Love (?) blasted brings in a mighty sum, but a body torn and rocked with the pains of hell, bones crushed, and flesh torn and mangled, a mind nigh crazed with the agony of mutiliated and outraged nerves; throw him a penny for that.

Nature will heal the heart of the one; but the other—through life he'll make his way, legless. Fit no longer for the busy marts of man; stricken down in the full bloom of his youth; a rudderless derelict, with no chance to be salvaged.

I wonder if the jury in that last case was typically—but then, as Kipling says "that's another story."

OBSERVER.

Everybody Strike.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] One need not go to see Fatty Arbuckle or Charley Chaplin to get a laugh; have it right at home reading The Times in a comfortable chair, where I am not subjected to objectionable breaths and other inconveniences. Your editorial in this morning's Times, "Let's all strike," sure made me laugh; it covers the present strike mania pretty well; labor unions are a menace to our country and should be stamped out entirely, now is as good time as any for all employers to throw down the gauntlet to all unions, whether they are sheet metal workers or bank clerks.

Employ nobody that belongs to any labor union; government ownership of public utilities before the advent of the unions would have been perhaps all right, but now it wouldn't. Our lawmakers, representatives and officials would give the unions all they demanded at any time; in fact, the unions would run the government.

Let every employer pay his employees as much as he can afford, making a reasonable profit on his investment. If the wage does not suit the employee he has the right to quit and do better elsewhere, if he can! That's all the rights he has, or ought have.

In my opinion, the subject of wages and hours is a matter between employer and employee only. The government has no right to interfere. High wages, short hours and exorbitant profits are responsible for high prices. There was no such unrest and discontent among the workers when we all worked ten and fourteen hours out of twenty-four. It seems people have gone pleasure mad. Pretty soon nobody will want to work, and then we can all go on strike, as The Times suggests.

C. E. C.

Oh Shades of Cleveland.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 28.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Oh shades of departed greatness! Where is the patriotic spirit of our late Grover Cleveland—our once Democratic President whose love of country came first and all the time?

He never neglected this—our own country—to sacrifice our interests to that of Europe—feeding that country of wars while ours takes hit or miss, as fate deals it out to us.

I think a change of Presidents is the only remedy that will cure our Bolshevism, anarchism, loose laws and defiance of decency generally.

N. C. E.

Labor's Gratitude.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 28.—[To the Editor of The Times:] All my life long I have been for "the under dog." I have talked myself weak for the initiative and referendum, the direct primary, the organization of the laboring crafts, and everything which I thought would help a bit and get more of an even break for the wage-earner—get him a little more of what he is producing.

Now, in a real crisis, when men like myself are engaged in a real battle to provide necessities for myself and little family, comes this same bunch for whom I have always battled and absolutely refuse to see that if they get more money on top of the big wages they are now receiving they will not help themselves but simply lessen the purchasing power of a dollar to a place when I must face absolute want.

Living costs will not, can not be lessened until wages come down. For every dollar increase the rail workers get at this time a dollar will be added to the price of necessities. They will be in a worse position and so will I.

Why in the name of God can't these radical red flag waving agitators see this.

BOOK-KEEPER.

Abuse of Power.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The public suffers through an abuse of power. Whether through a monarchy, a military despotism or a union-labor dictatorship. How long will the patriotic public submit? There are at least 90,000,000 to 100,000,000 million people in this country who are affected more by the high cost of living on account of the high wages for the railroad men than for any other reason, unless it is State and government taxes.

How about the wages of all the other workers—millions that are not members of unions including all the farmers. Why shouldn't they have at least the same scale as the railroad employees receive at present? The work longer hours in many instances and do equally as hard work and valuable work for the community. In the language of the street "Where do they get off?"

W. H. W.

A Word of Appreciation.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 26.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Two days ago I was a passenger on a West Eleventh-street line. Being unfamiliar with the streets, I asked the conductor to tell me when we should reach Beacon street. He was very kind and courteous, and informed me that the car did not stop there, but I could get off either at Union or Burlington, as I preferred. We proceeded a few blocks, when I noticed the car stop and the conductor jump off and walk to the curbing, where his wife stood with a lunch box ready for him. This would have passed unnoticed during normal times, but I took particular pains to observe the family, looking for a possible solution to the question of how one man can live on the salary that another says is insufficient.

I noticed that their house was a large, neat bungalow, and in the window of a front room was a sign, "room for rent." This alone showed me that they had been thrifty enough to accummulate sufficient furniture to enable them to spare one or two rooms, thus adding to their income.

The wife was a small, wiry little home-woman, and with her was a healthy little girl sensibly clad in girl's overalls. When we stopped the wife was bargaining with a fruit vendor for a box of peaches, and reminded me of the busy little bee who stores up her supplies for the winter; and I thought how good those peach preserves or spiced peaches would taste some time when father opens his lunch box. As we passed on the little girl shouted "Good-by, daddy," and he answered back pleasantly, "good-by."

As we were out of the traffic our good conductor sat down and opened his lunch box, and though it was only 10 o'clock I knew that he had been on duty several hours before we were out of our beds. I couldn't help seeing him take out first a snowy-white fringed napkin, and that each article was carefully wrapped in waxed paper, and that it all showed love, good management and thrift. It also said that if father was faithfully sticking to his job, that mother was not shirking hers, either. And I thought, "If one man can live and provide for a family on the salary the company is paying why cannot another?" Isn't it, after all, a question of outgo rather than income? Probably the little mother doesn't own many pairs of $2 silk stockings, and undoubtedly she bakes her own good bread and pies instead of buying them at a bakery as she hurries home from the movies or a bargain crush; and I'm almost sure father's best suit is a ready-made, but it must be infinitely more satisfactory to deposit the money from the rented rooms each month and feel that some day their own little home in the foothills or toward the beach will be all paid for.

And the next time I ride on that car I'm going to smile at that tall, thin polite conductor, and I'm going to ask him how his good wife and the little girl are, and then he'll know who wrote this word of appreciation.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Q.: Why is it that there are so few old maids among colored women? V. H.

A.: One explanation given for the infrequency of unmarried colored women is that marriage among negroes usually does not carry the financial burden to the man that it does among whites. Colored women when married usually continue to be self-supporting.

Q.: Does Gen. Pershing speak French and Spanish? L. T. M.

A.: Gen. Pershing learned Spanish in the Philippines. When he went to France he did not know French, but he studied assiduously and in six months he was holding conferences with French officers without the use of an interpreter. In a year he was a good French linguist.

Q.: What kind of wood absorbs the least water, and what kind absorbs water most quickly. G. F.

A.: Lignum vitae, the hardest wood known, is the most impervious to water. Of our domestic woods, oak and ash withstand water best. Cypress wood absorbs water most quickly.

Q.: What does the Indian name Pocahontas mean? S. F.

A.: Pocahontas signifies "a stream between two hills."

Q.: What is a leading question? B. E.

A.: A leading question is one that suggests the answer to the person questioned. It is against the rules of court proceedings for a counsel to ask a witness leading questions, except in cross-examinations. "Were you at the house of Mr. Jones on Tuesday night?" is a leading question. The lawyer should ask, "Where were you on Tuesday night?"

Q.: How large is the vocabulary of the average person? N. B. H.

A.: In daily intercourse, the vocabulary of the average person seldom exceeds 2500 words. That of an uneducated person usually consists of less than 800 words.

Q.: What is the lowest temperature recorded? B. K.

A.: The lowest temperature ever recorded was at Werchojansk, Siberia, January 15, 1885. The thermometer stood at 90 deg. and a fraction below zero. The ground in this part of Siberia freezes to a depth of 100 feet, and never entirely thaws, even in summer.

Q.: What is a pogrom? F. E.

A.: The name pogrom is given to anti-Jewish riots in Russia. They first took place in 1881, after the assassination of Alexander II by the revolutionists. That the pogroms were organized and that they were countenanced by government officials was partially proved by the investigation and publication of secret government documents. These riots have been the cause of the immigration of large numbers of Jews to the United States.

Q.: How did the elephant's trunk come to be so called? D. S.

A.: The word trunk in this connection is a corruption of trump, which was the old English term. It was used because the elephant was said to make a noise like a trumpet.

What Do You Think Now?

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 28—[To the Editor of The Times:] Los Angeles is doomed! Men and women, hold up your hands, an awful fate awaits you. Today on the street I heard one of the street car strikers say to another man: "We won't go back to work until every one of those damned scabs is off the job, if it takes two years." Now what do you think about that?

Just because a few hundred malcontents refuse to work, the other 600,000 people of Los Angeles must drag their weary feet up and down the streets for two long years—at least, that's what this poor fish expects them to do, while the bloated street car men ride around in their automobiles, smoking their big black cigars.

Seriously, I wonder what the poor deluded dupes do actually think? Do they really and truly think that out of 110,000,000 people they are the only ones who can run those cars? I want to say to them that two years from now they will be missed about as much as a few drops of water taken from the ocean.

I wonder who they think cares whether they go back to work or not? Certainly not the car company, when they can get all the men they want in two weeks; and if they could only get protection, would be running their cars the same as though there was no strike.

Another thing I would like to know: Why is a man a "scab" when he takes a striker's place. It seems to me that same striker must have been a "scab" himself when he first went to work and took some other man's place. How about it?

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT'S NOVEL.

The Latest Book by the Author Advertised as the "Greatest of This Generation"—Some Rather Extensive Comment.

BY GORDON RAY YOUNG.

I.

In the ordinary course of events if any book similar to those by Harold Bell Wright came into my hands for a reading, I would give it about three glances and toss it into the discards. One would almost be safe in betting that it had been published at the expense of the young dunce who wrote it.

But I have read the whole of "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent." I have even re-read passages.

The publication of any book by Mr. Wright is a literary event. I believe the advertisements say that it is always "the" literary event of the year. Millions of people read each new book, talk about it, exclaim over it. And so not to miss any part of this wonderful event, I have read every word of "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent." I shall never read another novel by Mr. Wright—or by a lot of other people, popular and successful. This is a valedictory salute to him and to them.

Eight hundred thousand copies of this novel have been ordered in advance—sold before publication. Book dealers go on the theory—and some of them go broke on it, too—that the initial sale of an author's new book will equal the total sale of the author's previous book. The first edition of "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent" will probably be a million copies: undoubtedly the largest edition of a new book ever printed.

Though such popularity attends Mr. Wright's ventures, both he and his publisher, Elsbery W. Reynolds, show a symptomatic fretfulness because hack reviewers do not like these novels of theirs. Mr. Reynolds proclaims in his biographical sketch of the author appended to the present novel, and proclaims again on the slip-cover: "The great heart of the reading public is an unprejudiced critic"—which is very nearly an illiterate sentence as well as an awkward thing for Mr. Reynolds to say. If to know good literary work, and to know why and when literary work is good, makes one prejudiced against this sort of thing, then it is certainly tactless to refer to Mr. Wright's admirers as "unprejudiced." But when Mr. Reynolds himself starts out to use the English language he can perform inadvertent wonders with it. (Vide the Appendix. Also, in a letter to reviewers about the present novel he says: "I will appreciate your expression through a review in your columns as the strength of the book impels you." Well, it has "impelled" me, all right.)

As I was saying, millions of people read and have read Mr. Wright's books, yet his energetic publisher—and I doff my hat to the business ability of Elsbery Reynolds: he is a marvel—has not so far been able to bring forward one person of literary importance or standing to uphold Mr. Wright for any single artistic or human quality. Sugar refiners can hire scientists—and it has been done—to swear that dangerous microbes lurk in raw, brown sugar; but men of letters seem to have more honor than men of science, and their appreciations are voluntary. The only "distinguished" person I ever heard of who praised Mr. Wright was one Maria (of late changed to "Marie") Thompson Daviess, author of "The Melting of Molly." She has written: "Harold Bell Wright is a big, genuine man, who knows well average human life and to that possession has added a simple, direct, forceful talent for creating in a novel a small world, modeled on the cosmic plan of this great world belonging to all of us, and leading our imaginations in to witness his sun, moon, stars and heroes and heroines."

In the presence of such a sentence, such construction, such expression, such imagery, it is needless to comment on Miss Daviess's powers of discrimination.

Mr. Reynolds has also said above his signature: "We repeat, that Harold Bell Wright is the greatest author of this generation." (No doubt the comma in that sentence crept in when Mr. Reynolds wasn't looking.)

II.

A few years ago Mr. Reynolds boasted that he was spending $150,000 to advertise one book of Mr. Wright's. This boast was itself widely advertised as an inducement to book-sellers to order heavily. The appropriation announced for the present book is $100,000.

Ask any advertising man—and Mr. Reynolds has a good one—if any author, not offensively vicious in theme, could not also be made "great" by such liberal advertising.

Every publisher knows that he could take any one author, if not very intellectual, and by concentrating on that author's books put him into a selling class with Harold Bell Wright. The book would have to be what is known as "cheap"—though this doesn't at all refer to the selling price. But publishers like to publish many books, most of them good if possible, and do not care to put all of their eggs into one basket. In fact, though eager to make money, most publishers have ideals and many of them really do know something of literary values. If Mr. Wright wishes to confound his disparagers and remove all possibility of credit for his greatness from Mr. Reynolds's ad writer, let him bring out a book under a pen name and see what happens to it, and see how great a throb he puts into the critical heart of the unprejudiced public.

I mention that because Mr. Wright has received a lot of credit for popularity that belongs to his ad writer. The advertising campaign on his books is always heavy; and a public that can, for instance, be persuaded by advertising to buy so much of one particular brand of chewing gum that its manufacturer becomes a multi-millionaire, is not to have much credit for judgment in selecting its most "popular" author. "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," to give another illustration, was brought out solely because it seemed an exceedingly worthy book. It was not expected to sell "big" and was not advertised heavily until by word of mouth it had swept the country. The people who read Harold Bell Wright read very little else. They are unfamiliar with good books and have only a rudimentary sense of discrimination. They ask for Harold Bell Wright in much the same way that they ask for "Wrigley's."

Among the other inducements that have drawn the public toward Harold Bell Wright is possibly the offer, widely advertised, of course, to send anyone who ordered an advance copy of a certain book a group picture of Mr. Wright and his family. This is one of the things that might be cited on behalf of Mr. Wright's originality. So far as I am aware no other author ever did anything of the kind. This generous offer did not extend to "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent," no doubt owing to Mr. Wright's temperamental disturbance which broke up the family group. In the biographical appendix which Mr. Reynolds has added to "Brian Kent" the marriage is touchingly mentioned as "a union of love . . . that had its beginning back in the school days." In order to fill out the biography and make it accurate Mr. Reynolds might have referred, at least, to the divorce. The following from a newspaper account of last year is offered generously to fill in Mr. Reynolds's little oversight:

"Mrs. Wright's alleged indifference to and lack of appreciation for his literary work, the alleged fact that she was not in touch with him when he was engaged upon a novel, and her neglect of him when he needed sympathy, are told in the complaint. The lack of sympathy is made the basis of a charge of mental cruelty."

Strange that the lack of sympathy and mental cruelty should crop out at the height of a successful career, after his many years of laborious toil, poor health and little money—all so touchingly dwelt upon in Mr. Reynolds's biographical appendix.

It may be said that such remarks as mine are out of place in a literary discussion. They are. But there is little that is literary about Harold Bell Wright, and if it is not beneath his dignity to use his family's photograph and his boyhood love affair for advertising purposes, it is not above my dignity to comment upon it.

III.

I am not worth a plugged penny as a prophet and the wish is undoubtedly father of the thought; but I think that in spite of advertising, free distribution of photographs and sentimental balderdash about his ideals, early labors, and that sort of thing, Harold Bell Wright is about done as the most "popular" author. This new book is the most labored of all his efforts. He tried desperately. This is particularly noticeable in the first of the book, where the attempt at fine writing is exceedingly pronounced, with the grotesque symbolism of the river that more or less literally runs through the story. The river is important. It affords many rescues and a convenient tragedy.

As though realizing that Mr. Wright's admirers need some tutoring in what they ought to think about the book—and this Boetian practice is not restricted to Mr. Wright's publisher alone—the slip-cover informs us that: "There are thrilling incidents related with such vivid realism that one reads with breathless interest. And yet the fascinating power of the story is rather in the clean-cut analysis of life and character, and in the skillful visualization of the clash and conflicts of life's invisible forces out of which the thrilling incidents come."

A 9-year-old could write a better novel, with far more clean-cut analysis of life and character. As a matter of fact a 9-year-old girl has written such a book. Her name is Daisy Ashford. The book is "The Young Visiters." Judging by Mr. Wright's evident distaste for wit and humor—that is, judging by its inevitable absence from all of his books, though frequent barbarities of dialect may possibly indicate an occasional irritation of his sense of humor—it would do him no good to sit at the feet of Miss Ashford. As a literary maxim it may be set down that there can be no analysis of life and character without high wit. There is no use arguing about it. It simply can't be made. Mr. Wright hasn't the faintest glimmering of wit. He has only misspellings and bad grammar for humor.

There is a very obvious structural reason why "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent" will not satisfy Mr. Wright's admirers as his other books have done. The book will sell—the impetus of former success and present advertising will make it sell. But it will not satisfy. One of these reasons is that his leading character is 70 years old, and the love interest is not even suggested until the middle of the book. Another and more important reason is that the class of people who admire Mr. Wright will have—perhaps unconsciously, but nevertheless they will have—resentment at the married hero's loving the heroine and keeping his wife in the dark. But the most important reason is that the class of people who are Mr. Wright's admirers will be disgusted to find that the hero is actually guilty of the bank robbery. Whether Mr. Wright was not ingenious enough to jerk his precious hero from the midst of circumstantial evidence and clear him by a sudden twist of development, or whether he tried to be "realistic," "true to life," remains to be determined by his own confessional. The fact is that Mr. Wright caters to the cheapest class of reading brains, and guilty heroes belong only to picaresque stories and to intellectual fiction, neither of which he has ever approached.

IV.

As a matter of "news value" it might be worth while to go into a bit of detail about "The Re-Creation of Brian Kent," and it is only because of "news value" that the book receives this extended attention—far above its deserts. The publication of a first edition that reaches toward a million copies really belongs on the front page with "other women," Bolsheviks, murders and similar sensations. (As the woods are full of people with strange ideas in their heads, it may relieve some of them to know that I have never met Mr. Wright, and never had the faintest personal connection with him. I have read his novels and his advertisements about being the "greatest author of this generation." Mr. Wright may console himself with the thought that the greatest men of all ages have suffered from the mudballs of dinky, savage little critics.)

"The Re-Creation (dangerously like 'recreation') of Brian Kent" is the story of a fellow who steals from a bank in Chicago and is thought to have been drowned in the convenient river down in the Ozarks. Brian's drunken, rowdy wife, though apparently designed as a vicious creature, is considerate enough to tell the reader that it was really her fault that he stole the money—but steal it he did. At the beginning of the story Brian seems to be a confirmed booze-fighter; though when he decides on regeneration it is as easy for him as literally turning the symbolic "new leaf." He decides to commit suicide and takes a bottle of whisky along when he goes down to jump from the bank of the river. Brian gets into a boat, intending to go out to the middle of the stream and jump in. And the boat drifts on and on. The river is terribly swollen and angry, and the craft is only a little boat. Mr. Wright describes a hypothetical—hypothetical, mind you—wreck of that small boat with all the fury and adjectives needed for an inflammatory description of a fourmaster, hurricane-driven, being dashed on a cragbound island. Do you doubt it? Listen: The boat isn't wrecked, but this is what would have happened had it been wrecked in that Ozark stream: "About it the racing waters would leap and boil in their furious, headlong career, shaking and tossing the helpless victim of their might with a vicious strength from where there would be no escape, until, in the climax of the river's madness, the object of its angry sport would be dashed against the cliff, and torn, and crushed, and hammered by the terrific weight of the rushing flood against that rocky anvil, into a battered and shapeless wreck."—P. 50. Yet Mr. Wright calls this cataclysmic body of water a "stream."—P. 24.

The boat isn't wrecked. It drifts down to Aunt Sue's place. She is 71 years old, a wonderful old schoolteacher all of whose schoolboys seem to have grown into great and wealthy men, and correspond with her regularly. She is worried over the loss of money mailed to a Chicago bank—when lo! here at her door is the helpless, drunken thief that stole her letter. And she knows it. The Sheriff comes, and she lies to the Sheriff—this is a fearfully wicked book. The angelic old lady lies, the hero is a thief, the banker and old lady connive together to cheat the law, and nick Brian for the reward money.

But to get back to the story, the old lady instantly claims Brian as a son or something because the river brought him. (Mr. Wright might possibly have improved the situation by working in some reference to Moses in the bulrushes.) At this point Mr. Wright must have got some of his notes on love scenes mixed. The one in which Aunt Sue kisses the sleeping Brian looks suspiciously as if it had originally been intended for a woman about fifty-three years younger. She loves him at once and tells him to write a book, and he does, and the book ultimately makes him famous.

She sends for Betty Jo along toward the middle of the novel—the middle of Mr. Wright's novel, not Brian's. Betty Jo is also a wonderful girl. For no apparent reason Betty Jo is to inherit the Chicago banker's fortune, but she has been off some place taking a business course, and she comes to copy on the typewriter the great book Brian has written in long hand, and she arrives just as the manuscript is being fished from the river—convenient river—where Brian has petulantly thrown it to give Judy, the mountain girl, a big rescue scene; and when she—Betty Jo, I mean—arrives, Brian immediately then and there, blurts out all about himself being a crook, a robber of Aunt Sue's money, and Betty Jo rapidly comes to love Brian because she sees he is trying so hard not to love her—which is enough to put into one sentence.

Lots of things happen, mostly in the convenient river; exciting things. Brian's wife blows in, tries to raise the devil with Betty Jo, then gets drowned in the convenient river. Ah, the wily Brian waits until she is too far gone toward the rapids before he makes his big jump to save her. I think Brian really put one over on his author. Brian doesn't want to save her, and he does actually laugh when he sees her caught in the rapids. But as a bluff before Betty Jo, he pulls his phoney rescue scene—and never lets on to Mr. Wright that it is phoney; so Mr. Wright, innocently and enthusiastically, wrote a long account about how nobly Brian struggled and strove to save the abominable wife. Perhaps Mr. Wright never heard about how characters get away from authors and do things to suit themselves.

V.

It would certainly be an injustice not to mention Mr. Wright's realistic attempts at the viciously gay life. There are a lot of swear words in it, and the women smoke cigarettes and get drunk and —why—come to think of it this is shocking! Mr. Wright wrote "The Eyes of the World" with (so Mr. Reynolds's ad-writer said) "clenched teeth and his soul on fire" just to smash and destroy and cause the public to repudiate utterly all salacious fiction and scenes. But alas, who grapples with the devil is liable to get tar on his hands. It is too, too bad that Mr. Wright, the great moralist, should have a hero that steals, a white-haired old lady that lies, a seemingly respectable banker that is up to trickery, a crippled soubrette that exclaims blasphemously: "That there God of your'n . . . . Good? Hell! A dad-burned ornery kind of God I call Him!"—and Judy never recants those shocking words; and there is also a whole clubhouse full of women that are over-sexed and drunken, with males around them, but no husbands. My goodness! Can it possibly be that something has happened to Mr. Wright? Can it be that he, not satisfied with his very own millions of readers, is trying to tempt some of Robert W. Chambers's, too? And Mr. Reynolds, I believe, specializes in Harold Bell Wright and—Bibles.

A PSYCHIC BOOK.

Alfred W. Martin in his "Psychic Tendencies of Today" (D. Appleton & Co.) gives a brief, though complete and just, description of various psychic movements, as spiritualism, theosophy, Christian Science, psychotherapy and the Emmanuel movement. As the reader progresses through the book, he might easily think that each succeeding form of belief presented to him is the writer's own accepted belief, so just, definite and analytic are his statements. If a true follower of each belief submitted to the reader had been asked to write a statement of his own personal creed, the volume would scarcely then be more suggestive and comprehensive.

No review would seem natural without at least one "but" and not wishing to appear exceptional I venture to say but for the part giving undue space to Sir Oliver Lodge's book, the volume is unusually interesting and satisfactory. The premise is given clearly and what is most rare, not too elaborately. The conclusions are both logical, convincing and suggestive, while they are not offensively self-assertive with a finality that admits of no difference of opinion as is the case with some minds that attempt to discuss the immortality of the human soul.

The spirit of the book is hopeful and encouraging. He says: "Man, unlike the products of Nature, is not a mere wave that rises and subsides, a shadow that passes over the scene—there is in him that which does not deserve to die and will not die."

The book is well worth reading, and rereading at least once. And that is something in this busy age.

Cows in Canton.

In Canton twenty-five years ago there were practically no cattle used for dairy purposes. Today there are about 550 cows of foreign breeds, and about fifty buffaloes kept exclusively for milk. "THE LITTLE TOWN."

BY JOHN McGARIETY.

In a book called "The Little Town," published by Macmillan, and written by Harlan Paul Douglass, who is secretary of the American Missionary Association, the author quotes someone as saying: 'God made the country, man the city, but the devil the little town."

This is indeed a very harsh indictment, and we can see no reason for it. But, if it be true, then it would seem that the small town might serve as an interesting subject upon which to write a book.

Mr. Douglass has written a book about the small town, and it is both an interesting and a valuable book. Every small town should buy a copy of it. In fact, it would be a good investment for small towns generally to buy the book in carload lots out of its public funds and present each citizen with a copy.

Every man must live somewhere, and if it be his fate to live in a little town it is surely his duty to make the place fit and comfortable, the same as another man would desire to make his wickiup in the desert comfortable, or that a man in a city would want to make his section of the same spick and span and good to look at.

And, there are a lot of people who, either from choice or because they have to do so, live in small towns. Mr. Douglass states that there are fully 12,000,000 Americans in this classification.

The kind of a book that Mr. Douglass has written is perhaps best stated in his own words.

"This book," says he, "attempts to suggest in what infinite variety the gospel of rural progress applies to the little town. Country-life evangelists do not ordinarily regard it as any part of their business to address the town directly—unless to scold it. They treat it rather as an incidental, and indeed a trivial thing. The ruralist priest and equally the urban Levite have their own important business. They lend a glance to the little town's needs, but pass by on the other side. At most they only toss a casual word in its direction, to which the little town can only reply, 'Did you speak to me? I am not conscious of answering to your description. I do not recognize myself as coming under your classification.'"

Now, this is beginning a book promisingly. It is an opening that lures one to read farther. So, to start with, here is an author who knows how to write. And, we would hardly care to read any other kind of author, no matter how important the contents of his book might be.

As one does read farther in the book of "The Little Town," one finds that it is a thoroughly practical book as a whole. The author has apparently made a study of villages in America and has found out not only what is the matter with them but also what can be done to remedy the things that are the matter with them. It is easy to find fault, but not so easy to point out the way to cure the fault. Mr. Douglass does not balk at the task.

Certainly the little town in America has acquired an undesirable reputation; so much so, indeed, that it is a common expression among us that we prefer to live either in the country or in a city. And a small town is not a city.

The troubles of the small town are of its own making. They accept the name that has been made for them, when they should themselves make it and make it inviting and dignified. There is, of course, no fundamental reason why a little town should not be as desirable a place of residence as a city, or more so. If a little town be the right kind of a little town, it should have great claims on the affections and the pride of its inhabitants.

And this author speaks truly of the little town when he says: "The little town is a field for altruistic service of thrilling importance. Here stands greatness humbly clad; here patriotic labor is involved with charm; here deep social processes are bound up with intimate personal contacts; here especially the high fortunes of the open country are to be centered and inspired; here lies the pleasant middle-ground through which, if one will have it so, the Garden of Eden merges into the City of God."

It is a fine book, as we have said, this book of the little town, and it has been a pleasure to read it.

"GREGG" TO BE TRANSLATED.

Fleta Campbell Springer's book, "Gregg," has been attracting unusual notice among the English-reading public in Copenhagen, and through the medium of Steen Hasselbachs Forlag, one of the most modern publishing houses in Denmark, it is to be shortly published in Danish. The compliments bestowed on the writer of "Gregg" at the time of its American publication by the Harpers were almost phenomenal, considering it was Mrs. Springer's first novel, the press proclaiming it on every side as one of the outstanding novels of the year. In it the author has made a psychological study of a young American who, before our entry into the war, volunteers in the ambulance service and goes to France, where he meets the girl he ultimately marries. It is not till then that those nearest him begin to see that he is not all that they think him and reluctantly admit that the charming companion is nothing less than an egoist of the worst type.

Describing a Giant.

The mathematical man can see the fun and mistakes in calculating the size of things. No one has ever given me an impression of bulk such as that of the late Prof. Clifford—a famous mathematician and an occasional humorist. In a lightsome essay he described the giant whose favorite food was bread and butter sprinkled with light brown horses.—[London Chronicle.

LEONARD MERRICK AND HIS STORY.

Leonard Merrick, who was born in London, was intended for the bar. That is to say, his father looked forward to his becoming a barrister, though what Merrick himself wanted to do was to write, and act. In fact, he always did write, even in his nursery. Before the boy could go to Heidelberg, where he was to complete his education, his father had suffered financial reverses. The bar was out of the question now. Instead of starting life as a wealthy man's son, Merrick was facing the need of earning a bare subsistence. At the age of 18 he had exchanged luxury for a job at the South African diamond mines. He stood all day superintending the labors of Zulus and Kafirs in a temperature of 100 degrees in the shade, and slept in a tin hut at the foot of the tailings heap.

His next post was in the local Courthouse. After his berth with the mining company, it was a welcome change to him to sit down. He sat, taking natives' affidavits, and issuing summonses for assault in the judge's office—until the judge committed suicide. Then Merrick found the association depressing and went to Kimberley.

All the time, he was still longing for authorship, and the stage, and had been writing verses and articles on the government stationery. The first thing of his to be printed was an article that he had submitted to a Kimberley paper. He had not asked for payment, and had signed only his initials. The article appeared in the next issue, and in the "Answers to Correspondents" was a line to L. M.—"Your contribution is capital. We should like to hear from you again."

That was Merrick's first happy day on the diamond fields. He was yearning for enough money to get back to England, and the compliment seemed to promise checks. Unfortunately for his hope, the paper collapsed soon afterward.

He was in a solicitor's office in Kimberley for nearly two years, and came near to dying of camp fever before he succeeded in returning to London. And in London, at the age of 21, he did manage to "go on the stage" at last. It was then he adopted the surname of "Merrick." It is now his own, by legal process. He was formerly "Leonard Miller." His experience as an actor was very brief. He had not theatrical connections or acquaintances and the engagements obtainable by a young man without influence, or means were few and far between. If it had not been for his pen, he would have starved. He wrote the first short stories that he had attempted since he was a child. Some of them were long afterward reprinted in his volume entitled, "This Stage of Fools." (When we are born we cry, that we are come to this great "stage of fools.") He sold them for next to nothing. Vainly seeking engagements in the theater, concealing his position from relatives, who would readily have helped him if they had guessed his straits, Merrick was thankful in those days to contribute a 3000-word story regularly to an obscure society paper for seven shillings and six-pence a week.

When Merrick paints loneliness in London, as he does in some of his books, he is painting from experience, when he writes of London's "brutality," he writes of what he has borne. He saw no prospect in England, and he had a growing conviction that his success was to come to him in America. One day he put his pride in his pocket and went to ask a man for a loan of fifty pounds. The man gave him an open check on the spot. Within a quarter of an hour Merrick had cashed the check, and booked a second-class passage to New York.

He landed in New York friendless, about 7 p.m. At 8 p.m., one ambition of his life was fulfilled. It was the last night of a season of Clara Morris's and he was at the theater—his anxieties forgotten—seeing her act at last.

He admits his journey to have been a folly; he had no grounds for believing that the way would be easier for him in New York than it had been in London. He wrote at night in the hall room of a boarding house, and spent most of the day seeking theatrical engagements in the agents' offices. Once, and only once, he was near to getting one—he was offered a part in "The Two Orphans" on the road. But, familiar as he was with the title, it transpired that he had never seen the play. The agent—one of the old school—was unable to credit that there could be any actor who hadn't seen "The Two Orphans," and the applicant must be a novice who had never crossed a stage. He said: "You don't look like an actor! If it's a fact you've ever played on the other side, bring me a line from somebody who knows you. The Kendals are over here—bring me a line from them!"

Merrick explained that he was no better known to the Kendals than he was to the President. He never acted in America—nor did he ever act again anywhere. But he has dabbled in dramatic authorship and remained true to his love for the theater.

In the hall room, he finished a novel, "Violet Moses," and then hawked it among the New York publishers. One firm made him an offer for it, $150 for the copyright. He found the spirit to laugh, and put the parcel away. It was a hot afternoon in July. As he was carrying the lump of manuscript along Broadway, he turned dizzy and reeled against a wall. It was the beginning of a violent attack of la grippe.

When he was able to leave his bed, Merrick tried to keep himself afloat by reporting for a news agency.

"Violet Moses" was published in England, after he had returned there, sick and beaten. Two of the most sober and influential of the London reviews compared it favorably in some of its aspects, with the work of Meredith and George Eliot, but the book had only a small sale, and the author's plight was desperate. HOW FRANCE CAN BE HELPED.

Needs of Devastated Areas are Impressed Upon Visiting Citizen of Los Angeles.

BY LUCIEN N. BRUNSWIG.
[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, Aug. 7.—"A dead Ambassador is ofttimes preferable to a live one." The Parisians remember this expression from Myron T. Herrick, the then Ambassador of the United States to France, in those frightful days early in September when, after the evacuation by the French government of all treasures, archives, etc., to Bordeaux, it seemed almost impossible to save Paris from the invading hordes. A bomb had just exploded from a Boche airplane, striking within twenty feet of the Ambassador and wounding a person close to him. His vision even then, though it might cost his life, was the great blessing to the world to have been the cause of forcing the issue and bringing the United States government into the war thus early. Let us realize what tremendous possibilities to have shortened the fifty-two months' tragedy had the full weight of the American nation been thrown into the balance at that crucial moment.

Popular Americans there are many. The memory of Herrick, Robert Bacon and others are treasured by the French nation and hosts of others. Unfortunately the conduct of thousands of American officers and soldiers who, after the armistice, obtained leaves to visit Paris caused much friction for a time. Many behaved like savages and in a manner unheard of in America. No wonder it has brought protests from the respectable French element and that these very men return to America with tales of prejudice, criticism and misrepresentation of the French people in general. The French also have some grievances and the recriminations must in the end give way to that amity which must and shall exist between France and America, two great nations so necessary to each other's ideals.

RED CROSS OFFICERS.

The American Red Cross, while having accomplished much, has in instances at least left much to be desired. It would appear somewhat like the armies of the republic of Honduras, 767 generals and three private soldiers. One meets Red Cross majors at every corner. As the activities are rapidly being closed, no wonder the question should arise, why such a tremendous number of staff officers and why their philanthropic work should not be transmitted to the American committees operating in the devastated area in all Northern France. The scattered Red Cross majors with nothing to do and very attractive surroundings are loath to co-operate or assist in such movements as suggested. It is the very essence of imperalism in charity.

The devastated area and zone where relief is most urgently needed at this time ranges from a line beginning at the North Sea to the Swiss frontier, precisely the line of battle during the fifty-two months of war. It is estimated that a greater part of this one-sixteenth of the area of France is badly wrecked and some 10,000,000 of inhabitants in need at least of the means to earn their existence and resume their normal life. Cambrai gives an impression of peace and quiet until you reach the heart of the city, the square around the cathedral and the two great ancient churches in the vicinity (all classified as monuments historiques by the Beaux Arts section of France.) The Campanile of the cathedral is badly wrecked, but still standing. It was condemned to death, ordered blown up, but the clergy and some of the notables urgently intervened and an effort is being made to save it. It is a gem and a marvel of lace work in granite. The interior from the roof to cellar is horribly wrecked and disfigured. We all remember the evacuation of Cambrai by the Germans and their placing time fuses, which exploded two days later, wrecking the center of the city, which looks worse than Herculaneum or Pompeii, while around the arteries of the city but little damage and that the result of the British bombardment of 1917 and 1918. The factories there exist only as shells of their former selves, else the interior has been wrecked of machinery and the appliances sent to Germany.

I was received by the Senator, the Maire, and City Council, who presented appeals for numberless industries, one of which, that of lace lingerie for which an immediate and urgent call is a donation of 100 sewing machines.

Beer is the beverage of Northern France. The breweries are all wrecked. Chicory factories in great number flourished in this section before the war. They are all shattered. Chicory is the great stable substitute for coffee, the latter not being within reach of the poor or middle classes.

Several large sugar factories have also been completely wrecked or put out of commission, so that now, nine months after the armistice, these industrials and workers are waiting for some one to lend a helping hand. Thus far not even preliminaries for reconstruction have been commenced. The French government will accord them war indemnities for the damage, but this will be a slow process; with two hundred and twenty billions of francs debt and the enormous responsibilities facing it, the French government is sorely pressed. This is the golden opportunity for American investors to do a philanthropic deed and a sound placement of capital by lending these industrials at moderate interest upon gilt edge security, which they are fully able to give—mortgages on valuable properties and the assignment of their claims against the French government for the indemnities. With the thrift, economy and energy proverbial to the French, within five years the looms and factories will be turning out greater quantities than ever. Agriculture has resumed its full force now, there can be no doubt the full amount of the indebtedness, with interest to repay the American lender, will be forthcoming. French honesty is proverbial, both for the government and the people, and their ability to pay is self evident from the richness of the soil and capability of the inhabitants.

GOOD CROPS IN NORTH.

In the department of the north, where Cambrai is situated, the fields are covered with good crops this year, and unlike other regions agriculture has not been impeded by the fear of accidents by unexploded shell, grenades or explosives, there having been practically no battle fields thereabouts. Cambrai is situated at the junction of the canal De San Quentin and the River Escaut. From there it is navigated by river boats, simplifying the process of transport. I have found there a large class of small rentiers, people who lived well on an income of 3000 francs per annum before the war ($600.) Now with the cost of living three times as great, you can see their dilemma and as this class consists of old people, unable to work, it is a most pathetic condition, since their income remains stationary.

Thousands of Boche prisoners in camps are found scattered all the way in the devastated aera and it is most unsatisfactory to see their laziness and shirking tendencies; above all I criticise the gentleness and good nature of their French guards, who do not apply the German methods of striking with bayonets or brutalizing, as was the case with French and Allied prisoners in German prison camps.

One is struck by the thousands of women still filling men's places in the railway services, tramways, transportation, public utilities. Many of them have acquired masculine habits, hardened and harsh countenances, rude manners, and it is a rare exception to obtain a civil answer to a necessary question. The traditional politeness of France here is in default, but what would we in America have done had we had to submit to the trials undergone by this great and unfortunate nation during such an abnormal length of time. America is looked upon as the one ray of hope and sunshine. Numerous committees have adopted individual communities, villages and centers. The marrainage American is a movement rapidly spreading, whereby an American city or town identifies itself with a special wrecked village, precisely along the lines that the fatherless children of France have been adopted in America by individual school children, families or aggregations, thus fastening a link of amity which must and shall exist between the great sister republics now and forever.

"AMERICA TO THE RECUE."

Among other deputations of mayors and functionaries from devastated zones, the City Council of Cambria sent a representative delegation. This was upon invitation of the American Chamber of Commerce in Paris. A committee of leading American bankers will join an aggregation of French political economists in an effort to overcome the gigantic obstacles in reconstruction at this time. Americans helped France to victory. Now they will assist to solve the problem of living in the reconstruction period. The Franco-American "Consortium," predicated upon sound financial basis, should prove a solution of the most momentous problem concerning the future of France, for the war will have been lost if our sister republic is not at once placed in position to resume business at the old stand.

WOMEN.

The first women's agricultural camp, organized in 1917, became the Bedford Unit of the Women's Land Army, with Dr. Ida N. Ogilvie, professor of geology at Barnard College, as dean. Dr. Ogilvie is still in charge of the camp. Under her are expert agriculturists, dieaitians and chauffeurs, in addition to the farm workers. There are sixty camps in New York State, with from twenty-five to fifty girls in each camp. Farmers pay $2.40 a day to the camp for each worker. The girls get fifty cents a day and keep.

British women have scored a new triumph by obtaining admission to the Institute of Naval Architects as members. The vote taken by the institute on the question was 491 to 220.

When the result was announced Sir William Smith moved that women be admitted as members on equal terms with men. Sir Alfred Yarrow, in seconding the motion, mentioned the case of women joiners who were employed a short time ago in building a destroyer. He said they made a "magnificent job of it," and the boat was accepted by the admiralty without a demur. He mentioned another boat which recently attained a speed of 38.6 knots.

"That," said Sir Alfred, "is the best speed yet obtained. The lines of that ship were determined partly by a young lady named Kearly."

The motion was carried.

THE PIRATE CITY.

> NO PROFITEERING.
> The San Pedro Chamber of Commerce has taken a hand in fixing the price of meals at the harbor during the stay of the fleet. Reports were received that an effort was being made to organize the restaurant keepers and boost prices. The directors of the Chamber of Commerce promptly called a meeting of all restaurant owners for Friday night, and served notice upon the leaders of the movement that unless they all got together and agreed upon reasonable prices, plans would be made to provide food through other channels so that the visitors would not be dependent upon the restaurants.

Where feathery Palms are waving and sea fowl scream in glee,
There stands a pirate city a sunning
by the sea.
To many a curious wayfarer along
this tropic coast,
The wily guides tell gory tales with many a prideful boast
Of kingly ransoms wrested from shrinking victims pale;
Of the ghosts of murdered maidens that shriek above the gale.

And out where Dead Man's Island, a mighty dragon lay
All gorged with gold and mouldering bones athwart the shining bay;
Where shone no light except the stars on a slinking barkentine.
From shipyards glow a thousand light across the channel green;
Where but a tiny clipper brig lay once beside the quay
A mighty nation's Battle fleet now guards this tropic sea;
Where but a lonely horseman bold
had dared this pirate bay,
A hundred trains and trolley cars are passing by today.
There are theaters and schools and shops, hotels and libraries,
And much of all that goes to make today's metropolis;
The people ride in auto cars, at ward elections fight,
Are yelling baseball fans by day and movie fans by night;
But if your gold you'd barter for clothing food or tea,
'Tis still a pirate city a sunning by the sea.

DEPARTED MINSTRELS.

Heaven had recalled the genius that she made;
Earth sealed her secret pact with war anew;
That night brave Seeger kept his
"rendezvous
With Death at some disputed

Once more a debt to vandalism paid.
And loyal Brooke! Aegean waters
woo
Gold Syros isle, "some foreign field" where you
"A dust wrom England bore" rest unafraid.
"Forever England; Richer dust concealed."
And gentle Kilmer! Yours it is to be
A master "poem lovely as a tree."
There by the Ourcq to "look at God all day;"
And we have kept the faith with loved McRae, Asleep where "poppies grow, in

MAIDS OF BELGIUM.

O martyred maids of Belguim!
No more are iron conquerers
come,
Your virgin temples to profane,
As matchless Rheims and fair
Louvain.
Now stands avenged your martyrdom;
To their mad lust's deliruim
Their craven hordes at last succumb,
And shining knights their hosts have slain
For martyred maids
The guns of Hindenburg are dumb;
Your cries from palace trenches
come
Are heard no more. On Flanders' plain
Sweet winds and birds and summer rain,
Together chant your requiem,
Brave martyred maids.

CITATIONS.

How proud we were that day you marched away,
That on your sleeve you wore the cross of red;
Your hand should guide the car in rescue sped,
To quickly bear the wounded from the fray!
So proud the day the General's cable came,
That on your breast he'd pinned the Croix de Guerre;
Brave breast! But yesterday a schoolboy's prize was there.
And now you triumph too in war's rough game.

And we are proud for this your latest prize,
Your cross of white dear Lad, for courage true;
Though bowed with grief, we yet are proud that you
Were honored thus in war's great sacrifice.

DIVINE WORSHIP.

Down where the shoreline's curving sweep
Incrusted foam outlines the deep;
As the sun glows over the ocean's rim
And the gleam of the mountain's bosom dim
Thru the rosy veil of the dawn is seen,
With the purple canyon's depths between;
Enclasped in a girdle of golden bay,
All her floating garments of misty spray;
I pause for the morning service where
The curling billows are knelt in prayer.

No plaything of fate, no wind tossed toy,
I am part and parcel of this great joy;
Of the wings of gulls o'er the waters swept,
Of the passion from ocean's wind caves leapt,
Of the glacial morain's boulder
ledge,
Of the morning's gold meshed garment's edge,
Of the sea's salt breath and the
noonday's glare,
Of the monsoon's song and the evening's prayer,
Of the voice in the thundering breakers heard,
Of the mighty calm of the Sabbath

IN STORES AND HOMES.

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

By Olive Gray.

Up-to-Datest:

Duvetyne for hats, especially the close-fitting turbans which look so demure, even before they don the veils of a matching shade, banded with duvetyne underneath the chin.

Duvetyne to trim frocks of satin! Used in broad bands as the sole adornment of dresses with tight-fitting waists, moderately long tunics and narrow skirts; this material, which is a furore, gives the last touch of modishness.

Veils having a filet mesh and oblongs or square insets of finer mesh in the effect of hand-drawn work. Taupe, henna, purple and, of course, black, are among the most popular colors.

Stitching in squares in heavy silk of a contrasting color is one of the latest ways of enhancing garments, both outer wear and lingeries. A dainty chemisole in cameo pink, a recent Paris import, was stitched in black. A suedene suit in leather brown was stitched in a darker shade.

Now is the Time to Buy:

The new fall suit, while the September "hold-over" in sale prices still remains.

The contemplated fur, during the five-day sale, which has been continued owing to the railroad strike which precluded the visit of out-of-town buyers of these needed luxuries in dress.

Shoes while summer sale prices are in effect.

Button String.

Aunt Jane smiled reminiscently, as she looked at the newest feminine fad—a button string—yes truly! Oh, not just to keep and finger fondly, because this button or that was presented by a friend, but a string comprising dozens of white pearl buttons, adhering by their shanks to a long black velvet ribbon, and utilized as a girdle with a one-piece frock. It is the very latest! I'm not certain that there is more than one in town.

Jellied Girls.

Jellied girls really should learn to walk most carefully, lest they look as though about to spill over! Now, don't look shocked, nor pretend that you do not understand. You see them, every day. Soft fatty ones should practice pedestrianism, carrying a full basin on top of the head, with a prize offer for not spilling a drop as they progress.

As Sensational as Painted.

"Catch him!" "Heavens! He'll break his neck!" "What's holding him?" "Say you? Can't you help that man!" Such were the exclamations sent forth or expressed in the faces of a crowd gathered on the corner of Seventh street at Hill, on Friday, last, as all eyes were fastened upon the high outer wall of a building whereon painters were completing a big sign. The sign proclaimed that a company occupying that building, on Seventh street, would remove to its new home further up the street, on or about September 1. Just as the last letter of this announcement had been painted in large type, it appeared that the painter had lost his footing on the scaffold, and hung suspended, his pot of paint spilling over the platform, against the wall and upon his own feet and clothes. Upon a wall, not far distant, stood another painter and it was to him that the crowd appealed to save his coworker. The indifference of the man on the wall was becoming most exasperating, and the precarious hold of the falling painter more and more alarming, when it began to dawn upon the spectators that there was something uncanny, if not positively unreal, about the whole situation. As a matter of fact, crowd after crowd discovered this alarming situation, gasped, looked long and went its chastened way. As late as Saturday evening, when the sun went down and the electrics sprang into glow, little knots of pedestrians were lavishing passing sympathy upon the precariously situated painter, and on Monday morning his suspense was as great as on Friday afternoon, although that of the onlookers was gradually waning. The man idling on the adjacent wall had, however, disappeared, unable, perhaps, to longer endure the adjurations of the crowds.

There are, probably, few downtown people unaware that the certain sports goods company will remove, on or about September 1, to it's new home further up Seventh street.

Undertones in Dress.

Such adorables! As the lady from Paris unpacked them, we all stood spellbound with admiration. The underthings, especially, elicited our expletives, our utmost superlatives. Chemises, teddy-lings, other daintinesses, so demure and feminine looking that I hated to have the man-milliner look them in the face. Cameo pink crepe de chine, bound and banded in black Georgette, with embroidery in liberty blue and green! I hope your thought takes in those colors! And yet the utmost harmony was there in the justenoughness of each tint. Any save the French would have overdone the coloring. Then, as always, the touch of black just where most effective, most fetching together—that was what did the trick. Cameo crepe de chine with coral Georgette bandings and bindings, and the most elusive little girdles of the same, tipped with tiny tassels of liberty blue and green. There were pantasoles to match some of these fairyish garments. If you do not know pantasoles—well they are my new christening for those straight-line, Lanvin creations which are too poetical to be "drawers," too open-kneed to be bloomers, and too close-mouthed to call themselves teddy-bears. Do you know, I believe the principal reason for French success in dress, is that they always wear such wonderful underthings! There's a sense of power, of poise, of having arrived, when one is conscious of good underwear, and with the absolute masterpieces which the French attain in this less-considered realm, the wearers are certain to carry all before them. Models don these lovely Lanvin creations and parade for buyers, before putting on the top clothes and—don't you see—reason is in abeyance, to begin with.

A Butterfly of a Shop.

Like a gorgeous butterfly with wings of black and gold, is that new millinery shop out Seventh street—like a butterfly perched atop a flower! The awnings are striped in black and gold, the silken window shades are gold in tint, velvet carpets are of black with old gold borders, the walls are tawny to offset pictures which are framed in antique gold, as are the mirrors. French evening rooms, stock rooms, are in black and gold; and even the band-boxes are black with a shimmer of gold around their edges. The man-milliner who owns and designed the lovely little place, has an especial genius for individualization in millinery; and, moreover, he is frank. He will not allow a hat to go away on an unbecoming head. This fact, if there were no other, would preface for his new shop—success. But there are other reasons: Good taste, the latest patterns, one-of-a-kind, with no actual copies, but modifications to suit the patron a pleasing personality.

Charming parasols carried by smart women are of white lace, veiled with black chiffon or net.

A lovely teagown is made with a cascade of lace beginning at shoulder; falling over the arms in place of sleeves and continued as a trimming feature down the side seams of the skirt.

Bright turquoise blue hats are worn with white and also colored frocks with good effect.

A silk skirt of some sort pulled up over a petticoat of lace ruffles or tucked organdie is featured in so many of the new frocks that it is coming to be one of the strong fashion characteristics—and a charming one—of the season.

In the ruffled skirts of the new frocks—and there are many of them—the ruffles frequently are so placed that they follow a line that curves upward always at the front of the skirt.

Sometimes lace is arranged apron-fashion in the new frocks—that is, a panel of lace is hung in the front of a frock from the waist like an apron, with a sash, perhaps, tied over it, ending in a bow at the back.

Embroidery in natural colors in cotton threads is seen on many of the new frocks. One talked about in Paris was embroidered in wistaria flowers and leaves in lovely shades of mauve and soft gray green.

The head of one house where war conditions had left the place helpless drove his daughter to a party.

The head of the house where the party was held was perforce acting as his own carriage man and door-opener.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

After devoting the greater part of her life to relieving the suffering of poor children and providing for their education, Mrs. Rosa E. Spang of New York willed the residue of her estate, which may reach $2,000,000, to care for children who, through poverty or the deaths of their parents, may be sent to orphanages. This fund is to be known as the Rosa Spang Foundation and is provided for in her will, filed recently. The will was made June 18, two days prior to her death. Following the death of her husband, Charles H. Spang, a steel operator, in Pittsburgh, several years ago, Mrs. Spang came to New York. She became deeply interested in children's charities. In describing the purpose of the foundation, Mrs. Spang wrote in her will:

"The purpose of the foundation is to relieve poverty and distress, especially the caring for young children and babes, who, due to abandonment or through the poverty or death of their parents, may be sent to orphanages. The foundation will also relieve suffering by gifts to charitable institutions to be selected by the trustees."

J. R. Hughes, a wealthy real estate operator of Greensboro, N. C., has offered to lend the City Commissioners of that city $50,000 without interest to purchase coal at the mines to sell to the people of the city at cost. He was moved by recent advances in the price of coal from 50 cents to $1.50. He says the dealers fail to make it clear they are paying more now than heretofore.

With the opening of two additional free distribution ice stations in the Flatbush section, the Mayor's Ice Committee is now giving away ice to Brooklyn's deserving poor at thirty-six points, says the Brooklyn Eagle. These are the last depots to be opened, as the committee of investigators now feel that every section of the borough has been covered.

Commissioner Harman has been in charge of the Mayor's Ice Committee in Brooklyn for one month and in that time many pounds of ice have been distributed to the deserving poor through tickets distributed by religious organizations, civic bodies, hospitals, pastors, and department of health nurses.

The Salvation Army has not ceased its work among the soldiers just because the war is ended, according to Maj. John Bonner of the Employment Bureau for Soldiers and Sailors and Marines at 120 West Adams street, Chicago.

"Yesterday the Salvation Army spent $1811 in fitting out soldiers with citizens' clothes," he said. "Their daily expense in this regard is close to $1000. It is a great work, and I take off my hat to them. Hereafter when a tambourine is placed in front of me I split my money with the Salvation Army.

"Incidentally, the public might stop for a moment to think of and remember that our boys returning from overseas are not all taken care of."

During the year ended June 30, the Knights of Columbus distributed free among American soldiers, sailors and marines comforts to the amount of $7,000,000 more than the gifts of all the other welfare organizations combined. This is shown in a report made public, covering the expenditure of funds derived from the United War Fund drive of last November and its independent collections prior to that. Among the items of free distribution at home, abroad and at sea were 618,000,000 cigarettes, 900,000,000 beef cubes, 3,750,000 pipes, 546,851 pounds of pipe tobacco and 3,000,000 pounds of candy.

A UNIQUE TREE.

A species of the acacia tree grows in Idaho which attains a height of about eight feet. When full grown it closes its leaves together in coils each day at sunset. When the three has thus settled itself for its night's sleep it will flutter violently if touched, and if the branches are shaken the tree will emit a nauseating odor. The natives call it the "angry tree," and it is believed to have been discovered by some men who were making a camp for the night, and placed one end of a canvas covering over one of its sensitive branches to use as a support. Immediately the tree began to jerk its branches sharply. The motion continued with increased "nervousness," until there came an obnoxious odor that drove the tired men to a more hospitable camping place.—Indianapolis News.

SAND DUNES ON LAKE MICHIGAN.

"Foundation" for Preserving Them Established.

The Great Warren Dune the Wonder of Them All.

Visitors Walk on Sand Amid Tops of Buried Trees.

[From the Christian Science Monitor.]

THREE OAKS (Mich.)—While sand merchants each year ship away more and more of the famous Indiana sand dunes, to make building material for the great manufacturing region at the foot of Lake Michigan, farther up on the shores of the lake, in the State of Michigan, a patch of the drifting dunes has been preserved by the "Warren Foundation." The Indiana dunes are well moored. Their chief danger is that they will be dug up and carted away before they are set aside for a national park. The Michigan dunes need more than legislation to hold them down.

A "foundation" hereabouts means a corporate creation of recent Michigan statute by conformity with which a person of possessions gives up possession for public use without letting go entirely. That is, properties can be dedicated to public use and care, while title does not pass from the owner. In that sense the Chamberlain Museum, Warren Woods and the Drifting Dunes are now in possession of the public—for preservation, study and admiration.

Admiration in the case, at least, of the dunes is sure to become a sort of wondering awe, once the summer traveler turns from the pike to the shore and abandoning automobile perforce, mounts with sinking, sliding feet, upward into their mysterious recesses among half-buried forests of oak and elm and tamarack. He comes upon a landscape of phantas magoric wonders. Here mountains move.

MOUNTAINS IN MINIATURE.

These dunes are mountains in miniature. They have their peaks and crests, their rounded domes and precipices, the vast natural amphitheaters of any mountain range, and they stretch for imperial distances along the curving shore. The wonder of them all, in the long stretch from below the Indiana state line to the mouth of the St. Joseph River in Michigan, is the great Warren Dune.

The dunes move in from the lake over the great level plain, where fruit farmers have their little tracts and their bungalows, but sooner or later the vegetation struggling against their onset conquers and holds them fast. To the left of a ravine which leads to the Warren Dune there is a dune which has been so captured and held fast.

Perhaps fifty feet up from the floor this ravine becomes an amphitheater among the hill crests. Here stands tamaracks, elms and butternuts, many of them 100 feet tall but topped by 250 feet by the brow of the Warren Dune. Here they stand motionless and sheltered but doomed. Their fate is clearly seen in the spectacle of other great trees cropping out of the tawny sands, some beginning to be buried, some half buried and others with the crest completely hidden beneath the shifting sand.

TRAVEL ONE FOOT A MONTH.

Stakes driven by George R. Fox, director of the museum, show that the dunes move about one foot a month until the trees and bushes on the sheltered landward side manage to aggregate a strength in their roots and stalks that holds fast the moving monsters of sand. Going up and down the Warren Dune the visitor has the curious experience of passing through tree tops. The tips of elms that once stood at full length on a level plain, stick up in the sand waste like dried bushes.

Where did all this sand come from, and what makes it move? One naturally wants to know.

As for the first part of the question, this sand is quartz, mainly. A few grains peered at through a microscope reveal particles as clear as glass.

This pulverized quartz was ground off the rock surface of the earth in geological ages by the ice. Mammoth rivers carried it as silt down to the hollow, which by recession of the waters became Lake Michigan. The movement of the waters piled it in great hillocks.

What, then, makes these hills move today? The wind, of course. In the lakeward face of the dune is a mammoth hollow, lunar shaped, [illegible] inland. It is an excavation in the face of the dune dug by the winds. The sands roll up the face of the hill and pile over the top, slowly, silently and insidiously. The crest is perpetually sliding over and downward. The cumulative effect is seen at the bottom of the landward slope, where the measuring stakes have been driven.

The Warren Dune reaches inland from the lake edge for three-quarters of a mile, and it is about half a mile wide at the lake base, and it is all moving inland.

"But the vegetation will get it before long," said the museum director. "There is a limit to the journeyings of this one."

THE TOWN OF THREE OAKS.

Edward Kirk Warren's father was a preacher in the struggling little farm community of Three Oaks, coming from Vermont. Warren, the son, was 14 when he set foot in Michigan. His fortune was made when he began manufacturing "featherbone," a substitute for the whalebone strips our grandmothers used as stiffening for their stays. He began taking chicken and turkey feathers and shredding the quills, binding the strips together and so making narrow thin lengths of a [illegible], resilient substance which supplanted whalebone and steel to a considerable extent all over the world.

School Days

SCHOOL Days as they used to be, oh, 40 years ago, say—when the Little Red School House stood away down the lane on the Knoll, surrounded by the old rail fence, the stone hedge and miles of rolling knolls and trees—and here and there in the distance, a farm house from which the song of children could be heard as the days of school approached—

—Maybe you don't remember—but Grandma and Grandpa do; they were there and they will tell you that School Days were looked upon as quite an Event—quite a privilege in fact, for as Autumn approached there was much to do about the farm and everybody's helping hand was necessary to get things in shape so the children could start to school on the very first day, for it was not always certain that they could attend throughout the year, 'cause Spring planting and Spring chores required all hands and all feet within the domicile—

—In those days it was a long, long way to town (as it was termed,) but town might be composed solely of that old Country Store on the Cross Roads, whose chief "stock in trade" comprised plows and shovels and rope and divers implements—but tucked away in the remoteness of the one shelf were a few bolts of Calico and Denim; a stack of slates and slate pencils, and that immortal Triune of booklore devoted to "readin' and 'ritin' and 'rithmetic"—

—But as School Days drew near the old Country Store did the best it could to outfit Grandma and Grandpa—while busy needles and snipping shears unleashed their talent to produce ruffles and tucks for that little calico frock—a sun bonnet, too—for sister—While jeans and jackets and a hat were somehow conjured from the ragbag for brother—but shoes (stocky little shoes) were but a bit more prevalent than little bare feet that were always stubbing a gash into that very biggest toe—

—And on the first day of School—with lunch buckets and slates and "books of learnin'" tucked under arm, there was a laughing hegira of childhood drawn hither and yon from miles away—Some drawn in the old husking cart; others were carried aback old Dobbin, while many tramped merrily on down the lane of Happy Valley to the Little Red School House on the Knoll—

—Within its walls there reigned the old School Master, who ruled with rod of birch; whose classes began with the first grade and ended with the eighth, while bean blowers and "whispering mischief" were scholarly attributes—And 'tis rumored that often during "Study Hour" the old Master, with tilted chair and legs propped languorously against the wall, indulged his musical bent by "bowin' the fiddle," while from the corner of his eye he kept vigil on the antics of one Freckled Slim, whose studious intents were questionable—

—That was a long time ago, wasn't it? But to Grandma and Grandpa it was only Yesterday, and there must be a little leap of their hearts as they hark back to that first day of school in September—say, 40 years ago today.

BUT today the scene has changed a bit. Progress has marched down the line at a merry clip; fields have been transformed into cities and where 40 years ago the Little Red School House stood on the knoll, today we find in its place a beautiful edifice of architectural art with every convenience and incentive installed for childhood study—

—Instead of the old School Master with his rod of birch and every grade from 1 to 8 situated in one diminutive room, we find a corps of trained instructors to guide the youthful mind on the highway of learning—And instead of the lanes and pathways, the husking cart and old Dobbin we find the ribbon-ways of pavements, the Trolley to drop you at the front door of school; the automobile that purrs up the School Day Avenues—.

—And on the old Cross Roads where once imposed the Country Store with its limited resources, it is not a far reach of imagery to find in its stead a structure of many stories—a store of illimitable resources—

—For the old Cross Roads might now be Broadway at Seventh, and the Store might now be Bullock's of Los Angeles—

—And where in those days the bolt of Calico and the bolt of Denim constituted the impressive possibilities for school day apparel, today there is that area of large dimensions known as Bullock's Boys' and Girls' Store, devoted exclusively and exhaustively to apparel for boy and girl—

—A contrast, indeed, with days of Homespun and bolts of Calico only——The new highly tailored suits for boys—modish to a gentlemanly degree—the natty headwear and cravats and shirts, emphasize the contrast in delightful manner—

—And the girls may adorn themselves in beautiful Dresses and Suits and Coats—what a variety to choose from, and the most adorable styles that a girlish heart could beat for—

—Then the Millinery Store with its school day headwear—replete with winsome hats for winsome maids—Fur trimmed hats and Velour hats of character and beauty—Straw hats and Tams, and hats for dress wear—a whole section of them——And in contrast to the injured "big toe" and the "stocky little shoes" of yore, there is Bullock's Shoe Store for Children; the home of Educator, of Acrobat and of Anatomik footwear—footwear that protects and trains the feet as the School Master trained the mind in olden days—

—There is also the Stocking Store, the Glove Store and the Underwear Store exclusively for Boys and Girls, and many other avenues of Bullock's other Sections especially interesting to the younger folk—

—Perhaps we don't realize the great change that has come—but Grandma and Grandpa do—And as they recall the bolts of Calico and Denim, their eyes drift backward and their hearts beat young again as they come with the children to Bullock's Boys' and Girls' Store to prepare so joyfully and so advantageously for the approaching School Days of September.

LEARN THE ART OF SINGING—

VOICE CULTURE.

Voice culture is an asset that cannot be overestimated from a health standpoint alone. The deep breathing required makes red blood, quiets the nerves and gives correct poise to the body.

It requires only a little intelligent study, time and money to equip you to take your place as a singer.

By learning to use your breath correctly, you will be greatly gratified at the interest your audience will take in your singing. Your voice will be heard farther, the tones will be sweeter, and you will not fatigue, but will enjoy the singing as much as your friends.

It is our object to master all of the elements that are necessary for a singing artist to know, including diction, phrasing and interpretation and leadership. Only the best music is used. Not a song is learned that could not be used at a dignified concert.

I am giving a special rate in voice culture and singing for the summer. Voice tried free of charge, and will tell you frankly if it is worth your time and money to study.

I am especially interested in young people's voices and give a special rate to high school students or public school teachers.

We have monthly recitals for the benefit of the students, also a night singing class, to which students are admitted free. Daily lessons may be secured and reasonable tuition offered free where practice is inconvenient. Come and talk it over. You will not regret it, and it may mean much to you.

HAVE YOU EVER THOUGHT OF THE MANY possibilities and advantages you might have over your competitors if you could only speak Spanish. Just think of the many big concerns in America soliciting Spanish correspondents! Think of the United States positions in postoffices, courts and diplomatic missions, and think that fifty lessons and a very small amount of money will open wide the gates to Mexico, Centre and South America, Cuba, Porto Rico and Philippines, the new and coming countries. Don't you think you ought to consult with me on a matter that might change the course of your life as it has done for thousands of my pupils during the nineteen years I have taught Spanish in Southern California? FOR SALE—DOES THE HIGH COST OF LIVING bother you? If it does I can help you some by saving quite a bit on you clothing bills. You know and I know that clothing is too high and everything else we use, such as food, shoes, hats, etc., are much too high for the average wage earner. To live and let live seems to be out of date nowadays. To grab and let the other fellow go to the devil seems to be the rule with a good many today. But this system of grab is not the way of Cohen, and when I have to adopt the grab system I will quit business—but I don't intend to quit for a long time yet, and when business is run on a sane basis Cohen will be one of the business men of Los Angeles who will feel that he has treated his customers as he would want them to treat him in these unsettled times. I have good, slightly used suits from $5 to $15; a few higher priced; pants at a saving of $1 or better, shoes and hats very reasonable in price.

At my ladies' store I have a large stock of tailored suits, hundreds of long coats, skirts, shoes, sweaters, at money-making savings on each garment.

I have a very large stock of furs, the very latest styles—if you can tell they were used you will have to be an expert—at 1-3 to 1-4 of the price of new furs.

I remodel furs at my ladies' store into the very latest style at ½ what the high priced furriers charge. Give us a trial.

At my men's stores we have new suits that I bought at a bankrupt auction sale. I guarantee to save you from $10 to $15 on every suit.

Fat men—I have a large selection of tailor-made suits your size. If not satisfied with anything you buy here, money back is my way.

Ladies' store, 204 W. 8TH ST.

CHANDLER SIX

TOURINGS
CHUMMY ROADSTERS.

You do not dare to purchase a CHANDLER until you have investigated the REBUILT, REFINISHED, FULLY GUARANTEED ones that we are offering at a range of prices from $800 to $1550 on TERMS. You cannot respect yourself as a wise purchaser unless you at least learn about these values and what CHANDLER SERVICE and CHANDLER GUARANTEE will mean to you for the next year to come. Our business has been the marketing of CHANDLERS practically since they were first placed on the market. We know most of the Chandler owners and we know quite a bit about the manner in which they have taken care of their cars. We will not accept a used CHANDLER in exchange on a new one if it has been abused. We do not have to. We cannot secure all the new CHANDLERS that there is a demand for, so you may rest assured that we are particular about the used cars we accept in exchange. If you do not believe this, try us out with some car that is not up to standard and see how quickly we refuse it. We are not independent, but we are careful of our reputation, and we do not want to be forced to offer a poor used car fr sale. Terms.

AMERICANISM LEGION'S GOAL.

Service Men to Fight for National Purity.

Roosevelt Urges Participation in Public Affairs.

Fight Directed Against Evils in Naturalization.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—The American spirit that swept through battlefields of France flamed anew in Chicago today as Lieut.-Col. Theodore Roosevelt arrived, the guest of the American Legion.

Fighting men met a fighting man when the son of the Rough Rider President greeted fifty Legion officers at the Union station.

At the breakfast table in Col. Milton J. Foreman's home the veteran artillery man and the Legion leader planned future glories for the State's new National Guard establishment.

BEGIN ACTIVITIES.

And the climax was reached at State headquarters of the legion when orders were flashed to 119 posts in Cook and Lake counties directing them to begin immediately an active participation in every public movement—orders which bring every ex-soldier in Northern Illinois into the thick of National activities.

"Serve the notice now," directed "Teddy Jr" in addressing members of the State Legion Committee at the headquarters conference. "The Legion is doing to sow Americanism in every nook and cranny of this nation.

"Urge every Legion post in the district to begin a careful survey of all public questions and form the budget of fighting man policies which will be builded into our national foundation at the next convention."

FIGHTERS' PROGRAMME.

Here is the programme that will concentrate the thoughts of returned fighters in the weeks to come:

Demands for immediate legislation concerning a definite bonus system for discharged men.

Advocacy of a universal military training law, which will meet the needs of the nation and strike a proper medium between an unwieldly standing army and under protection.

Immediate inquiry into all naturalization activities and advocacy of strict deportation measures to rid the country of alien undesirables.

Active participation in the campaign against Bolshevism in America.

NATURALIZATION INQUIRY.

As a direct result of the Roosevelt conference the State Committee appointed a commission to inquire into all naturalization petitions in Chicago with special reference to that filed recently by Count James Minotto.

"In this inquiry the Legion does not intend to be arbitrary," announced a State official, "but will do its work with an open mind. Our policy will be generally opposed to admitting to American citizenship any man who has been interned as an enemy. We will ask that all aliens coming to America be required to complete naturalization within a given time or be deported."

The entire day was given over to war recollections and reunions.

EXPERT OPPOSED TO ALL-AMERICAN CANAL.

PRESIDENT OF AMERICAN ENGINEERS GIVES OUT INTERVIEW.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RIVERSIDE, Aug. 30.—Dr. F. H. Newell, president of American Association of Engineers, and former chief of reclamation work for the Department of the Interior, in an interview tonight stated that whatever plan of irrigation is finally developed for the Imperial Valley district from the Colorado River both sides of international boundary must be taken care of.

A uniform plan of work must be agreed upon for that district, he said, and differences of opinion merged into a comprehensive system that will recognize vested rights below the border as well as the territory proposed to be included under the so-called all-American canal plan.

Dr. Newell was entertained at dinner by the engineers of San Bernardino and Riverside counties and spoke upon technical subjects to nearly one hundred guests. His trip has no connection with any of the pending government projects.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Aug. 30.—Col. E. M. Harber, city counselor, told a delegation from Labor Temple today the ordinance passed recently to prevent circuses from showing here Labor Day would be enforced strictly against the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey circuses. Burr M. Mosman, assistant city counselor, said he would be at the City Hall all day Monday to issue warrants if the circus attempted to show on the date advertised.

The labor delegation first called today on Scott Godley, Chief of Police, who referred them to the city counselor. Col. Harber told the labor representatives to inform the police department it would be asked to enforce the section of the ordinance as it now stands forbidding circuses Labor Day.

The unions recently caused a section of an old ordinance to be revived and put into the ordinance, saying that a circus would interfere with the Labor Day programme.

VOTE BLOCKED ON LAND BILL.

Leasing Measure Goes Over Until After Recess.

Senate is Able to Adopt Number of Amendments.

Railroads Allowed Coal Leases for Each 200 Miles.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Maintaining his average of four hours speaking a day for the fourth consecutive day, Senator La Follette today blocked plans for those in charge of the public land leasing bill for a final vote before the Labor Day recess.

When the Senate recessed tonight until Tuesday, the Wisconsin Senator had spoken for sixteen hours on the bill, which he charged is a monopoly measure for the benefit of the Standard Oil Company. As prospects of disposing of the bill today went glimmering, Senator Thomas of Colorado began circulation of a petition asking that the cloture rule be invoked. After it was understood the required number of Senators had signed the petition, the plan was abandoned at the request of Senator Smoot, Republican, of Utah, who is in charge of the bill.

AMENDMENTS ADOPTED.

The Senate was able to adopt a number of amendments, including one by Senator La Follette which would prohibit employment of boys under 16 years or girls and women irrespective of age, below the surface of mines opened under the bill.

After the Wisconsin Senator had objected to the provisions which would have permitted railroad companies to obtain a separate lease on public coal lands for each 200 miles of track on the ground that it would permit eleven trunk line railroads crossing portions of the public domain in the west "to tie up in leases 1,000,000 acres of coal lands," the Senate modified the provision.

Railroads under the bill as amended would be permitted only one lease for each 200 miles of track within the State in which the property is located."

SAYS CHANGES IMPROVE IT.

The Wisconsin Senator said he had traced to the National Conservation Association some of the amendments to the bill approved by the committee. Not all amendments recommended by the organization were adopted, he said, but the changes made in the bill improved it.

Senator La Follette read a telegram from M. B. Budd of Denver, president of the Eclipse Oil Company, protesting against the bill and charging that it would turn vast areas of the Salt Creek (Wyoming) oil fields over to the Midwest Oil Company, a subsidiary, he said, of the Standard Oil Company.

Upon the motion of Senator Jones, New Mexico, the Senate adopted an amendment by which persons who are now working locations on oil land, but who have not yet discovered oil, would be permitted to continue to operate without being required to take out prospecting permits. The amendment resulted from protests from New Mexico that passage of the bill as proposed would result in great financial loss to prospectors.

CITIES MAY MINE.

Beginning consideration of the series of amendments proposed by Senator La Follette, the Senate without a record vote tentatively accepted one authorizing the awarding of permits to municipalities to operate coal lands. Cities having between 100,000 and 150,000 inhabitants would receive a permit for 1280 acres and those with larger populations would receive 2560 acres.

Senator La Follette introduced an amendment which he plans to call up when the Senate reconvenes next Tuesday, by which the government would reserve the right to fix wholesale and retail selling prices of products obtained from leased land under the bill.

AUTHORIZE RISE FOR ESPEE FERRY FARES.

SAME RATES RECENTLY GIVEN KEY ROUTE ARE GRANTED BY ADMINISTRATION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—The United States Railroad Administration today authorized the Southern Pacific Railway Company to raise its one-way fares from here across the bay by ferry to Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda and other points from eleven to fifteen cents and its commutation tickets from $3.30 to $4, effective Monday. The new rates will be the same as those to which the Key Route ferries recently were raised under authority of the commission.

The Oakland, Antioch and Eastern Railroad today was granted permission by the State Railroad Commission to increase passenger rates in several instances. A rise in the fare from here to Sacramento from $2.50 to $2.70 was allowed.

CARMACK'S ALLEGED SLAYER IS MURDERED.

ROBBERY BELIEVED TO BE MOTIVE FOR KILLING OF DEFENDANT IN CASE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NASHVILLE, Aug. 30.—Robin J. Cooper, a Nashville attorney, whose trial for the killing of former United States Senator Edward W. Carmack during the celebrated pistol duel between his father, Col. D. B. Cooper, and Carmack, in 1908, attracted country-wide attention, has been murdered here under mysterious circumstances.

Cooper's body was taken from Richland Creek today soon after his bloodstained automobile had been found on a bridge near his home in a fashionable section. The skull had been crushed, but there were evidences a violent struggle had taken place before the fatal blow was struck.

An inquest developed no clews to the murderer or murderers, but the police are proceeding on the theory that Cooper was lured from his home for the purpose of robbery.

This theory is based largely upon evidence that Cooper drew $10,000 from a bank a short time before he disappeared last Thursday night.

Mrs. Cooper, who is a daughter of Milton H. Smith, president of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, has been visiting relatives in Louisville, Ky., and her absence accounts for the fact that the disappearance of her husband did not become known until today.

Gov. Roberts has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the murderers. This was supplemented by offer of a similar amount by the family. The police admit they have nothing on which to work in solving the mystery.

GREAT CITIZEN ARMY NATIONAL GUARD PLAN

THIRTY DIVISIONS WOULD FUNCTION AS CORPS UNDER WAR SECRETARY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Organization through a new system of universal military training of a great citizen army, to be known as the National Guard Corps, was proposed today by the National Guard Association in a statement issued through the National Security League. Thirty divisions of the National Guard Corps, functioning as a separate corps of the United States Army under direction of the Secretary of War, is proposed.

Instead of subjecting all 19-year-old youths to a three-months' course of intensive military training, as proposed by the War Department, the guard association would have military training as a part of the national public school system, with youths entering this course when fourteen years of age. Later, they would be given two-months' training in the field and then would be graduated into the guard, where they would serve actively for two years and nine months before being placed in the reserve for three years.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

DAWSON (Y. T.) Aug. 30.—The Yukon Territory goes "dry" tonight when the law enacted last spring by the Yukon Territory Legislature abolishing the saloon goes into effect. A government dispensary will be opened at Dawson and another at White Horse under control of Commissioner McKenzie, at which goods will be sold only by the bottle and during limited hours. Wholesale houses in Dawson will turn over their stocks to the government stores.

Between now and February a plebiscite will be held throughout the Territory to determine the future of the liquor business.

Yukon was almost the only district in Canada where the sale of all kinds of liquor was permitted during the whole course of the war, and with the closing today of its saloons, all Canada, except Quebec, is under prohibition.

MANY HURT IN CAR CRASH.

A red Hollywood car in charge of Motorman C. J. Owens crashed into a Van Nuys car standing at the corner of Benton way and Sunset boulevard, last night, injuring seven people. According to witnesses, Motorman Owens seemed to lose his head when he saw that a collision was inevitable and made no effort to apply the brakes. All of the injured were in the Hollywood car and were brought to the Receiving Hospital for medical treatment.

The most prominent was Clara Greenwood, of 1631 North Harvard boulevard, well-known member of Lasky's studio, who, with her mother, was sitting in the open section of the Hollywood car. Miss Greenwood sustained a deep laceration across her left eye and forehead along with painful bruises. Her mother, Mrs. Henrietta Rosenthal, received a fracture of the left ankle and sprains of the back. Her brother, Lester Rosenthal, was badly cut on the right leg.

Harold V. Barry, of 1006 Mohawk street, suffered a possible fracture of the right hip and internal injuries, which, according to Dr. Zorb, may prove serious.

Mrs. Fannie Finnegan, of 1415 Bates avenue, received numerous cuts and bruises about the face and chest.

Mrs. Fannie Tomlinson, 75 years old, of 1516 Vista street was cut about the head. Owing to her advanced age the shock may prove fatal.

Mrs. Lutie Lawson of 1516 Vista street suffered bruises and lacerations on head, arms and shoulders.

CANNIBALS NOW SINGING HYMNS.

Missionary Too Lean to be Roasted Converts 'Em.

Adventists Hear How Gospel Won in New Hebridies.

Annual Local Camp Meeting Sessions End Today.

That 900 cannibals of the New Hebrides Islands in the South Pacific have in the last four years been so transformed that instead of killing and eating human flesh they recently gathered to worship at a Christian camp meeting, and that this is the result of work by Seventh-day Adventist missionaries, the first white people who dared enter the savage islands, is the statement of Evangelist Fred C. Gilbert of South Lancaster, Mass., representing the General Conference. At the Adventists' annual camp meeting at Western and Melrose avenues, Hollywood, yesterday afternoon he told of the transformation of heathen life and the rapid strides madeby the denomination.

"When our beloved Elder C. H. Parker went to Atchin only a few years ago, he did not dare take his wife with him, for the inhabitants were known to be the most savage cannibals," said Mr. Gilbert. "He sat down on a rock by the shore and started to tell those benighted minds about the love of God, but they were more intent upon eating him than listening to his words, and felt of his limbs to see if he would make good roasting. He was glad for once that he was like one of Pharaoh's lean kine. God preserved his life, and now word comes that in four short years, 900 of those same savages responded to a call for a camp meeting, for God has changed their hearts.

FIJI PHILOSOPHY.

"In Fiji we have today more than 1000 who observe the Seventh-day Sabbath and who are following Christ. Whole villages of people once cannibals are turning to the light of the gospel. One of the Fijian mountaineers, accosted by an unfriendly European, said: 'I am a poor, ignorant Fijian, and know little in comparison with my white brothers, who have invented great machines and steamers, and brought us lamps and kerosene, but I can read the simple Bible story and count seven, and I obey God.' Today in Fiji's mountains revival services are in progress and descendants of cannibals are being called together to a spiritual banquet.

"In the Lake Titicaca region of Peru, South America, 2000 Indians, who only a few years ago were wild drunken savages, are today followers of the Lord Jesus and obedient to the precepts of His words, keeping the fourth commandment of the decalogue with all the other nine. There, high in the Andes Mountains, in that region known as the 'roof of the world,' God is working many miracles of His grace.

"It is but a few years since God called three people, Ellen Harmon, James White and Joseph Bates, to warn every nation and kindred and tongue in the whole wide world in a single generation of Jesus' soon coming, and the special truths that Seventh-day Adventists hold. All three were poor, for Bates, who had been a sea captain and had a small fortune of $50,000, soon spent it in publishing literature upon the Sabbath question. Miss Harmon, not only did not have any money, but did not have any health. James White was so poor that even the patches on his coat had to be patched. They never did accumulate a fortune, for as fast as they earned money, they turned it to the extension of the work of God.

IN MANY LANDS.

"Today, Seventh-day Adventists are to be found in Japan, China, Burma, India, Ceylon, the South Sea Islands, Australia, Africa from the Cape to Cairo, Europe, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, England, France, Holland, Belgium, Italy, Switzerland, South America—in nearly every land and clime. The generation is not yet gone and the work will be done on time."

A revival meeting was held in the large pavilion at the camp ground yesterday morning, the speaker being Elder J. W. Christian of Glendale, president of the Pacific Union Conference. The attendance was very large, all seats in the tent being occupied, and many, unable to find room under the canvas, secured chairs in the family tents on the grounds and sat in the shade within hearing of the speaker. The orchestra of twenty-two pieces and chorus choir, under the direction of Myron Lysinger, furnished excellent music. Special numbers by trained soloists and by duets and quartettes are heard at every meeting.

Today is the last day of this annual meeting. Elder Gilbert will speak at 11 o'clock this morning, Elder Christian at 3 p.m., and Elder M. M. Hare of Los Angeles, president of the Southern California Conference, at 8 p.m., the farewell service. The subject of the evening discourse will be "The Conflict Ended; the New Earth." Song service will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

HOARDING SHOES.

Local Dealer Compares Eastern and Local Conditions.

A "run on a shoe store" is a very common occurrence in the East, according to A. E. Young, owner of five shoe stores in Los Angeles, and woh has just returned from New York and Boston. He forecasts a marked change in conditions here, too, and declares that with the growing scarcity of materials and higher cost of manufacture shoes are surely going to cost more. People living in the shoe and leather centers are advising their friends at a distance to buy several pairs of shoes before prices go to an almost prohibitive figure.

As illustrating the trend of footwear costs, he cited the opening in Chicago next month of a store that will sell no shoes at less than $25 a pair. He says that we are exporting more than half of our total leather production, or as high as $21,000,000 a month, and that raw hides (calfskins) cost almost three times as much now as they did in December.

URGES INSISTENCE ON MEN LEAVING SIBERIA.

CONGRESSMAN PORTER SAYS BAKER TO HAVE THREE WEEKS FOR ACTION.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Insistence of members of Congress that drafted men be brought home from Siberia at once will have its effect, Representative Porter of Pennsylvania, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House, believes.

While a considerable number of those now in Siberia are due to return as soon as replacements now en route reach that country, Secretary Baker gives the impression before the committee that it might be midwinter before the last of them are brought out.

Assistant Secretary of State Breckenridge Long appeared before the Foreign Affairs Committee again today in executive session to discuss various matters relating to the Siberian and Russian situation. It is understood that questions also were asked him regarding Mexico.

Representative Porter stated any further action regarding these troops in Siberia, about half of whom are from Illinois, probably will be unnecessary.

"The committee has decided to do nothing further for two or three weeks," said Mr. Porter. "By that time we will be able to see whether my suggestion to Secretary Baker has been acted upon.

"Secretary Baker said that out of 100,000 replacement troops that have been enlisted for service in the Regular Army 50,000 have not expressed a preference for service in any particular place. I suggested that he send enough men from that 50,000 to Siberia to relieve all the drafted men. He said he would give it serious consideration. I believe he will find it possible to bring these men home quickly."

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Col. Lester Snover is the name of a tall husky southpaw who has left the Marine Corps to enlist under the banner of Jawn McGraw out at the Polo Grounds. The left flank of Snover's highly martial name, is not a title—it's his real name.

In military rank Snover never climbed higher than private, but among marine fans he was rated at the top of the list of service pitchers. For a year before his discharge from the corps, he kept his left wing in condition by heaving coal into the furnace of Brooklyn Marine Barracks where he was post fireman. Between tricks with the scoop he pitched for the Brooklyn Marine team.

Few Strike Hurts.

No serious damage was done to the building operations now under way in Los Angeles by the rail tie-up, though for a time last week certain investors with large building plans in view were disposed to see a gloomy picture. Los Angeles is particularly fortunate in the matter of having most of the basic building materials near at hand, and unless a strike came that tied up both rail and water transportation this city need not be heavily handicapped unless the tie-up happened to be protracted.

At any rate, a note of confidence prevails in the building field, and the complaint is not against the lack of building materials, rather because both material and labor costs continue to rule high. A stabilizing influence will more quickly enter the building field when labor becomes more plentiful at a price which will enable an investor to complete his job with a reasonable expectation of getting back something on his investment. The same is true of material costs. No building investor can be expected to launch a new enterprise while there exists a belief that material prices will go up between the time he engages his architect and the day he invites bids.

Westgate's Opportunity.

One of the most picturesque residence sections of Southern California suburban to Los Angeles is due for early development as the result of the approval on Thursday last by the voters of the Westgate annexation district of the bond issue of $700,000 to provide that region with aqueduct water.

The area affected comprises approximately 11,000 acres of land admirably suited for country estates and villa sites, including the attractive Westgate region, the famous Wolfskill and Santa Monica Mountain Park ranches, owned respectively by Arthur Letts and R. C. Gillis and Arthur Fleming; property north of Rustic Canyon controlled by the Wright-Callender-Andrews Company; Huntington Heights just north of Santa Monica Canyon; and a stretch of ocean frontage extending beyond the Japanese fishing village.

The development of this section, which is directly tributary to Los Angeles by its wonderful boulevard system, has long been retarded because of the lack of a dependable water supply. It is already the region of a number of notable country estates and suburban homes, and the property owners say they now expect to go forward with plans which have been held up for several years. The Letts property is being surveyed, and only recently a survey of the Santa Monica Mountain Park property was completed with a view to making extensive road improvements. It is expected that these improvements will be followed by the subdivision of portions of the properties and the erection of additional suburban homes.

The water extension contemplated under this bond issue will insure a perpetual supply to the district and will at once bring it within the area near Los Angeles which is just now feeling strongly the influence of development.

BUNGALOW COURT.

A new bungalow court including ten five-room dwellings will be erected on Sunset boulevard near Western avenue for Miss Gertrude Saathoff to cost $30,000. W. S. Weeks has the building contract. The building will be of frame and concrete construction, and will be heated from a central plant.

OWENSMOUTH FEELS BUILDING IMPETUS.

SAN FERNANDO VALLEY TOWN IS KEEPING PACE WITH DEVELOPMENT.

Owensmouth, at the upper end of the San Fernando Valley, is feeling the influence of progressive development along with the other communities of that section of Southern California. Much new building is going on and many newcomers have recently purchased property and settled there. Fourteen new dwellings are now in course of construction, mostly of the attractive bungalow type, and a new church building will soon be erected by the First Methodist Church, south, to cost about $20,000. Plans for additional homes are being prepared.

The real estate activity in that section of the valley has been particularly marked since the beginning of the selling campaign inaugurated by the T. M. Miller Company, which is handling the properties owned by H. J. Whitley, one of the original owners and developers of the 54,000-acre San Fernando-Lankershim ranch. Mr. Whitley has taken over the holdings of his associates—the five Los Angeles men whose enterprise resulted in the development of Van Nuys and Owensmouth—and is now disposing of the remaining acreage in small tracts. Daily excursions are being conducted by the Miller company, and the land is passing into the hands of individual owners. Much of this land is being planted to fruit trees, the soil being especially suited to peaches, apricots and plums. The entire tract has been brought under the aqueduct water system, a fact which has enabled the ranchers to bring their orchards up to an excellent state of cultivation.

Fruit growers in the vicinity of Owensmouth this season have been able to dispose of their fruit locally as the result of the establishment there of the Clemson and Beekman dehydrating plant, which handled ninety tons of dried apricots and employed 125 persons drying and packing the fruit. Plans are being made to enlarge the capacity of the plant in time for next season's fruit crop.

The work of handling the fruit was greatly facilitated by the installation of patent pitting machines—the first to be used in Southern California—which handled a box of fruit every two minutes. Through the operation of these machines sixteen girls were able to do the work which ordinarily requires thirty-five persons. The results of the plant's first season's operations, according to its managers, were highly successful, and fruit men and canners from several parts of the State came to witness the new process.

PHYSICIAN BUYS.

R. A. Rowan and Company, report the sale of the residence at 508 South Serrano avenue to Dr. P. G. White, recently returned from overseas duty in France, for $12,500. The seller was Moye Stephens. Doctor and Mrs. White will occupy the place as their home.

The same brokers also report these additional sales: To Francis R. Blouin, of New Orleans, La., for Sidney L. Graves, the residence at 102 South Manhattan place, $10,500; to Miss Helen Sanborn for Ellen Ready, the residence at 1632 Ingraham street, $8000; to George Neilson for F. C. Eckley, lot on Lorraine boulevard south of Wilshire boulevard, to Mrs. Joe Lou Adams for Max Ibers, bungalow at 153 South Ardmore avenue, to J. E. Webb, a wealthy lumber man of Walla Walla, Wash., for M. P. Gilbert, resident at Fifth street and Wilton place, $15,000.

IMPROVE BAKERY.

Bradford Company will Have Addition to Plant.

The Bradford Baking Company has awarded to Frank Graves & Son the contract for the erection of an addition to its plant on San Fernando boulevard near Pasadena avenue. This building, 45x90 feet, will be of brick and concrete construction. It will cost about $25,000.

These improvements are being made preparatory to the installation by the Bradford Baking Company of two new ovens and other machinery which will cost approximately $165,000. Each of the ovens will be faced with pressed brick and the fire boxes will require about 75,000 fire brick. According to the company officials, the ovens are being imported from England.

The W. H. Rees Company reports the following leases: For F. W. Braun to the Brown-Israel Outfitting Company, storeroom at 824 South Broadway; for Forve-Pettibone Company, to the Fashion Hot Company, loft at 512 South Broadway; for Shauer Brothers Co., to the Horwitz-Mersky Waist Company, loft at 544 South Los Angeles street; for Max Marks to the Cole-Granas Company, loft at 754 South Los Angeles street; for Shauer Bros., to Kiddies Kiltie Kompany, loft at 544 South Los Angeles street; for Zukin Bros., to Osder and Hirshfeld, loft at 746 South Los Angeles street; for F. AIDS HOTEL PLAN.

Carl F. Schader, Santa Monica realty operator, has been made a member of the committee of Santa Monicans handling the fund for the erection of the proposed $2,000,000 beach hotel at the foot of Ocean avenue and Wilshire boulevard, a project which will be managed by the Linnard hotel interests when completed. Mr. Schader believes the building of this hostelry will bring about a large amount of new building and development work in Santa Monica. More than half of the building fund has been pledged and an effort is now being made to raise the balance among the residents of the beach city. The campaign committee includes G. B. Dickinson, Merchants National Bank; Carl F. Schader, J. P. Gardner, C. Neelands, Thomas McCall, H. M. Gorham, Bank of Santa Monica; I. C. Speers, Harry Johnson and H. L. Hall.

MOVES TO NEW STORE.

The Levy Furniture Company has moved into its new store at 224-226-228 South Hill street, having outgrown its old quarters at 822 South Broadway. The new building, formerly occupied by Coulter's Dry Goods Company, will give the Levy company approximately 40,000 square feet of floor space. With the opening of the Second-street tunnel, Mr. Levy expects this district to become one of the busiest in Los Angeles. The formal opening date of the new store is set for next Tuesday.

MATERIAL SHORTAGE.

REDLANDS, Aug. 30.—The great amount of building throughout Southern California has caused a shortage of certain lines of material. In some places the painters are facing a famine in supplies but builders south are more worried about plate glass than anything. Numerous contracts are awaiting fulfillment until plate glass arrives. The local wholesale stocks have been cleaned out.

LEASES PARK SITE.

Leon R. Conklin, formerly connected with Bryan & Bradford and who recently entered the realty field on his own account, reports leasing for F. B. Yoakum to the Jesse E. Hampton Production Company of a part of Beverly Park in Benedict Canyon.

NOTABLE HOME OVERLOOKS CITY

Spanish Type Residence for Hillhurst Park.

Designed with Aim to Beauty and Comfort.

Contracts Let for Two Other Attractive Places.

A noteworthy contribution to the residential architecture of Los Angeles will be the new home to be built soon for Stafford W. Bixby in the Hillhurst Park tract in Hollywood. Like other properties in this attractive subdivision, Mr. Bixby's site commands a fine view of the city and surrounding country. Elmer Grey, local architect, has prepared the house plans and will supervise the construction. Contracts for the main body of the work have just been let.

The improvements will cost about $50,000 exclusive of furnishings. The house is designed in the Spanish style so much in vogue just now. It will have a roof of Cordova tile and a patio toward the southeast upon which the principal living-rooms will open. Upon two sides of this patio will be a long arcaded porch with a wall fountain at the extreme end. The house will have fifteen rooms and three baths.

There will be a living-room, 17 by 34 feet, running through the entire width of the house from east to west and giving an outlook toward both the street and the patio; a sun-room, 13 by 21 feet, with a tile floor, a fireplace and round-headed windows on three sides. A central entrance hall, 16 by 19 feet, with an iron staircase leading to the second floor, will have an outlook onto the main porch. The dining-room, 16 by 21 feet, will have an outlook west and north.

All the first floor fireplaces will be of Batchelder tile. The porch pavements will be of brick. At the rear of the house will be the garage and walled-in service yard, both designed to form an integral part of the architectural composition. On the second floor will be three bedrooms, two dressing-rooms, two baths, a sleeping porch and a pergola off the latter. The first floor main rooms will be finished in gray birch, with the living and dining rooms panelled to the ceiling. The second floor will be white enameled on white cedar. The exterior of the house, 81 by 74 feet, will be veneered with hollow tile plastered with cement plaster.

The Willard-Brent Company has the general building contract.

Another attractive residence for which Architect Grey has prepared plans is that to be erected on Windsor boulevard between Third and Fourth streets, for John G. Spangler. It will be two stories, designed in the colonial style, and contain ten rooms and two baths. The estimated cost is $20,000. There will be a large living-room, dining-room, breakfast room and sunroom. On the second floor will be three bedrooms, two baths, and a sitting-room with a pergola opening from it. The entire inside finish will be white enamel.

The building contract has been awarded to Frank Graves & Son, who also have the contract for the erection of a residence at the northeast corner of Third street and St. Andrews place for Sidney Graves to cost about $15,000. Plans for this residence have been prepared by Architect Elmer Grey. The house will contain nine rooms and two bathrooms.

BEAUTIFUL SLOPING CORNER ON A TERRACED LOT, WHOSE DIMENSIONS ARE 150x165 FEET, WELL ELEVATED AND COMMANDING AN UNLIMITED VIEW OF THE MOUNTAINS AND LOWLANDS.

This property is essentially a home. The living room and reception hall are of good size and beautifully finished in hardwood. For the music lover there is a room entirely devoted to this art, containing a magnificent pipe organ with double manual and electric motor. The dining room is of quiet dignity and a sunny breakfast room adjoins it. Leading from this we find an inviting lounging sun parlor. The maid's quarters and kitchen have an independent entrance and are definitely separated from the house proper. The basement is equipped with modern furnace and water heating facilities.

Upon the second floor are four master's bedrooms, large tile bath and studio library.

The garage is of two-car capacity and throughout this entire holding the idea of comfort and convenience is well illustrated. Incidentally, the property could not be duplicated for the amount asked.

DIGNITY.

Located within an hour's ride from the city on interurban cars, or about 40 minutes by motor. An ultra-modern home, situated high above the fogs and heavy atmosphere and reputed by physicians of national reputation to be the most healthful spot in America. Though this home is nestled close to the Sierra Madre Mountains, the course of Pacific steamships may be followed by glasses for approximately 90 miles. The grounds, consisting of one and one-half acres, are beautifully improved with flowers and tropical shrubs and the extensive variety of fruit trees and vines is all fully productive. The house comprises ten rooms, every one having independent access to the broad surrounding porch. The servants' quarters are not on the same level as the house proper and the garage is of three-car capacity. The establishment is consistent in all its appointments and is fully

An ideal home, situated in one of the very exclusive districts of the Wilshire section, constructed after the Venetian villa type and illustrating in all its appointments that distinguished effect attained where discretion and familiarity with the subject have been the only elements entertained toward the perfection of an idea. This property is not being submitted as a bargain—properties of this character are never offered as bargains, but do unquestionably represent in original expenditure dollar for dollar of the price asked. The interior is one that will appeal to persons whose inclinations and opportunities have placed them in a position to demand "Something Quite Different." The rooms are broad and low ceilinged, beautifully finished in soft toned hardwoods. The fixtures are hand-wrought and of exceedingly good taste. The establishment was constructed to accommodate a family of two, three or four persons and its appointments throughout will appeal to the most fastidious.

As one enters the large two-story reception hall with its upper balcony, one cannot but be impressed with the charm and beauty which obtains throughout the entire house. It is impossible to do justice to this lovely home by attempting a detailed description of the interior in a limited advertisement. $37,500.

One of the most attractive white plaster Colonials in the entire Wilshire district, containing twelve large, sunny rooms, ideally arranged and exquisitely finished. If the day is warm, suggesting the sea and its cool breezes, then take your favorite book and establish yourself on the south porch, with its view of the ocean in the distance and the entire city below.

The interior is beautifully finished and contains every modern convenience. There is about an acre of beautifully landscaped gardens with winding walks, choice shrubbery and a cozy summer house.

Let us show you this gem by appointment. Cold type is inadequate to describe the beauty and charm of this property.

LOVERS OF FLOWERS.

I have just the place that you have been longing for. A beautiful 9-room home, newly built, finished in old ivory, large sunny breakfast-room, hardwood floors throughout—big basement with furnace and automatic hot water heater. The grounds are 100x230 and are the most beautiful I have ever had the pleasure of entering, flowers of every kind and description artistically set out and bordered by rare and expensive shrubs. This home is close to the foothills and in an ultra-exclusive millionaire district, surrounded by the most beautiful of homes and everything for many blocks is restricted to fine residences for many years. This place would be cheap at $20,000, but in keeping with my policy of handling only exceptional bargains, my price is only $14,000.

BY CAMPBELL & ALEXANDER.

DO YOU WANT
A HOME AND INCOME COMBINED?

We offer a rare opportunity to secure a desirable home—a modern, cozy and attractive 5-room bungalow, with cellar, gas furnace, water heater, etc.; garage for 2 machines, and room and bath for help; so located on a big east-front lot, 75x210, that there is ample room, 75x100, in front for duplex house or flats, without detriment to present improvements.

No better location can be found for rentals. Brings now $60 per month. Might include furniture, if desired. Drive by No. 1750 Orchid avenue—near Hotel Hollywood—and, if interested, see us for particulars.

THREE FLAT SITES
S.W. CORNER SUNSET BLVD. AND ALTA VISTA—ONLY $55 PER FRONT FOOT.

This splendid corner is 172 on Sunset blvd. and 150 on Alta Vista (also a 160-foot-wide street.) There is a 10-foot alley at west side. Ample room for 3 good modern flats, with garages.

There is scarcely anything to rent in Hollywood, and the demand is constantly increasing. Rents are getting higher so that it will pay to build even at present high cost.

If you are looking for a good income proposition, it will pay you to see us about this superior location—only one block to 5c cars, and very convenient to schools, stores, etc. An ideal site.

Our price is $5 per front foot less than other lots near by, and they are not so good nor so deep and not on a desirable wide street. Price for all is $9460. No trades.

Buy this whole corner, use what you wish and sell the remainder at a handsome profit. It can easily be done in a very short time.

$10,000.
BEAUTIFUL AND ARTISTIC.

Just listed by eastern owner, whose business prevents his return. A very attractive, modern, 2-story house "that is different"—a house that was pictured in the Ladies' Home Journal. Has 3 bedrooms downstairs and 1 up and a wonderful big sleeping porch; 2 baths; large living-room, dining-room, kitchen; beautiful court with fountain; fine, large celled garage; lots of fruit and ornamental trees. Corner lot 92x137, excellent neighborhood, central location, near car line.

You could not duplicate this place today for anywhere near the price asked. It's a decided bargain at $10,000. Shown by appointment only.

$35,000.

This beautiful place was recently described and pictured in an eastern magazine thus: "You could imagine nothing more lovely than this home. The rooms are very large, with unusually high ceilings. A sun porch runs the full length of the house; it overlooks a broad, rolling lawn."

It is north of Hollywood blvd., 13 rooms, 4 master bedrooms, 2 baths, billiard room, etc. Hardwood floors and finish. Centrally located. Lot 200x200, with streets on three sides. Two-story garage, with rooms for help.

It is a bargain at $35,000.
Shown only by appointment.

CITY LOTS—
For Sale.

FOR SALE—
As you know, in the principal cities of the country the most desirable residence locations are provided with entrance gates and private streets, in the city, but protected from its noisy, dangerous traffic. In Los Angeles such places are Chester Place, Berkeley Square and Fremont Place. The latter, Fremont Place, is in the Wilshire district, extending from Wilshire boulevard to Country Club drive, the new hundred-foot boulevard being opened from Western avenue to a junction with Santa Monica boulevard at the Los Angeles Country Club. The two paved winding driveways are entered through handsome gateways, several blocks west of Western ave. Sidewalks seven feet wide are in broad parkings, lined with St. John's bread trees and palms.

The building protection, insuring first-class residences only, continues until 1950. No car line will ever run in front of your home.

Fremont Place contains some of the finest residences in Los Angeles. Others are being built and half a dozen are to be started promptly.

Three-fourths of the building sites have been sold, but some of the best, which have been reserved, are now available at special prices. They are not small, rectangular lots but are 75 to 200 feet wide and 160 to 250 feet deep. Prices now are little if any higher than in less desirable locations.

Telephone us for maps, interesting particulars and special prices.

FOR SALE—
$25,000.
YES, WE ADVERTISED THIS LAST SUNDAY, AND ON TUESDAY A CLIENT OF THIS OFFICE OFFERED THE OWNER $20,000 SPOT CASH FOR THE PROPERTY, AND IT WAS NOT ACCEPTED. THE OWNER KNOWS IT'S GOOD, AND SO DO WE. IF YOU WANT SOMETHING GOOD, INVESTIGATE.

ONE OF THE FINEST LITTLE RANCH PROPERTIES IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA. FIFTEEN MILES FROM THE HEART OF LOS ANGELES. CORNERING ON A PAVED HIGHWAY. THIRTY ACRES IN ALL.

THE PRICE SOUNDS HIGH, DOES IT? LET US TELL YOU WHAT WE HAVE AND WHAT IT HAS DONE FOR THE OWNER WHO IS NOW ON THE RANCH AND HAS BEEN FOR SIX YEARS.

First, there are 30 acres of the finest sandy loam soil you ever saw. 800 feet on one paved road and 1600 feet on the other.

Second, there is a flowing well of 12-inch steel casing, 900 feet deep, that furnishes more water than can be used and there is a market for the surplus. This well is connected with 1000 feet of ten-inch cement pipe, running through the center of the ranch, with an outlet every 125 feet. To irrigate on each side of the main line there is 440 feet of 8-inch surface pipe. There is also a pipe line from the well to a 1000-gallon tank and tank house, which supplies the place with water for domestic use.

Third, there are about 15 acres in a good stand of fine alfalfa, 5 acres in corn 15 feet high, with 2 big ears on every stalk. The balance in beans, sweet potatoes and sugar beets and a good family orchard.

Fourth, there is a new, modern and right-up-to-date bungalow of 3 bedrooms and bath, living-room of good size, dining-room, kitchen, screen porch and toilet, gas, electric lights and telephone. This house would cost to build today at least $3500. It is right up-to-the-minute and of large dimensions.

Fifth, there is a good barn, 32x32 feet, on a concrete foundation and with cement floor. Room for 8 horses, wagons, automobile, tools and implements, and all the hay you can raise on the place. Barn would cost today at least $1500.

Sixth, there are three good horses, fine ones, 7 years old, a good Holstein cow and heifer, and 2 good sows. All the farm implements, including a tractor, that you need on a place of this size and character. They would cost today $2000. Also a new 5-ton set of scales.

Now that's about the layout and it looks good to us and we are sure it is, and that's why we are spending time and money in trying to present it to you.

Now about the income. That's up to you, but the owner took this place raw six years ago, with a $6000 mortgage on it, put down a real well and it cost him complete about $5000. He put up a new barn and has built a new house, put in a new set of scales, stocked and equipped the place with necessary implements, paid off the mortgage, bought an automobile, has had a good living for his family, and we know he has a good little bank balance now. Pretty good, don't you think? You can do it if you have a good, stiff spine; and terms can be had.

THE RANCH IS CLEAR AND IS TWO AND A HALF MILES SOUTH OF NORWALK.

Artesian wells flowing a good stream of purpose, free from alkali, sulphur or other injurious materials. No better land can be found in the State for these crops."
Dr. Julius Koebig of Los Angeles, chemical and mining engineer, said: "The soil is rich, alluvial bottom land, free from stones and gravel, practically consisting of half sand, half silt and clay, rich in humus, especially in potash and nitrogen, and practically free from alkali. STOCKS AND BONDS—

DO YOU WISH TO DOUBLE OR TREBLE YOUR MONEY IN A MONTH OR TWO?

I have several thousand shares of stock in a producing big silver mine, with assets of practically $1,000,000 and no liabilities.

You can get a clean report from Dun's or Bradstreet's mercantile agencies on this company, and it will otherwise stand rigid investigation.

Arrangements have been entirely completed for the listing of this stock on the New York curb market next month at a probable much higher value than what it is held at now.

Recent big strikes at the mine indicate that the stock will travel upward in price very rapidly.

This is no promotion, as the company is mighty well financed itself. All I ask is your thorough investigation.

Circumstances necessitate my selling some of my stock AT ONCE and I can assure anyone of a very good deal who is interested. Address H, box 892, TIMES BRANCH OFFICE.

DO YOU WISH TO DOUBLE OR TREBLE YOUR MONEY IN A MONTH OR TWO?

I have several thousand shares of stock in a producing big silver mine with assets of practically $1,000,000 and no liabilities.

You can get a clean report from Dun's or Bradstreet's mercantile agencies on this company, and it will otherwise stand rigid investigation.

Arrangements have been entirely completed for the listing of this stock on the New York curb market next month at a probable much higher value than what it is held at now.

Recent big strikes at the mine indicate that the stock will travel upward in price very rapidly.

This is no promotion, as the company is mighty well financed itself. All I ask is your thorough investigation.

Circumstances necessitate my selling some of my stock AT ONCE, and I can assure any one of a very good deal who is interested. Address H, box 302, TIMES BRANCH OFFICE.

CAPITAL IS AGOG AT ROYAL VISIT.

Official Washington Excited Over Wales's Coming.

Grandfather's Visit and Other Royalties Recalled.

Entertainment Rests Largely on Desires of Guest.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Official Washington is all excited over the approaching visit of Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David Winsor, Prince of Wales. Royalty has not often honored our shores by its presence, and when it does so the State Department rushes to get out its "Etiquette in the Presence of Royalty," and brushes up on the rules for backing out of a room without breaking one's neck. Without such preparation, somebody might fall over a footstool, or make some other faux pas that could not be excused, even on the overworked grounds of American informality.

Washington's preparations for the royal visitor are not, of course, limited to an intensive course in court manners. The third assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Breckinridge Long, his staff, the White House secretaries, and military aides are all making definite arrangements for the Prince's stay at the White House, this October.

The programme of entertainment will depend partly on His Royal Highness.

"The Prince of Wales," says the third assistant Secretary's office impressively, "is a person of importance, and must be consulted as to what he would like to do while in Washington." As the Prince has not yet informed the President regarding this important matter, the schedule of events cannot be made out complete.

GUEST OF PRESIDENT.

The President, as the host of the Prince, will undoubtedly give a formal dinner in his honor, and the Prince will as undoubtedly express a desire to visit Mt. Vernon and the Capitol, just as did his grandfather, Edward Albert, when he visited the United States as Prince of Wales in 1860.

Then, too, certain details of procedure can be arranged far in advance. It is doubtless already decided, for instance, that when the Prince enters Washington he will step from his private car into the President's room at the Union Station, to be welcomed there by the President's representative; and that he will then follow a trail of red carpet, bordered by troops standing at attention, to the Presidential automobiles, and ride in state up Pennsylvania avenue to the executive mansion.

The Prince will be the personal guest of President Wilson, just as the other Edward Albert was the guest of President Buchanan in 1860. Buchanan's royal visitor traveled in the United States as Baron Renfrew, which was one of his titles. By leaving his heavy baggage of titles, he simplified matters to the extent that some of the most onerous British court formalities were dispensed with.

GRANDFATHER LIKED JULEP.

The "Baron" planted a tree at Mt. Vernon, drank a mint julep in Virginia, danced outside the White House, (President Buchanan did not approve of dancing in the executive mansion,) and otherwise was shown America in proper style. According to correspondents of the day, the Baron found his mint julep one of his most pleasurable experiences in the United States.

When introduced to guests at the White House reception, the Baron smiled and bowed, while President Buchanan at his side shook hands after Presidential custom, and people remarked on the difference between cold British formality and American democracy. Customs are subject to change, however, both in republics and monarchies. Sixty years before Buchanan's administration, George Washington had decided that dignity demanded that the Chief Executive receive callers without shaking hands. To make handshaking impossible, he made a point of holding his cocked hat in his hands when he received official visitors. Then came crowded White House levees and Jeffersonial democracy, and colonial objections to hand-shaking as undignified were forgotten.

Democratic as the present Prince of Wales undoubtedly, is, certain concessions to his royal status must be made. For instances, he must be presented to the President by some one high enough in rank to be worthy of the honor.

PRINCE HENRY'S VISIT.

When Prince Henry of Prussia visited the White House in 1902, this presentation question arose suddenly as the Prince came before President Roosevelt. No one of high enough rank was on hand to introduce the visitor, and after an awkward minute, the Prince of Prussia stepped forward and presented himself to the President of the United States.

This brother of the ex-Kaiser was greeted with a great deal of enthusiasm by the people of the United States, and for the most part favorable comments were made in regard to his smiling appearance and affable sayings. Some editors hinted at the time that the Prince was on a secret mission for the Kaiser. One remarked that "on Prince Henry's last visit he traveled as a mailed fist, and now he goes as a velvet glove." The Prussian Prince came and went, and aside from the statement that he was "bearer of messages of friendship and goodwill from the German nation," his purpose in visiting the United States was never announced.

To return to his Royal Highness, Edward Albert, it may be said that he too comes bearing a message of friendship. He comes to the United States at a most favorable time, when England and the United States are more closely in sympathy than ever before—much more so than when his grandfather visited us.

OTHER ROYAL GUESTS.

The visit of the British Prince to the President is to be followed by a visit of the King and Queen of Belgium. This will be the third occasion on which the United States has entertained reigning royalty. The first sovereign to be our guest was Dom Pedro, the last Emperor of Brazil, who came here with his Empress in 1876.

The second traveling monarch to stop off at Washington was the King of the Sandwich Isles, who paid a visit to President Grant. The King was highly satisfactory to look at. He brought with him all his regalia and kingly mannerisms. His three valets, who accompanied him everywhere, saw to it that the King was served and approached according to the elaborate ritual of the Sandwich court.

Less picturesque was Queen Emma of Hawaii, a widow of King Kamehamha, IV, who visited the United States in 1866. At the White House reception for Queen Emma, the public was permitted to look on, and great surprise was expressed that the Hawaiian ex-Queen appeared in a conventional black silk dinner gown with jet and diamond ornaments.

EULALIA WAS DEMOCRATIC.

Another foreign visitor whose appearance aroused great interest was the Spanish Infanta Eulalia. She also dressed quite conventionally, to the disappointment of the public at large. Eulalia had light, curly hair and a slight build. In her memoirs she says, "They had expected to see a big, dark Spanish princess with a black moustache, and it was with a tickled surprise that they found me like any of the girls you see walking down Fifth avenue."

The coming of the Spanish Princess, in 1893, gave this country a chance to see a real Spanish grandee, for Eulalia was accompanied by her husband and nineteen of the most aristocratic nobles in Spain.

Eulalia had strong democratic tendencies, and immediately became a popular idol because of her handsome appearance and pleasant manner. She cordially shook hands with every one presented to her. She found America wonderfully interesting, but particularly regretted that she heard nothing of the problems of the government.

"I was merely a caller in the parlor," she writes. "I knew nothing of the family life in the home, much less of the difficulties below stairs."

DANCING WAS DENIED.

Like "Baron Renfrew," who was refused only his request to dance in the White House, Eulalia found it hard not to be able to dance.

"I often longed to," she writes, "but I was on an official visit and the question of precedence would have made it necessary for me to choose the most important personage in the room as my partner, or else to take the risk of offending him. And the most important person, at a dance is not always the best dancer. But I was not set apart on a dais as I would have been at home—always on a stand like a harp, as I used to complain—and I enjoyed myself."

The present Prince of Wales, it is said, is also a devotee of the graceful art, and the question will doubtless again arise as to whether the stately East Room can, with propriety, be used as a ballroom. This is a matter which each President decides for himself. Some of our executives have sanctioned dancing in the White House, while others have felt that dancing was not in keeping with the dignity of White House traditions.

STOPS AT WHITE HOUSE.

As the guest of President Wilson, the Prince of Wales and his immediate suite will stop at the White House, the guest rooms being set aside for their use. Less important royalties have stopped at embassies, hotels, or at homes lent by their owners for the occasion.

Touring America is apparently to become the popular sport for royalty. After the Prince and Belgian rulers have left, the guest suite at the Executive Mansion is to be reserved for the Queen of Rumania, who will arrive some time in the winter, while Crown Prince Humbert of Italy expects to include Washington in his prospective tour of the world.

BUSINESS CHANCES—
Wanted.

WANTED—
Read what we have to say about handling one of our clients' business, then satisfy yourself whether you would like our company to handle your business for you.
This client had a store in the city he wanted to sell, he came to us and inside of two days we sold it for him. He then traded a large home worth about $10,000 and added about $5000 cash for a general store. His purpose in making this deal was to sell the store for cash, thereby getting the money out of his home. We turned this for him inside of 30 days and got him 100 cents on the dollar spot cash. He then bought another store, which we again sold for him this week. Each transaction was handled so clean and satisfactory for him, that he never thinks any more about selling, but calls us on the phone, and presto change, the work is done. These statements are positive facts, which we will be pleased to furnish proofs of if doubted by anyone. This is only one illustration of many such deals during our years of business in Los Angeles. If we can do this for others, why cannot we do it for you. We are at your call when you get ready.

AMERICAN TRAINING UNLIFT TO RUSSIANS.

HALF-MILLION PRISONERS IN GERMANY GIVEN RENEWED INTEREST IN LIFE.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, July 11.—Half a million Russians in Germany who formerly were prisoners of war, have been lifted out of despondency within the last four months, partly by a course of training in American ideals, American sports and American spirit, said Maj. James A. Babbitt of Philadelphia, when he returned recently from Germany on his way to the United States.

Maj. Babbitt is a professor in Haverford College, and a member of the American Football Rules Committee. He was chief of the Bureau of Medical and Surgical Relief for the American Red Cross in Germany, and visited nearly all the camps where Russian prisoners were interned.

"We found the Russian war prisoners in a state of complete lassitude, mentally and physically," he said. "They had spent four years in the neglect and misery of German internment camps. Iw was enough to break the strongest man's spirit. Their own country had forgotten them and no word had come from their relatives and friends. There was no future in Germany nor hope of anything better in their own country. Hundreds of thousands of Russians who had fought valiantly for the Allied cause were slowly dying from depression, mental inactivity and physical malnutrition.

"We put them to school like children. Athletic games were introduced into the camps, and these stimulated the prisoners physically, while motion pictures and other mental recreations brightened their dull hours. Their hospitals were provided with every needed medical and surgical requisite. The camps were organized under the command of the American army personnel. They began to take on a new physical aspect and the men showed signs of returning life and courage. Although they at first regarded us with suspicion, this was soon changed, and they looked upon us as friends. They formed camp committees, which brought all their needs, grievances and fears to our attention."

MEXICO EXPECTS BIG INFLUX OF COLONISTS.

PREPARES TO SETTLE A MILLION EUROPEANS ON VAST LAND GRANTS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

MEXICO CITY, July 30.—How to make homes for a million prospective new colonists, how to make these persons fit into the scheme of life here and how best to distribute them over the republic are questions of immigration receiving the attention of a special commission appointed by President Carranza.

According to data collected by this Committee on Articles of First Necessity one million persons will immigrate from various European and Asiatic countries to Mexico, within the next year. They are expected to leave their native lands because of disrupted conditions due to the war. Communications received here from England, France, Germany and Russia indicate that colonies of those nationals are already being formed and will embark for Mexico at an opportune moment.

Luis Ludert y Rul, president of the investigating committee, has been quoted as saying that Mexico welcomes all dependable colonists.

The committee has made no announcement as to the location of the various colonies; whether they are to receive grants of land or are to be assimilated among the natives. It is believed, however, that there is sufficient undeveloped land in the republic to accommodate all home-seekers and that equitable distribution will be made as occasion demands.

Lower California at present appears to be the goal of a large number of repatriated Mexicans who for the past few years have been living in the United States. El Democrata asserts that within the next few months 5000 new Mexican families will be established there.

BRITISH FEAR HARD EXPORT TRADE JOLT.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, July 15.—Steadily increasing production costs, due to increased labor cost and higher prices for raw materials, have developed the fear in England that British export trade is to suffer a severe jolt, if not serious injury. Comparisons are constantly being made with foreign costs, but it is noted that most men fear American competition more than any other.

Sir Auckland Geddes, discussing in the House of Commons the effects of increased coal prices, compared British iron and steel prices with those prevailing in the United States.

Steel rails in England, he said, cost $85 a ton while in the United States they were $50, and steel plates for shipbuilding $87.50, and in the United States $70. Crown bars were $110 a ton, as compared with the American price of $57.50. The spread in pig iron, he pointed out was $10 a ton, the British cost being $40 to the American $30.

PROFITEERING IN FOOD IN 1776.

Meat from 10 to 20 Cents a Pound in Philadelphia.

Laws Were Passed to Prevent "Forestalling."

Threats of Consumers Put End to the Practice.

[From the Philadelphia Ledger.]

The food profiteer is nothing new under the sun in Philadelphia.

In January, 1776, while Continental paper money still was good for its face value, a corner in certain food staples was formed by certain dealers. A committee was chosen to defeat the "forestallers" or "engrossers," as the profiteers then were called, by fixing the prices of the things most in demand. The committee promised to name publicly the "sordid vultures who were preying on the vitals of their country in time of common distress."

The prices fixed for the commodities named were: Coffee, 22 cents a pound; chocolate, 32 cents; loaf sugar, 28 cents; lump sugar, 30 cents; Lisbon salt, 96 cents a bushel; Liverpool salt, $1.20 a bushel. Four months later the committee raised the price of salt to nearly $2 a bushel and there was a loud outcry from the householders, who really suffered for the want of it, after unsuccessful efforts had been made to extract it from the sea of the New Jersey shore.

Six months later salt was hardly to be had even at $6 a bushel. The committee peremptorily seized 400 bushels stored by one firm and 3000 hoarded by another.

Shoes in a few months had doubled in price, and were $3.60 a pair, which today does not seem at all immoderate. Linen was $2.88 a yard. Meat had risen from 10 cents to 20 cents a pound and butter was 41 cents.

LAWS AGAINST FORESTALLING.

On April 3, 1779, a law was passed to prevent "forestalling," whereby purchasing in the market and selling again within four miles was forbidden. About that time a ship laden with flour arrived in port, and the citizens supposed the price of flour would fall. It did not, and a town meeting was held to denounce the importers. As a result of the meeting there was an abatement. A few weeks later it was found that flour was being surreptitiously sold to the French fleet at advanced prices. Another meeting was held, another committee was appointed, and the abused was checked. It is significant to note how soon and how simply Philadelphia in that day found and applied a remedy for the evil of profiteering.

But the tradesmen did not all tacitly submit to the regulation of prices by the committee.

Tanners, curriers and cordwainers complained that they were not allowed to raise their prices to the same extent with other purveyors. A number of merchants united in a memorial of remonstrance to the executive council.

During the revolution labor could be obtained for the harvest at the low rate of 60 cents a day and half the sum for boys.

Think of the times when wild pigeons flew over the town in such clouds as to darken the sun for several hours together and were sold at a cent apiece!

Shad could once be had for 6 and 8 cents each.

Two centuries ago flour could be had at $2.28 for 100 pounds. But tea (bohea) was $5.76 a pound.

Coming down from this primeval era to our own period, the Monthly Labor Review for June, 1919, as published by the government, shows how prices have mounted in the several cities since 1913.

Here in Philadelphia we have sirloin steak leaping from 30 cents a pound in 1913 to 53.6 in 1919. Pork chops have mounted from 22.4 to 44.9 cents. Sliced bacon, that was 25.4, is now 56.1 cents. Lamb went from 20.8 to 43.4 cents.

Chickens rose from 22.7 cents a pound to 44.6. Milk that was 8 cents a quart became 13. The price of lard became 34.2 cents instead of 15.3.

Eggs at 24.9 per dozen no longer recognized themselves at 49.6. Bread that was 4.8 cents a pound ascended to 9.4 and flour, formerly at 3.1 was sold for 7.1 cents.

Potatoes, sold at 2.1 cents per pound in 1913, were to be had for 3.9 six years later. Granulated sugar, whose price was 4.9 in 1913, went up to 10 cents in 1919.

CANTEEN OF Y.M.C.A. IN ITALY IS LOOTED.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

FLORENCE (Italy) July 14.—That the "Camera Del Lavoro," the management of the recent Italian strikes styles itself, is no respecter of the property of other nations was emphasized when the canteen of the American Young Men's Christian Association, serving almost exclusively the enlisted men of the Italian army, was commandeered and ransacked. The canteen was under the direction of Harry H. Holbert of Tucson, Ariz., who told the Associated Press correspondent:

"I am sure that it was not the soldiers who did the work. The soldiers were extremely grateful to us for the work we have been doing. We had been providing them with many of the things they needed at greatly reduced prices. The delegates of the "Camera Del Lavoro" vainly tried to influence the soldiers themselves, to destroy the place.

"Failing to influence the soldiers, the delegates took the matter in their own hands and drove up one morning in a large motor truck demanding admission and ordering the loading of all the supplies in the camion. We lost more than $500 worth of supplies by the incident."

Preaching at 102.

DAILY TRADE TALK.

Review of the Week; Dairy Conditions Improve; H. C. of L. Statistics.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

A tumultuous week and month ended yesterday with every wheel turning, and even the more obtuse of the agitators hunting their holes. There really is not very much to add to that which has been said and written. Los Angeles business met the situation and after a brief readjustment proceeded as though nothing had occurred. The summer siesta is ended, and as a siesta it proved a total failure, for both July and August established new records in practically every line of endeavor. It is expected that, with the resumption of business on Tuesday the recent local disturbances will be little more than an echo. The absence of two pay envelopes is beginning to have its effect upon the strikers, and because of the reluctance of Los Angeles to be taught the promised lesson the back to the job movement which started yesterday will probably be in full force and effect. The men who find their old jobs waiting for them will be lucky.

The story of unprecedented August bank clearings, retail trade and investment activity has been told. There is no reason to anticipate a lessening in this onward movement. On the contrary the development is cumulative, and plans which have been in abeyance during the labor troubles will soon be brought to a focus. News of the actual realization of a lower food price level will have a stimulating effect. Bank deposits continue to increase. There is plenty of work at high wages, and the outlook is altogether encouraging.

Tomorrow will be the last of the summer holidays and it will be observed in this city by a general suspension of business.

The Dairy Market.

There will be no $1 per pound butter in Los Angeles during the coming winter. As a matter of fact the market has very nearly reached its peak at this time. My informant is Secretary Hudson, of the Produce Exchange, whose business it is to keep in close touch with the conditions in their relation to both producer and retailer. Butter is now quoted on the exchange at 59 cents, a price which will remain fixed at least until Wednesday. Later it may go a few cents higher, but there is no basis for the fear of a prohibitive price.

Production conditions are improving, and while labor remains very high the tendency which was apparent during the last year of the war and which continued up to the spring of 1919 to dispose of dairy herds is undergoing a reaction. This was due in part to the high prices obtaining for beef, to the difficulties of securing sufficient help, and to marketing conditions. The cow is coming to earth after her jump over the moon and it is no longer more profitable to the dairyman to sell his stock for beef.

There are more eggs in local storage than there were a year ago, but this is partially due to the fact that a number of dealers, taking advantage of the better facilities and lower storage rates in this city, have moved their stocks from San Francisco. The last warehouse report shows 108,245 cases of stored eggs as compared with 82,698 on the corresponding date in 1918. There are 360 eggs in a case. Los Angeles is the distributing center for 1,000,000 consumers which establishes a reserve of about three dozen eggs per capita.

The suggestion that egg dealers are profiteering is warmly refuted by Mr. Hudson who explains that the margin of profit is so small that it lacks even the element of safety found in an ordinary poker game. Eggs stored at 48 cents must wholesale at about 55 cents if the dealer is to get out even on his investment and carrying expenses. As an example of increased overhead, candlers who formerly were paid $18 per week now demand and receive 60 cents per hour.

Last winter eggs went to 75 cents per dozen and it is very improbable that in spite of excessive overhead charges this maximum will be exceeded during the coming season. Dealers are firm in their contention that there can be no profiteering in eggs which cost nearly 50 cents a dozen to put down.

On the butter side of the market the stored supply is somewhat less than it was a year ago, the poundage being 491,773, as compared with 564,595. There was considerable depreciation in storage as a result of the railroad strike and about half of the surplus is what is called by the trade "sweet butter," used largely in the manufacture of ice cream. Los Angeles and its tributaries consume approximately 350,000 pounds per week, so that it is quite necessary to keep the transportation lanes open. Produce Exchange officials, however, have succeeded in doing this and their emergency trucking system is such as to be virtually independent of the railroads. In this connection produce dealers very soon demonstrated their independence by establishing trucking lanes from the sources of supply throughout Southern California, and, while it was not necessary to utilize these to their fullest extent, the demonstration of the fact that this city cannot be cut off from ample food supplies proved most gratifying.

Cheese storage also is considerably heavier than a year ago, there being held in local warehouses 1,408,692 pounds, as compared with 846,533 pounds in 1918.

A comparison made yesterday with food prices based on the last day of the preceding week shows an average decline of about 8 per cent. on a dozen standard articles. Beef and pork are responsible for about half of this decline, while fruit and vegetables also rate somewhat lower. This showing cannot yet be attributed to a country-wide lower-cost level, but is due largely to local conditions and because shipping facilities were retarded during the week. The tendency, however, is definitely downward and we may confidently expect, within a short time, further reductions.

According to news from Chicago, meat prices are down 15 per cent. to the retail dealers, a condition which has not yet found its reflection in the local markets.

Bank Clerks Busy.

It will not be much of a holiday for Los Angeles bank clerks. The first of the month with all that such a date implies in banking circles, coupled with the arrival of several days' delayed mail, will keep all hands on deck while others play. Bank clearings Tuesday may establish a new record as a result of the handling of the accumulated business.

Sugar Advanced.

An advance of 30 cents per bag in the cost of sugar was announced yesterday. No increase has yet been made in the retail price, but dealers anticipate a 1 or 2-cent rise next week due to a growing shortage of supply. The local market was still further inconvenienced by the rail tie-up.

No Market Reports.

Yesterday was observed throughout the country as a holiday, and except for scattering live-stock and produce markets there are no quotations this morning. The same condition will prevail tomorrow and Tuesday, with a complete resumption of the usual Times service Wednesday morning.

Prune Harvest is On.

The California prune harvest is well under way. The crop is exceptionally fine, and heavy shipments are being made. Members of the Co-operative Association will receive 15 cents a pound for the largest fruit and it is estimated that it will handle 180,000,000 pounds for its members this year, which will net them about $25,000,000.

The Cotton Market.

The Department of Agriculture says it is evident the farmer is getting less for his cotton than he should receive, or the consumer of cotton cloth is paying more for it than he should pay, or both, while the middlemen are making a profit out of proportion to the services they render.

The Cost of Living.

The National Industrial Conference Board has compiled and published a summarization of living costs and increases for the five-year war period. According to this summary, the cost of living for American wage-earners was 71 per cent. higher in July, 1919, than at the outbreak of the world war in July, 1914. This represents an advance of 6 per cent. since March, 1919, and of 12 per cent. since June, 1918. The increase of 71 per cent. to July, 1919, makes the highest point yet reached and compares with an increase of 61.3 per cent. to March, 1919; of 65.9 per cent. to November, 1918, and of 52.3 per cent. to June, 1918.

The total increase for the five-year period since the beginning of the war in the average cost of each of the principal items entering into the family budget was:

ALL ITEMS	79.8 per cent.
Food	85.0 per cent.
Shelter	28.0 per cent.
Clothing	100.0 per cent.
Fuel, heat and light	57.0 per cent.
Sundries	63.0 per cent.

Increases since last March were as follows:

ALL ITEMS	5.9 per cent.
Food	5.7 per cent.
Shelter	4.9 per cent.
Clothing	10.5 per cent.
Fuel, heat, and light	No change
Sundries	5.0 per cent.

In combining these separate items to obtain the increase in the budget as a whole, account has been taken of the fact that approximately 43 per cent. of the income of the average wage-earner's family is spent

HEAVY SUPPLIES KEEP PRODUCE PRICES DOWN

FARMERS SELL AT LOW LEVELS UNDER PRESSURE BY WOLESALERS.

All grades of fruits and vegetables were in good demand on the floor of the local produce exchange yesterday, but despite that fact prices ruled slightly under, owing to the heavy supplies on hand and the increasing arrivals from the local producing sections. There was considerable competition between the wholesalers and the farmers. With heavy late arrivals farmers sold their commodities as quickly as possible at a very low level. The local shippers made their appearance on the floor for the first time since the strike began, but refused to bid on any of the offerings. They suffered considerable losses during the first day of the strike and say they are not going to take any chances of loading their warehouses with commodities until the situation is thoroughly settled.

Cantaloupes were in fairly good demand throughout the early part of the session and prices made moderate advances, but later in the day, in view of the late arrivals and the quality and condition which most of the stock arrived, a slight reaction took place and prices made a fractional decline. Watermelons also were in good demand during the early trading but owing to the large quantities of stock on hand and the heavy arrivals made a fractional decline, closing at from 1 to 1¼ cents per pound.

The vegetable market was quiet, as is usual on Saturdays, as the majority of the local retailers have no outlet for any perishables until Monday and most of their commodities are unfit for local consumption by that time. There was a very light demand for potatoes and prices made a fractional decline owing to the heavy arrivals by water, via San Francisco, during the past week. Tomatoes were also met with a light demand owing to the poor condition and quality of the majority of the arrivals. A large percentage of those offered was unfit for local consumption.

Other fruits and vegetables closed slightly under, despite the fact that the majority of the arrivals were of excellent condition and quality.

ALL GRAIN PRICES FALL IN CHICAGO.

SHUTTING OFF OF EXPORTS AND LIVING COST INQUIRY SCARE BULLS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Lower prices were made for all grains today. A shutting off of exports to the seaboard because of congestion and piling up of grain at country elevators owing to car scarcity, combined with the government's propaganda for lower prices of everything in the food and commodity line has scared out bull speculation and with the September liquidation on there was nothing but temporary support on the breaks to make sharp rallies.

The buying was mainly to cover shorts and even up for the Sunday and Labor Day holiday. Prices averaged lower and corn closed ¼@2⅝ cents under the previous day, September being the strongest. Oats were heavy all day and closed 1⅜@1⅝ cents lower. Liquidation was on in rye and losses were 1@1⅜ cents and barley was 1 cent lower to ½ cent higher.

In provisions packers' support prevented a decline, although an advance of $1 in hogs was a sustaining factor, offsetting the effect of the break in corn. At the close pork was 75@87½ cents lower, lard unchanged to 10 cents higher, the latter on October and short ribs 10 cents lower for the day.

It was a bear week in all grains and provisions with nothing to induce buying except the fact that prices had declined. September corn lost nearly 1 cent, however, at the last, while distant futures were off 3⅝@5 cents, December leading. Oats lost 1⅜@1⅝ cents, rye 10@11½ cents, barley 5@6½ cents, pork $1.87@3.50, lard, $1.35@1.55 and short ribs $2.62½.

Bearish sentiment predominated in corn and while there were numerous short rallies as the result of week-end evening up on the part of shorts the close on the deferred deliveries was within ⅜ cents of the bottom and about the lowest on the crop with December $1.36⅝ and May $1.33⅝.

September fluctuated rapidly within a range of 4 cents. The market closed at $1.77¾.

Oats showed independent weakness as the result of the placing of an embargo on shipments to the seaboard. Closing trades were within ⅛@¼ cent of the bottom, with September 69½, December 72⅝ and May 76½ cents.

LABOR, LIVING COST AFFECT STOCK SALES.

REACTION IN STERLING; ITALIAN REMITTANCE AT NEW LOW POINT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—This week's stock market again was guided to an extraordinary extent by the trend of developments in the field of labor and the extension of the living cost movement.

Trading was a little more moderate in comparison with midsummer high pressure, but the net result disclosed numerous substantial advances.

Higher price averages were effected in the final days of the week on the firmer stand taken by the Railroad Administration in the matter of the Pacific Coast strike situation and the dismissal of oil-land cases long pending against the Southern Pacific Company.

The latter decision had the effect of booming oil shares as well as Southern Pacific stock and issues of minor railroads traversing oil-bearing territories, extreme gains of 3 to 12 points being registered.

Rails in general manifested further restraint, however, and leading industrials also reflected the unsettlement in labor circles.

International conditions were better for a time on the rally in sterling exchange but London rates subsequently reacted. Italian remittances fell to a new point of depreciation.

The Public Utility as an Investment

The very life blood of any community is its supply of water, electricity, gas, and its transportation system. Imagine the terrible calamity the sudden loss of these necessities would mean.

With a full appreciation of the public dependence on these commodities, the people of the State of California have placed the complete regulation of all utilities in the hands of the Railroad Commission.

These Commissioners, five in number, are appointed by the Governor. All rates are subject to approval and before ordered are subjected to most exhaustive investigation by Railroad Commission experts. No stocks or bonds can be issued without sanction. Every dollar received from securities sold must be accounted for. These matters are a guarantee of a square deal to consumer and security-holder alike. The Railroad Commission has always allowed a fair return on invested capital and has placed rates at a point to be absolutely fair to the consumer.

The securities of a company thus protected and controlled offer unusual investment opportunities.

We recommend the First Preferred 6% Cumulative Stock of the Pacific Gas & Electric Company, at $89 per share, to yield 6.74%.

EASTERN CITRUS MARKET.

The railroad strike as an ill wind did result in cleaning up all eastern markets where about 1000 cars of California Valencia oranges were dragging slowly into the distribution channels. As the tie-up news spread over hte country the trade quickly saw the necessity of absorbing the visible supply of Valencias while the getting was good and if the strike is ended according to programme expected at this hour the orange market will have been cleaned up in good shape; upon which condition higher prices are already obtaining generally throughout the country.

On the other hand about 400 carloads of Valencia oranges which were packed and loaded on cars, or about ready to be so, when the trouble on the electric lines began, were hurriedly forwarded via the steam lines, or where too late immediately stored in pre-cooling plants, since the general tie-up went into effect all packing houses closed down, but word of authority is out that wheels will begin to turn on all lines immediately and packing houses in all districts have reopened and are getting busy to supply the demand created by the vacuum in shipments.

The redilivery of empty cars westbound will be irregular for a considerable period after the strike is over and many feel apprehensive on that point.

Eastern markets have advanced fully one dollar per box over last week's price levels and there is every indication that the markets will be bare of oranges before shipments made now can reach destination.

LEMONS.

There is very little demand for lemons at this period of the year and the tie-up of lemon shipping because of the strike could not have come at a more opportune time. Packings are light and are readily taken care of in the curing rooms of the packing houses.

A few f.o.b. Californai sales of lemons are being booked for up-coast points where shipment will be made by steamship, otherwise trading is at a standstill. Six dollars per box for best stock is the ruling price.

There are 55,000 boxes of foreign lemons available for sale within the next thirty days.

BLEDSOE OIL RULING OPENS DEVELOPMENT.

DECISION IN SOUTHERN PACIFIC CASE MEANS MUCH TO SHAREHOLDERS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—While Southern Pacific's proven lands are admitted not to be so productive as Standard Oil's, acre for acre, some idea of their possibilities under unrestrained development may be gathered from the operations of the latter company in California. On the same acreage output as reported by Standard Oil, Southern Pacific if free to develop the lands that are involved in these suits, would have had annual production of more than 50,000,000 barrels, or about 50 per cent. of the State's production in 1918.

On the basis of $5000 an acre for the proven lands embraced in Judge Bledsoe's decision, and disregarding the much greater acreage of probable and possible oil lands the order is worth about $35 a share on the 2,764,429 shares outstanding December 31, 1918. On the basis of $10,000 an acre, held by many experts to be nearer the true value of the property the decision is worth about $70 a share.

In 1918 the net income from the California Fuel Oil Department was equal to about $1.50 a share on Southern Pacific's stock. Had the order restraining drilling not been in force for several year past, it is estimated that this department in the same year would have shown at least $4 a share on the stock. With the likelihood that the injunction will be vacated soon the future holds out the hope that the company by means of intensive development will not be long in bringing its output to the volume it would have shown except for the order with a corresponding gain in income from this department.

LABOR UNREST KEEPS MARKET UNSETTLED.

HIGH PRICES, POLITICAL UNSETTLEMENT, FOREIGN EXCHANGE FACTORS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—The same influences which have shaped the course of the securities market since the early days of the month, namely labor unrest, the high-price agitation, political unsettlement and the foreign situation, were again uppermost in this week's irregular and reduced operations.

The strike situation as far as it related to the railroads, assumed more favorable aspects, however, due to the rigid attitude of the administration in the Pacific States, and the conservative policy of the labor organizations also offered ground for encouragement.

Further slowing down of general trade in most sections of the country resulted chiefly from the uncertainty attending current commodity costs and additional declines in agricultural exports were traceable in part to the very unsatisfactory exchange situation.

Substantial recovery in the London rate was partly forfeited on announcement that the Bank of England had suspended payment on foreign deposits and Italian exchange weakened to a new low record, with concurrent heaviness in Spanish remittances.

Bankers have been in further communication with their European correspondents in an earnest effort to partly correct exchange conditions, but thus far little headway had been made. Meanwhile financial institutions and their clients engaged in export trade are daily experiencing heavy losses.

Domestic monetary conditions reflected the preparations now making to bring autumn crops to market. Call loans were virtually "pegged" at 6 per cent, though in free supply and time money ruled at the same figure, with scant offerings.

CITY CLUB TOLD OF LOSSES IN STRIKES.

SPEAKER PLACES PRICE LOS ANGELES PUBLIC PAYS AT SEVERAL MILLIONS.

John W. Kemp and S. C. Graham were the speakers before the City Club yesterday, presenting the community's side of the strike on the Los Angeles and Pacific Electric railways. Mr. Kemp estimated that a loss of from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 has been suffered by the people of Los Angeles, through the various ramifications of the curtailment of transportation facilities. He declared the demands of the strikers are unreasonable and would result in bankrupting the companies if they were granted. He also condemned the methods of the strikers.

"The worst result, it seems to me," said this speaker, "is that, as shown by the railroad men's walkout, we cannot depend upon the word and contract of men with whom we are dealing as unions.

"I have great faith in the mass of the working men, and I believe the outcome of the situation created during the past few days will be a great lesson. We probably will not have another strike situation like this one. The strike was pernicious and ill-advised."

S. C. Graham dwelt upon the economic loss to the public in all strikes.

DON'T LOOK HERE FOR YOUR DOVES.

Huntsmen, who with the opening of the dove season tomorrow expect to seek their game in the vicinity of the Santa Anita Rancho, the Rancho La Merced, the Rancho La Puente and the Cienega Rancho, all of which are owned and controlled by Mrs. Anita M. Baldwin, are notified that shooting on these lands will not be permitted. These ranches are stocked with valuable cattle and other live stock, so that danger from hunting thereon is very great.

Mexican Congressmen Fight Duel.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

LAREDO (Tex.) Aug. 18.—A duel between two members of the Mexican Chamber of Deputies, Victorio L'Orandi of Vera Cruz and Luis Espinosa of Chiapas, at a point near the capital, is described by all the Mexico City papers received here. Six shots were fired without effect.

for food; 18 per cent. for shelter; 13 per cent. for clothing; 6 per cent. for fuel, heat and light, and 20 per cent. for sundries, and that the increase in cost in these items between July, 1914, and July, 1919, was as follows: Food, 85 per cent.; shelter, 28 per cent.; clothing, 100 per cent.; fuel, heat and light, 57 per cent.; sundries, 63 per cent. This increase as related to the total budget shows the following computation: All items, 70.8 per cent.; food, 36.6 per cent.; shelter, 5 per cent.; clothing, 13.2 per cent.; fuel, heat and light, 3.2 per cent.; sundries, 12.8 per cent.

Why San Francisco?

Los Angeles business interests fail to understand why the Lawson-Aircraft Corporation has selected San Francisco for the western terminal of the transcontinental airships soon to be placed in operation. Representations will probably be made looking to a change of base to this city or at least to an extension of the route. The flying time between New York and San Francisco is to be thirty-six hours and the planes will accommodate twenty-six passengers.

New Style Insurance.

The Cleveland Railway Company has just taken out a novel insurance policy, which, in view of labor conditions throughout the country, may become highly popular. The policy is for $10,110,000, against "riot and civil commotion." The premium was $37,110. Insurance agents here state that "riot and civil commotion" policies are being sought by large industries throughout the country, but that so far business of this character has been light in Los Angeles.

Big Fruit Season.

Up to a week ago when the forward movement was stopped by the railroad strike California was establishing some new records in fruit distribution. Total shipments to August 20 were about 9000 carloads as against 7000 of the same date last year. Most of the fruit was going to far eastern points, and because of the high prices obtaining in these markets growers and packers were reaping a golden harvest. An average of sixty carloads of California fruit was being sold in New York City alone every day. The market for seedless grapes was topped on August 12, when sales were made at $2.10 per box. Bartlett pears sold for $3.40 a box and Elberta peaches at $1.20. The strike will result in heavy losses to the shippers, but in a corresponding temporary lowering of price to local consumers.

In the Retail Trade.

Fall trading has commenced in Los Angeles and the volume is constantly increasing. Because of delayed shipments most of the stores are not yet fully stocked, but the preliminary buying indicates a prosperous season. Sales records in the larger stores show that women's apparel for fall wear is in heavy demand at a general price average considerably higher than last year. This indicates, not so much cost increase in the various items as a demand for goods of higher quality. No falling off of sales has resulted from the government war on high prices and local dealers do not expect a decrease. The people who have the money to spend are apparently not worrying very much about the price problem which is so acute in other quarters. Present outlook is for an unprecedented volume between this time and the first of the year.

Heavy Lumber Export.

The lumber export business is limited only by shipping facilities, according to many dealers. There is a decided activity at present and many think with the ratification of peace there will be a sudden spurt in trade. One of the first cargoes in a long time to leave the Pacific Northwest for India has just gone from Portland to Bombay, consisting of 1,800,000 feet of rough, merchantable timber. Nearly as large a cargo recently left the same port for China and three shipments of lumber, aggregating 4,000,000 feet, ar ebooked for Australia.

CARRANZA CONSIDERS PROPOSED LAND LAW.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

MEXICO CITY, July 17.—A proposed land law carrying, it is said, provisions of vital importance to large land holders and those desiring to secure small parcels for individual cultivation, has been submitted by the Department of Development to President Carranza for consideration and submission to Congress. The bill is said to comprise regulations for the acquisition not only of what are primarily national lands, but those holdings which have been confiscated or held temporarily by the government since the Madero revolution.

OIL IS THE POPULAR STOCK OF THE DAY

Regardless of how speculative OIL STOCKS may seem, nevertheless it is a fact that shrewd bankers, business men and conservative investors of every class are making heavy appropriations in OIL STOCKS because they are returning to them a larger income than any other form of investment and with a good margin of safety and market profit possibilities.

A Good Oil Stock has all the features of safety, large income yield and exceptional speculative features. A Good Oil Stock can be summed up in just three words—Investment With Speculation."*

FRANCE WILL EXPLOIT HYDRAULIC RESOURCES

UTILIZATION OF UNIMPROVED WATER POWER WILL MEAN BIG SAVING OF COAL.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, July 24.— Nine million horse-power is the total capacity of the natural waterfalls of France, according to a complete census made by Monsieur Jules Cels, Under Secretary of Public Works. Of that total 750,000 horse-power was utilized before the war and about a half-million has been put into operation since 1914. The Chamber of Deputies is now discussing a bill regulating the cession of water power privileges which, it is hoped, will facilitate the utilization of the remaining seven and three-quarters million.

The advantage France may draw from full exploitation of this rich resource in power appears clearly when it is recalled that Germany has only 1,300,000 horse-power in hydraulic resources, that coal costs three times as much as it did before the war, and that the French water power corresponds to a total annual coal consumption of seventy-eight million tons—eighteen million tons more than France consumed annually before the war.

France requires twenty million tons of coal yearly in excess of her own production, at its maximum. At the present cost, the purchase of such a quantity means the payment abroad of a billion two hundrtd million francs annually, materially aggravating the situation of French exchange.

The programmes of utilization of the unimproved water power comprises the manufacture of nitrate fertilizers so much needed to increase agricultural production in France.

GOVERNMENT BAN PUT ON QUACK REMEDIES.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Four hundred and fifty seizures of so-called remedies for social diseases have been made recently under the Food and Durg Act by Federal officials who have inaugurated a campaign to suppress this variety of "quack" medicine. In making this announcement today the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture issued a general warning that use of such "remedies" was extremely dangerous and likely to lead to a long period of suffering.

"The goods seized include a great variety of compounds," said the bureau's announcement. "Some of the labels bear the claim of the manufacturer that the contents are sure cures. Some even contain statements that cures will be effected within definite periods.

"In all the seizure actions the government alleged the preparations to be falsely and fraudulently labeled. Such preparations are sold largely because of plausible, but false claims regarding their curative effect. Many sufferers are led to believe that cures will be effected by these preparations, and adequate treatment under competent medical supervision is neglected until permanent injury to health and even danger to life has resulted."

NEBRASKA NOW IS RUN BY SIX STATE BOARDS.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) Aug. 28.—Nebraska is now conducting its civil administrative government under a new law by which many State boards and commissions are eliminated and their duties taken over by six main departments, each with a secretary at its head.

This system of administrative government, authorized by the last State Legislature, is similar to that adopted in Illinois several years ago.

The new law, known as the civil administrative code, gave Gov. Samuel R. McKelvie power to name the six department secretaries, all of whom are responsible to him for the conduct of the affairs of their departments.

The department of finance, agriculture, trade and commerce, labor, public works and public welfare are the names of the six big divisions of the State's government.

MOSLEMS SAVED CHRISTIAN ART.

History of Pictures Long Hidden in Constantinople.

Vast Edifice not Properly Called "St. Sophia."

Great Architectural Problem Worked Out.

BY WALTER LITTLEFIELD.

It is the belief of scholars that the cisterns of the mosque of St. Sophia and those of the sultan's library at Constantinople hold many of the lost treasures of Greek literature. It is a certainty, however, that a few days' work in the interior of the mosque would reveal the most wonderful treasure of Byzantine art that the world has ever known. For records show, some of them made within the memory of living men, that behind the sealed windows of the mosque, behind the whitewashed, vaulted roofs and domes, behind the matted walls, where are now suspended, here and there, huge disks on which are written in Arabic characters the names of Moslem worthies, Abu-Bekr, Osman, Ali, Omar and the like, are concealed in a good state of preservation the finest specimens of art ever produced in glass, mosaic and pigment, wrought in portraits and ornamentation by Byzantine artists.

Once, after their concealment of nearly five hundred years, which followed their display of light, color and glory of a thousand, the veil was lifted and copies of some of them made. That was sixty years ago when the Sultan Abdul Mejid hired the Italian architect Fossati to put the mosque in a full state of repair. In the course of his work he exposed the entire interior, and then, having made colored fac similes of some of the things he saw, carefully sealed it up again.

AN ADAPTER, NOT A BUILDER.

In the first place, the Turk, not being a builder, found it convenient to preserve the buildings of the people whom he conquered and to adapt them to his own use with as little expense and effort as possible. The Christian edifice, with its religous emblems covered or obliterated and a minaret or two erected near the portal (symbols peculiar to Islam, as they are in primitive form to the aboriginal religion of the Alaskans,) readily became a mosque. Moreover, it is said to be the teaching of Islam, whether through the Koran or not, that true believers must never destroy the face of a picture or statue of man nor attempt to reproduce it as it is the face of God, nor may any writings be destroyed, because the world of God may be concealed therein.

"St. Sophia" is really a misnomer, for the phrase as applied to the church or mosque in question has nothing to do with any saint. Half Latinized as Sancta Sophia, it comes from the Greek phrase "Hagia Sophia," meaning Holy Wisdom. The edifice was erected by Justinian the Great on the site of two earlier churches bearing the same name.

The architects were Antheminus of Tralles and his nephew, Isodorus of Miletus. It was founded in 532 and dedicated on Christmas Day 538. Twenty years after the first dedication the dome fell on account of an earthquake, and in the immediate restoration which took place the dome was raised twenty-five feet higher. Various repairs were later made under Basil I, Basil II, Andronicus III, and Cantacuzene, and finally, under Turkish auspices, as has already been said, by Fossati in 1847-48. Aside from changing the appearance of the interior, the Turks, when they took possession in 1453, erected a minaret at each of the four exterior angles of the building.

AN ARCHITECTURAL PROBLEM.

The problem the architects had to solve was how to carry a dome 107 feet in diameter and forty-six feet deep on four major arches. At the east and west ends are immense arched apses, the full width of the dome, which are again subdivided into three smaller arched apses. The north and south arches are filled with lofty columns carrying arches opening into the aisle on the ground floor and a gallery on the upper, the walls above being pierced with windows of immense size. Rhodian brick was the general material of construction, lined in the interior with thin slabs of precious marble. Light pumice stone was used in the dome. The length of the church from entrance door to eastern apse is 260 feet; in width, including the aisles, 238. The apex of the dome is at an elevation of 175 feet.

The temples of the gods at Heliopolis and Ephesus, at Delos and Baalbek, at Athens and Cyzicus were plundered of their columns. There are forty columns on the ground floor and sixty in the galleries, often crowned with beautiful capitals, in which the monograms of the Emperor Justinian and the Empress Theodora are inscribed. The eight porphyry columns, placed in pairs in the four bays at the angles of the nave, came from the Temple of the Sun at Baalbek. They were presented to Justinian by Marcia, the famous and penitent hitaera, "for the salvation of her soul." The columns of verde antique on either side of the nave are from the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, one of the Seven Wonders of the World.

The grandeur and beauty of the columns, which may still be seen today under the illumination of thousands of lamps, were quite put in the shade, according to Fossati, by the wonders of the mosaic-lined walls and vaults under the light of the sun which poured through the huge windows studded with colored crystals of constantly changing hues. He found the mosaics to be formed of glass of various colors cut into small pieces and applied with cement. The gold mosaic was made by gold leaf annealed between two sheets of glass, the art of which has been lost. Silver mosaic was made in the same way. Besides gold and silver, the principal colors are red, blue, and green, although others are used for shading faces. The vaulting throughout is covered with a background of gold, on which conventionalized Persian patterns follow the general lines of construction and form frames, as it were, for the glorious pictures.

Among the hundreds of mosaic pictures which Fossati saw, but work did not permit him to copy, were the gigantic "Judgment of God" in the dome and the gigantic Cherubim in the pendentives of the dome. Each of these has four wings, and each head is four feet two inches high; the upper feathers of the wings are light green and the under feathers brown.

TREASURES SAVED BY AWE.

All the treasures which could be readily removed were taken away by the Turks, and the heavier treasures might have followed had it not been for the awe which successive sultans had for the holy place. It is recorded that the last Christian service held within its walls took place on May 28, 1453. The next day the Sultan Mohammed entered the surrendered city and immediately made his way to the church. A chronicle relates:

"At the portal he stopped and gazed in awe at the vast silences expanding before him, suddenly broken by the noise of a soldier breaking the floor with an ax. 'Wherefore dost thou that?' inquired the conqueror. 'For the faith,' replied the soldier. And then Mohammed, in impulse of anger, struck him, saying: 'Ye have the whole city to pillage and enslave. Leave ye me the buildings.'"

TO GREET PRESIDENT.

We control several sections which we can sell in 40-acre State lease as low as $5.00 an acre—the choicest at $10.00 an acre. The value of these leases is shown by the fact that the Standard Oil Company owns adjoining sections.

In the TULAROSA BASIN, where great development is now in progress, we have choice State leases at from $5.00 to $10.00 per acre to be sold in 40, 80 and 160-acre tracts. The $5.00 leases in the Tularosa Basin which we offer are adjacent to leases which are being sold in New York at this time at from $25.00 up.

In the OIL RIVER BASIN we offer choice State leases, which have been passed on by geologists, at from $2.00 to $5.00 per acre.

THE OWNER OF A LEASE IS THE MAN WHO GETS THE FIRST PROFITS FROM THE OIL FIELDS.

NO ONE CAN PLACE THE VALUATION ON AN OIL LEASE. NO ONE CAN SAY THAT YOUR OIL LEASE WON'T BE WORTH THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS PER ACRE.

In the past year millions have been made overnight in the Texas oil fields. Only a few months ago you could have bought Northwest Burkburnett acreage at the same price as our oil leases. Today the same acreage is selling at $25,000 an acre. Even sixty days ago acreage across the Red River in Tillman County could have been acquired at $5.00 an acre. With the bringing in of the Texas Chief, on the Texas side. Tillman County acreage across the river has jumped to a point where it is selling today at from $300 to $3,000 an acre.

OUR LEASES ARE SPECULATIVE—YOU MAY WIN—AND YOU MAY LOSE. IF YOU WIN, YOU WIN BIG—NOT A FEW HUNDRED PER CENT., BUT A FORTY-ACRE LEASE WILL MAKE YOU A FORTUNE.

The Fowler Farm in Burkburnett sold for millions, and there wasn't a sign of oil anywhere for miles around when their well came in. Our leases are in territories that are being developed. Any indication of oil—any gas well—will send all our leases skyrocketting. It isn't a long wait. If you win, you win quickly—BUT YOU'LL HAVE TO ACT QUICKLY.

$200 Buys a 40-acre Pecos Lease
$200 Buys a 40-acre Tularosa Basin Lease
$200 Buys a 40-acre Oil River Basin Lease

WE DON'T SEE HOW YOU CAN POSSIBLY LOSE IN TAKING ADVANTAGE OF OUR $5.00 STATE LEASES.

We have State leases as low as $2.00, or $80.00 cash for a 40-acre lease, as we do not sell less than 40 acres; and we can recommend these $2.00 leases. But our $5.00 leases are a little better located and are worth, in our estimation, the additional amount.

We offer leases in the RANGER, BURKBURNETT AND DESDEMONA FIELDS at from $5,000 to $25,000 an acre. We have one choice 5-acre tract in Northwest Burkburnett for $100,000. These leases are handled by us on a commission basis. They are in absolutely proven territory. We solicit correspondence with anyone interested in making an investment of this class.

BUT—we do not consider the high-priced acreage as having the speculative possibilities for tremendous profits as the $5.00 leases which we are offering.

The $20,000-acre lease, which we are offering, was, at one time, perhaps, in the $5.00 class.

Write for particulars—but don't delay.

IF YOU'VE GOT THE REAL OIL SPIRIT—THE SPIRIT THAT WINS—YOU WILL SEND US A CHECK FOR $200 for a 40-acre State lease, and let us select for you.

If you want to take a real plunge, send us $600 for a 40-acre lease in the Pecos, Tularosa and Oil River Basin. These are State leases and the title is perfect.

FEDERAL TAX GROWS.

Month's Collections Show Notable Rise—Luxuries Pay Well.

The August collections in the office of Collector Carter aggregated $1,344,150.83, of which $383,752.38 was on account of payments of income tax and $960,398.45 arose from miscellaneous sources. Of the latter source, large amounts were paid on account of the tax on clothing and what are known as luxuries.

The receipts for the preceding month, July, 1919, were $1,145,408.76.

The collections for August, 1918, were but $690,150.83.

The third payment on account of the income tax will be due September 15, and the hope is expressed by Collector Carter that there will be a prompt and general response to the call of the government for the payment of these taxes.

Three youths were arrested and several hundred dollars' worth of automobile tires, tubes and accessories were recovered yesterday afternoon, when Detectives Riggs and Stevens of the University police took into custody, Arthur M. Hinman, 18 years old, living at Seventh and Los Angeles streets; his room-mate, Mike David, aged 18, and D. B. Latterman, 17, of 820 West Tenth street. When brought to the University Station and charged with the burglary of an oil station operated by W. C. Weymouth, which was entered last Wednesday night, the youths are said to have confessed. They later led the officers to where they had hid the tires and accessories. All articles reported as stolen were recovered.

36 Per Cent Being Paid in Texas Oil Right From the Start

No End of the Possibilities to Follow.

I am just from the Texas Oil Fields, with something unusual.
I have a royalty syndicate divided into units of $50 each, which are now paying from actual production of oil, approximately 36% FROM THE START, from ONLY ONE WELL, which came in 4000 barrels, with two more now drilling and room for 40 more, in the very heart of the FAMOUS RANGER FIELD.

Can you imagine what the limit of earnings in cash dividends will be as drilling proceeds, and the SECOND WELL DUE TO COME IN, INSIDE OF 60 DAYS?

Remember that every well brought in increases your income in the same ratio, while with only ONE WELL the income the last two months has been at the rate of 36% per year.

This is no stock gamble or scheme. YOU GET A WARRANTY DEED to an undivided interest in the LAND that produces your dividends, good for all time and all production royalties, in proportion to the sum you invest, which may be one unit or as many as you can buy. You become one of the actual owners of the land, forever.

No promotion, no company, no stock, no waiting for prospective income. You get your dividend for the first month following your investment, after you get your deed, which comes to you immediately from the City National Bank, A. F. How Lack of Iron Weakens The Blood

Saps The Vitality and Strength and [illegible] Physical and Mental Weaklings

Nuxated Iron the red blood food

By Helping to Supply the Iron Deficiency in the Blood Often Increases the Strength and Endurance of Weak, Nervous, Run-Down Folks in Two Weeks' Time.

To every man and woman who lacks physical strength and energy there comes a longing at times to possess the power and endurance of an athlete, yet they go on struggling through life weak, nervous and run-down simply because they fail to realize that their trouble is nothing more than lack of sufficient iron in the blood. Once the needed iron is supplied to enrich the blood and create new red blood cells, signs of weakness disappear and the body quickly gains in strength and vigor. If people would only keep their blood filled with strength-giving iron by taking a true blood food like Nuxated Iron when they feel weak, nervous and generally "out of sorts" they might readily instill renewed energy and endurance into the whole system, is the opinion of Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author who says: "Many a man and woman who ought still to be young in feeling is losing the old-time vim and energy that make life worth living simply because their blood is starving for iron. Iron is absolutely essential to enable the blood to change food into muscular, nerve and brain tissue. Without iron you don't get the strength out of your food. Your blood becomes weak, thin and pale and as a consequence you feel irritable, run-down and constantly worn out.

"Nuxated Iron by enriching the blood and creating new blood cells, strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed energy in the whole system, whether the patient be young or old. I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in severely aggravated cases with the most successful results. I have induced many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have made very gratifying reports in regard to its great power as a [illegible] strength-builder."

Oil Wealth Again Gushes Forth in New Richfield District

THE Richfield Oil district has produced a second great sensation in oil circles. Standard Kramer No. 2—2 came in Tuesday, August 26th, with gradually increasing output. Latest reports state this well is making 8000 to 10,000 barrels daily.

This tremendous producer is on a direct line between the CHAPMAN GUSHER and the RICHFIELD-YORBA OIL CO. lease.

LEASE FOR STOCK IN LIEU OF WAGES Drillers at work in this new field have made the Richfield-Yorba Oil Co., a proposition in which they propose to accept stock at par, $1.00 per share, in lieu of wages. This offer, made by oil workers who understand the condition of the field, speaks volumes for its strength.	Par Value, $1.0 Non-assessable Now Selling 75c Per Share

FAMOUS GUSHER FIELD

On March 11th, 1919, the Union Oil Company brought in the famous Chapman Gusher. The output of this well has steadily increased and at the present time stands at approximately 2,000,000 feet of gas and 4790 barrels of oil daily. At the present writing the largest oil corporations are sinking about forty wells in this new field.

Here Is an Opportunity Worthy of Your Consideration

The RICHFIELD-YORBA OIL CO. is the only company at the present time offering the investor an opportunity in California's new oil field. They have secured a 23-acre lease in the heart of this new field. In addition to our original 23-acre holding, the Richfield-Yorba Oil Co. has just secured a lease on a 31-acre tract adjoining. Their lease is surrounded by oil-producing territory. Oil corporations are paying enormous bonuses on every side of them. So large, in fact, that drilling is prohibitive except by those companies of extensive means.

JUSTIFICATION FOR RAISE OF RICHFI YORBA OIL COMPANY'S STOCK

Four good reasons authorizing an [illegible] raise of value of Richfield-Yorba Oil Com [illegible] stock.

FIRST: The Richfield-Yorba Oil Company have [illegible] secured an additional valuable lease of thirty-one and one-half [illegible] adjoining their original twenty-three acres, making a total of [illegible] four and one-half acres. This additional acreage has very [illegible] enhanced the value of this company's holdings.

SECOND: Development proceeding very rapidly [illegible] twelve new derricks up around the Richfield-Yorba Oil [illegible] lease.

THIRD: Drillers contracted to drill for stock at par [illegible] per share in lieu of wages. This means that stock must [illegible] when drilling starts.

FOURTH: Three new wells coming in at once, all [illegible] under high pressure in oil sand.

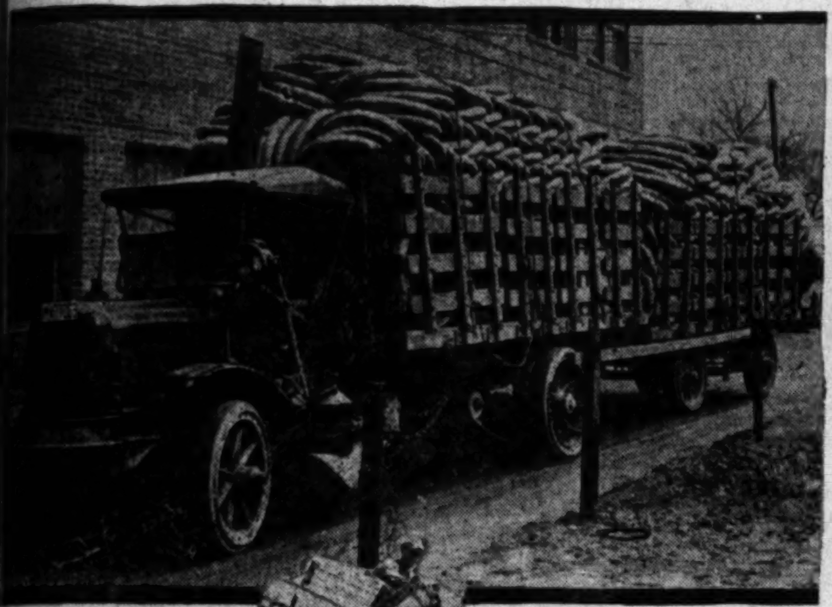
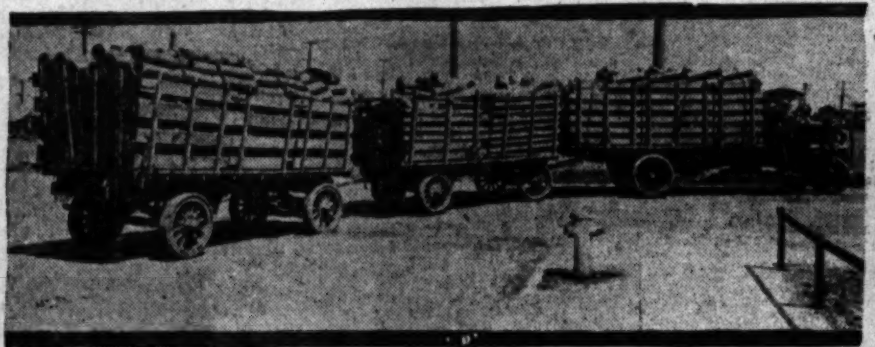
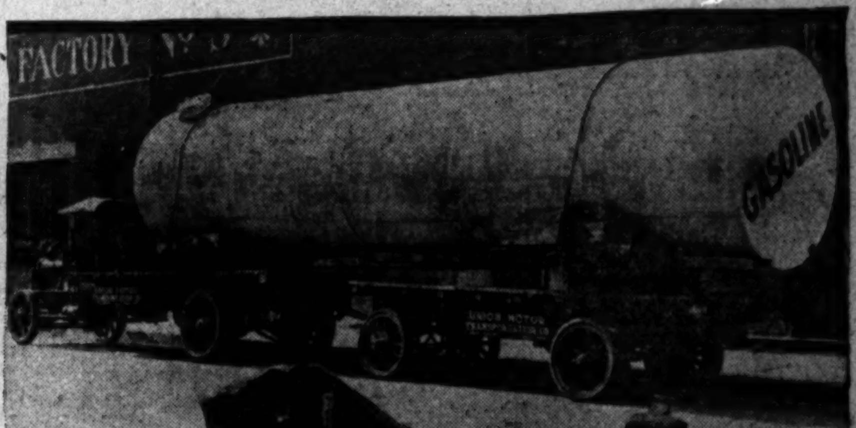
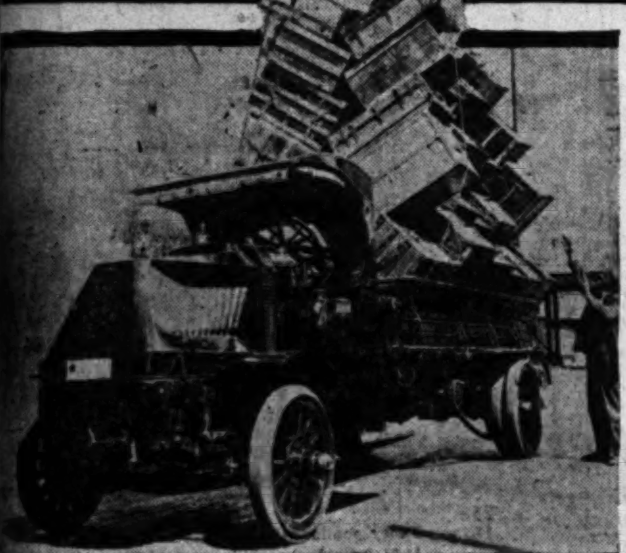
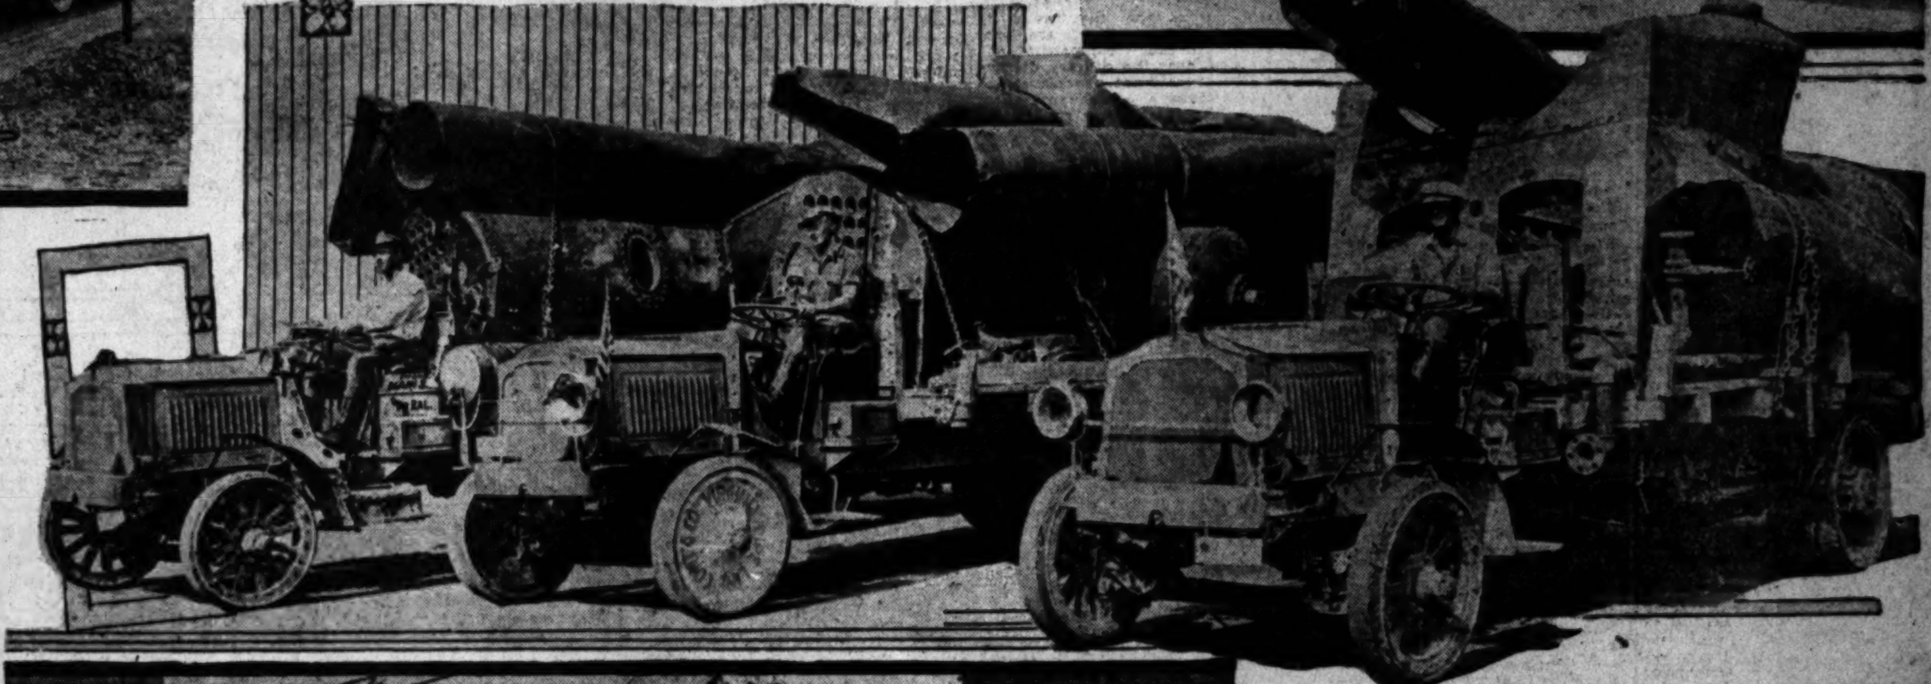
TRUCKS PROVE THEIR EFFICIENCY DURING THE TRANSPORTATION TIE-UP.

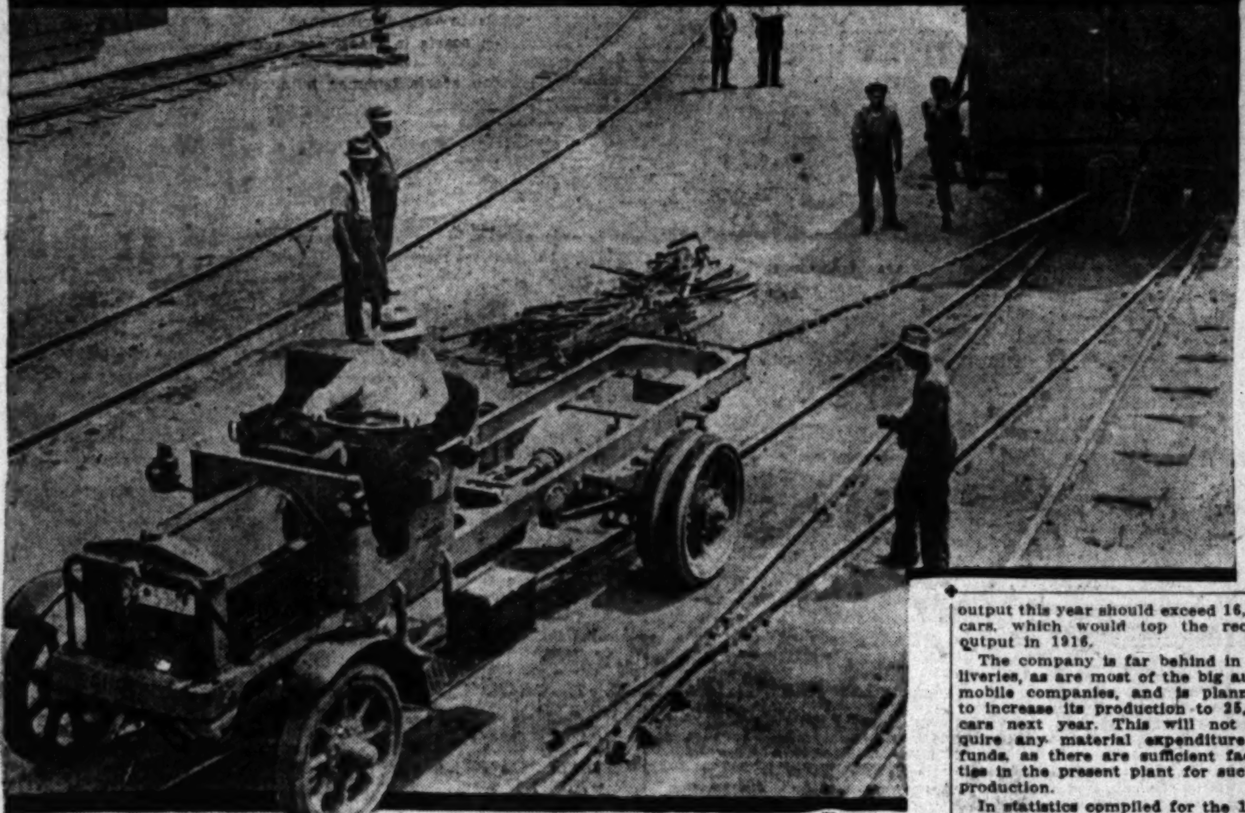












Filling the Gap at a Critical Time.

During the railroad strike last week motor trucks were called on to do several times their normal amount of work. To say that they delivered the goods is putting it mildly. Here are a few of the things motor trucks handled during the tie-up—loads which usually travel around on freight cars.

MOTOR TRUCKS TO BAT.

tor trucks are doing everything talk these days.

r a number of years the mer- s of this city have realized there was a certain amount of attached to trucks as a means transportation. Salesmen have around talking up the impor- of trucks in all kinds of de- y and have managed to con- a good many firms. But there lots of others who rather ed that the truck was the real especially in certain lines of

There isn't a doubter in the locality unless it's the man who can't get ahold of a truck during this emergency and all his doubts are centered on factories that can't turn out machines fast enough to meet the demand.

NOW SCRAMBLING FOR USED CARS.

TRANSPORTATION TIE-UP BRINGS ADDED RUSH TO DEALERS.

At no time since the organization of the Used Car Dealers' Association has there been such a marked scarcity of good used cars and such a pronounced demand for them as during the past week, according to leading members of the association.

"This is easy to understand right at this time," the president, M. A. Leach, said, "for with the calling of the street-car strike there immediately became apparent the most pronounced demand ever experienced for used cars.

"The new motor car shortage has, since the beginning of the strike, all but developed into a new car famine. People must have the means of transportation, so it is quite natural that being unable to obtain new cars they began to look around for good used automobiles."

The prediction has been made that should the strike last as much as a fortnight longer the demand for used cars will assure the proportions of a scramble, with rapidly advancing prices.

OWEN McCUSKER ON WESTERN TOUR.

Owen McCusker, Jr., representative of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company, left Los Angeles after spending several weeks here with A. E. (Bob) Evans, manager of the A. E. Evans Company, signing that company as distributors for the Southern California territory. Mr. McCusker is on a visit to other Paige distributors in the West.

STATEMENTS OF PROFITS.

Interesting Figures Concerning the Growing Motor Car Industry.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Aug. 28.—Saxon Motor Corporation has sold its $1,500,000 plant to the General Motors Corporation.

It is understood General Motors will use the structure to house the operations of the Scripps-Booth company, which it acquired as a subsidiary.

A MODEL.

The building erected about two years ago is one of the model motor car plants of the country, but has never been occupied by the Saxon organization. During the war it was leased to the government for storage purposes. C. A. Pfeffer of the Saxon corporation denies the report current in financial circles that the Saxon and Harroun Motors Company are to be merged.

Although operations of the Studebaker corporation were not in full swing until April, net profits for the first six months of this year were 100 per cent. more than last year, before deducting reserve for income and excess profits taxes. After these allowances they exceeded 10 per cent. on common stock according to a statement credited to President A. R. Erskine.

NEW UNITS.

The units of the new automobile plant under construction at South Bend will be completed next January and shipments of cars started in April, with a total of 25,000 scheduled for shipment next year, which, added to 50,000 cars shipped by the Detroit plants, makes 75,000 cars planned for production next year, when it is estimated sales will exceed $100,000,000. The corporation is in stronger financial condition than ever before with cash in bank, sight drafts outstanding and investments in government and marketable securities of nearly $50,000,000, no bank indebtedness and plant expansion paid up to date.

GIVING LIGHT.

The statement of profits of cash position which General Motors will issue this week will throw a flood of light on the scope of the boom in the automobile industry. It is understood that profits for the year were roughly about a third again as much as for last year.

From January 1 to June 30 the production of automobiles and trucks alone was 185,000, or 71 per cent. of the total of 246,000 cars, trucks and tractors put out in 1918. The second half year will be much larger so that for the full twelve months well over 400,000 cars will be turned out. It is already been stated that the planned production of passenger cars for the automobile year from July 1, 1919, to July 1, 1920, is 512,000.

FAIR ENOUGH.

Net earnings of the Chandler Motor Car Corporation in the first seven months were about $2,800,000, or $40 a share on the 700,000 shares of stock before providing for taxes. In the full twelve months' earnings, based on the present the year would total more than $5,000,000, or about $75 a share.

Up to August 1 the company produced more than 9000 cars, which was a larger production than the full year of 1918. The twelve months' output this year should exceed 16,000 cars, which would top the record output in 1916.

The company is far behind in deliveries, as are most of the big automobile companies, and is planning to increase its production to 25,000 cars next year. This will not require any material expenditure of funds, as there are sufficient facilities in the present plant for such a production.

In statistics compiled for the 1919 truck production in America, the total estimated to be manufactured is 350,000, and of this total the volume will be for the one-ton truck. The country will absorb, declares G. D. Wilcox, director of sales and advertising for the Commerce Motor Car Company, more than 138,700 one-ton trucks in 1919, or 40 per cent. of the estimated production.

The next largest number to be produced will be of the two-ton capacity, of which close to 50,000 will be manufactured, or 15 per cent. of the estimated totals.

In 1912 the truck production was estimated at 50,000 commercial vehicles, and 34,771 were manufactured; in 1913 there were manufactured 59,672; in 1914, 44,043; in 1915, 65,224; in 1916, 101,061; in 1917, 128,157; in 1918, 227,250, and in 1919 the peak will touch 350,000.

A. M. YOUNG GETS NIFTY NUMBER.

With preliminary work under way on their new half-million-dollar speedway at Beverly, the Los Angeles Speedway Association has opened offices in rooms 312-314 Investment Building, at Eighth and Broadway.

Manager A. M. Young considers himself especially fortunate in the securing of an unforgettable telephone number, 66666. "The way the work piles up just before a big race comes off is enough to make the manager forget his own telephone number," declares Young, "but the number we secured ought to be easily remembered under any circumstances. Five sixes might be a rather embarrassing combination to hold in certain forms of indoor sports, but as a telephone number it is easy to get across."

TEJON PASS UNDER REPAIR

Rough Stretch of Road is Soon to be a First Class Highway.

An acute situation in road travel between this city and Bakersfield is impending with the promised closing of the Tejon Pass, according to a report issued yesterday by the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Within two weeks there will be no northward travel over this popular route on account of paving operations in Tejon Pass, on what is known as the Grapevine grade, just south of Rose Station. Here it is impossible to construct an adequate detour, says the State highway office, and for that reason practically all travel over the inland route to Bakersfield and points north will go via Mint Canyon, Palmdale and Lancaster.

ROUGH PORTION.

On account of the extremely rough portion of highway just north of Lancaster, panic entered motoring ranks when the closing of the Tejon was contemplated. For this reason the officials of the Automobile Club at once went to conference with the county highway office and secured the promise that this section will be put at once into travelable condition.

According to the State highway office, the Tejon paving will start within two weeks, and when the mile and a half stretch on this grade is completed it will be at once thrown open to travel, and all the Ridge will again be available for northbound passage.

It is probable that all paving on the Ridge will be completed some time in November, and much time and money will be saved autoists who have been forced to use other and longer routes.

At this time there is relief prom-

REO
When Speed Is Required

The Reo Speed Wagons carried emergency loads of newspapers weighing 2500 pounds from Los Angeles to El Centro, a distance of 287 miles, in twelve hours and fifty minutes elapsed time.

The trip was made without notable incident or any delays.

This trip of itself is not remarkable for a Reo, but we mention it as confirmation of what we have previously said regarding the efficiency and time saving of Reo Speed Wagons when a transportation task must be accomplished quickly and economically.

Reo Speed Wagons have made many records of continuous operation for periods of 200,000 miles and more without being laid up for repairs or overhauled for any one period of twenty-four hours.

VAST SHIPMENTS TO START WEST.

Twenty-nine Trainloads are Promised at Once.

Motor Car Situation Better Today than Ever.

Increased Production Permits Speedy Delivery.

From present indications, the next twelve months will see the largest number of motor vehicle shipments from the east that has ever been recorded in the annals of the third largest industry in the United States.

As an evidence of this fact, the Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation will send twenty-nine trainloads of touring cars and five trainloads of trucks to be distributed from Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle.

SOME LOAD.

Only a few years ago, one trainload of cars attracted much attention. To bring twenty-nine trainloads, each train carrying twenty-five freight cars, indicates the tremendous development of the motor [illegible] in the West. These trains [illegible] 725 freight cars carrying [illegible] Maxwell touring cars and 500 [illegible] trucks, a total valuation of [illegible]000. Los Angeles alone will [illegible] two and one-half million [illegible] of this vast shipment and [illegible] L. Arnold, Los Angeles distributor, judging from the present [illegible] from the greatly improved [illegible] Maxwell, hopes there will be no break in the schedule on this allotment of the 2500 Maxwells which he has ordered.

ENTIRELY FAVORABLE.

George W. Pearson, Pacific Coast representative of the Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation, states that every dealer and distributor in the West feels the same confidence in the demand for Maxwell cars enjoyed by the Arnold organization of this city. Pearson says that the entire automotive situation west of the Rocky Mountains is more favorable today than it ever has been in the annals of the industry.

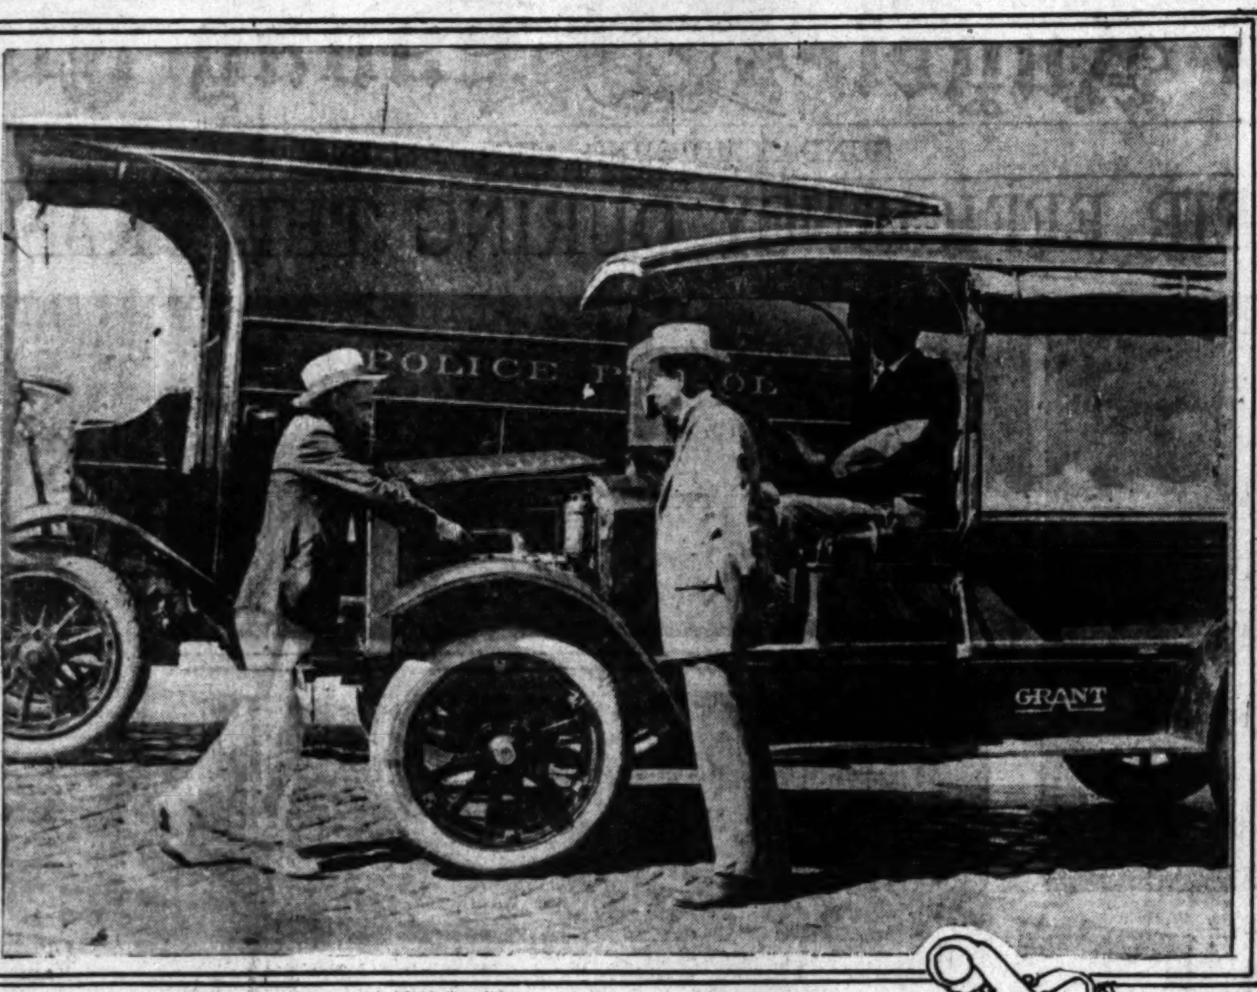
Its tremendous development in the desert regions, in the mining camps and in the great agricultural areas of California, Oregon and Washington has created a demand for Maxwell motor cars far in excess of any possibility of supply. Anticipating a continuance of that demand, the Maxwell factory has increased its production facilities by the construction of a ten million dollar plant which will give it one of the finest automobile factories in America.

BIG SHIPMENTS TO AUSTRALIA.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

KALAMAZOO (Mich.) Aug. 27.—The Barley Motor Car Company, Kalamazoo, has just received an order for eighty-five Roamer cars and chassis to be shipped to R. A. Crowle, Ltd., Melbourne, Australia. This is the second large order in thirty days for the antipodes, the first one being for 100 cars and chassis for the Adelaide office of the same concern.

R. A. Crowle, Ltd., control Australia and New Zealand and have their headquarters at Adelaide with branches at Melbourne, Sydney, Christchurch and Wellington. They are planning to open up the entire vast territory and will need 500 Roamers annually to care for their trade.



Telling Chief of Police George Home a Few Things

About the Grant truck. It seems that there is some thought of putting in a new squad of police patrol wagons (you'd better get a special bodyguard to protect you from automobile salesmen, Mr. Home) and J. C. Planck of the F. O. Renstrom Company was one of the first on the job and is extolling the features of the new Grant light truck.

WHEN MINUTES COUNT.

Every minute counts when a riot call is flashed into police headquarters. Yes, and every second counts, too, for hurry-up calls of the kind have back of them an urgency that may usually be translated into a matter of life or death.

How to perform his task in a speedier, more efficient manner seldom fails to interest a police officer, and Chief of Police George Home is no exception.

GETS HIM INTERESTED.

It was not at all unusual that Chief Home should display interest in a Grant light delivery truck as a possible addition to the present police patrol wagon. This interest was heightened as J. C. Planck of the F. O. Renstrom Company, distributors of Grant and Atterbury trucks, pointed out to Chief Home various features which are included as standard equipment on the Grant.

"How much time is wasted in the aggregate every year in cranking the patrol wagon?" Mr. Planck asked Chif Home, adding "The F. O. Renstrom Company has some interesting statistics on the time-saving features that enter into the truck question.

A NECESSITY.

"The builders of the Grant truck decided that if a self starter is a convenience in a pleasure car, it is nothing short of a necessity in a truck, because to get the greatest efficiency out of a truck it should be kept moving and with as little delay between stops as possible.

"But the starter is not the only feature of convenience in the Grant. There are also included electric lights, a spotlight, cradled battery, vacuum feed system, bumper and windshield.

"On the speed end of it, the Grant 1800-pound truck will more than fulfill all demands made on it. There isn't a light truck built that is more adapted to the needs of a police department for a sturdy and swift auto patrol. Relay a hurry call to the driver when it comes [illegible] and in half a minute the Grant will not only be under way, but in high and nearly out of sight."

SARLES KEEPS ON WINNING.

Roscoe Sarles and his Roamer win again!

The expression is becoming a familiar one with all of the motor race bugs of Southern California—and, in fact, is becoming more and more familiar to race fans in all parts of the country.

LATEST TITLE.

The latest title added to the string of victories for the Roamer Special and for Roscoe Sarles is second place in the big 300-mile all-star sweepstakes, the main event of a racing programme held at the famous speedway at Elgin, Ill.

Following a string of victories on the Pacific Coast during the winter and spring, Sarles and his Roamer went to Elgin to compete in the big race there. Despite the fact that he was competing against such famous drivers as Cliff Durant, Milton Vail, Tom Alley, Joe Thomas, Mulford, Hitke and Cotey, Sarles drove his Roamer to the finish for second place.

The most recent victory of Sarles, who is the favorite driver of the Pacific Coast, according to W. D. Wright, Southern California distributor for Roamer cars, completes a most remarkable year for the plucky little driver. On Saturday, February 22, Sarles captured first with his Roamer at Bakersfield in the fifty-mile run, establishing records on the track both for one lap and for the fifty-mile run.

SWEEPSTAKES.

On March 22 he drove his Roamer to victory over a large field of stars in the 150-mile all-star sweepstakes at Ascot Park. Earlier in the year he also registered a first in the Ascot races. In the Santa Monica road race Sarles made a remarkable race for one lap, and having never ridden the course before—even in practice—ran off the course, nearly wrecking both the machine and a house into which he crashed.

MOTOR IMPROVES WITH USE

The Stearns motor improves with use. That is a bold statement to make concerning a motor car, according to Lynn Buxton, distributor for the Stearns car for Southern California, and one that could hardly be made concerning any other American motor car.

Although the statement is bold, the first and foremost reason is because the Stearns valve action is positive. It does not depend upon the variable action of the springs nor is it subject to deterioration through accumulation of carbon. The efficiency of the poppet-valve motor declines steadily with usage while the efficiency of the Stearns sleeve-valve motor increases.

It is almost astounding, Mr. Buxton says, the number of cars with sleeve-valve motors, sold ten years ago, and still in active operation without having been overhauled to any extent. A great number of them are daily operating on the Coast.

The bore of the Stearns motor is 3¾ inches, making the license tax on the car the same as any small car—yet the motor develops fifty-eight horse power and an average of eighteen miles per gallon of gasoline is obtained.

Satisfied by ten years of proof regarding the extraordinary life of the Stearns sleeve-valve motor, engineers designed the 1920 model with the same motor. However they built as a foundation, a frame nine inches in depth, one of the most rigid chassis ever put in an American car. A rear spring suspension patterned after the Rolls-Royce, the most famous foreign car built, makes the Stearns a comfort car.

LENGTHY MILEAGE HUNG UP

The Western Auto Stage, which operates cars between Los Angeles and San Francisco, has a 1916 Cadillac in service that last week passed the 200,000-mile mark and is still going strong, according to F. L. Smith, general manager of this company. This is easily equal to 500,000 miles of ordinary service such as an owner gives a car.

"This car, as well as several other Cadillacs in the stage service, has made a truly remarkable record," said Smith. "Originally, these cars were used as seven-passenger cars between Los Angeles and Bakersfield. After they had traveled 75,000 miles over this route, twice the life of many makes in the same kind of service, the cars were taken off and rebuilt into eleven-passenger cars.

"They were then put into the valley service between Bakersfield and Oakland, running on a schedule which required an average of thirty miles an hour.

"Many motorists consider one trip a year through this district sufficient, if made once on one of those hot summer days, but regardless of weather conditions these cars were called upon to make the running day after day and month after month.

"The cars were originally put in service in the early part of 1916, and despite their hard usage are still in fine condition, and easily good for 100,000 miles more."

Business is Business.

Society Lurcher: I say, Old Chap, why doesn't your firm pay larger salaries?

Business Man: Well, it's not necessary—most of the staff are university graduates.—Blighty, London.

INCREASE MILEAGE AT SMALL EXPENSE.

Most short mileage and dissatisfaction in tires can be traced to a few things that any car owner can correct or have corrected at a small expense and instead of worry and work he will have big mileage dividends.

"These things are," said Louis Harris of the Tire Construction Company, "five in number."

Keep your wheels in alignment. Sometimes a wheel "toes in" too much. Sometimes a bearing becomes worn. In either case rapid wear occurs in your tire. Any garageman can easily remedy this.

Keep your air up to the standard. Buy a guage and use it about twice a week.

Put a good tube in your tire. Many a tire has been ruined by an old tube giving out under a load.

In case of a puncture, take off the tire and go on the rim to a service station.

Oil and grease shorten the life of your tires. When your axle drips grease get a felt washer put in to hold the grease.

CONCRETE SELECTED FOR INDIANA ROADS.

Recently the Indiana State Highway Commission, which came into existence as a result of recent State legislation, received bids for fifty-four and one-half miles of highways. Contracts were awarded the same day for the entire mileage—all for concrete. This work is divided into eight separate contracts totaling 579,374 square yards and involves an expenditure of $1,891,669.55. Indiana already has a large mileage of concrete roads that are giving excellent service which no doubt was in a large measure responsible for the awards above mentioned going for concrete exclusively, although bids were received on two competing types of construction.

TIRE DEALERS IN ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual get-together business meeting of the Los Angeles, San Diego and Arizona branches of the United States Rubber Company, manufacturer of United States tires as well as practically everything else that is made in the rubber line, was held yesterday in the general offices of J. B. Magee, manager of the southern branches. The members of the out-of-town sales force reached the city by automobile.

Between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m., plans were mapped out for the "fall drive" and the phenomenal progress that has been made by the company in this territory in the past twelve months was shown in actual figures by Magee. The members of the conference to the number of thirty-five then adjourned for lunch and a general frolic at one of the beaches.

MILEAGE GUARANTEE IS OUT OF REPUTE.

What is said to be one of the most important reforms in the automobile business in recent years, elimination of the mileage guarantee on tires, is now being advocated throughout the country. Practically all of the leading manufacturers have declared in favor of dispensing with the mileage guarantee and indications at this time are that something definite along that line will be done within the next few weeks. Manufacturers admit the guarantee breeds dissatisfaction with dealers and consumers and say it puts a premium on dishonesty and recklessness.

According to their quoted statements the manufacturers favor the elimination of the mileage basis, but want somebody to take the leadership. The manufacturers originated the system and it now is up to them to take steps toward its removal. The assertion is made that the mileage guarantee has brought about abuse.

According to J. B. Wood, distributer for Hewitt tires and tubes in Southern California and Arizona, the recent advance in the mileage guarantee was the last play by some manufacturers for popularity. "It's like the man who has been losing in a poker game and decided to make a wild plunge by staking all his remaining money on his last hand," is the way Mr. Wood puts the proposition. "The mileage guarantee basis is an evil of the tire business and it will have to go."

MACK PERFORMANCE COUNTS

MACKS chosen by Uncle Sam

Army Determines Truck Standards

In Type 4—3 and 4-ton trucks the Motor Transport Corps has selected the 3½-ton MACK.

In Type 5—5-ton trucks or over the 5½-ton MACK has been chosen exclusively.

Both Are Chain-Drive

MACKS are the only heavy-duty trucks standardized upon by the U. S. Army in two classes.

In one class MACKS alone will be retained.

What further proof that the chain-driven MACK is the best heavy-duty truck could you ask?

The standardization of the MACK for use by the Army in times of peace is added evidence of what the truck can do in all kinds of service. 'Performance Counts' should mean as much to purchasers of trucks for commercial use as it does to our military users, who had actual knowledge of what the MACK truck did under the severest conditions of service.

Prefers a Light Car for Local Touring.

Arthur Letts, Jr., has been converted to those desiring a light automobile for running around the city and has just purchased one of the latest model Templars from the Boulevard Motors Corporation.

ARTHUR LETTS, JR., BUYS A TEMPLAR.

PICKS LIGHT CAR FOR CITY DRIVING AND LOCAL TOURING.

One well-known Angeleno who has been converted to the light car for city driving and local touring, is Arthur Letts, Jr., who recently purchased a Templar from the Boulevard Motors Corporation of Hollywood, distributor of the Templar for Southern California and Arizona.

According to Albert J. Russell of the corporation, Letts, Jr., was attracted to the Templar, after several thorough demonstrations because of its easy handling in traffic, its unusual high power for a car of its weight, its economical consumption of fuel and its general appearance of refinement. The Templar, states Russell, will hold the road at sixty miles an hour, as if it was geared to it, and he further adds that this quality is due to its perfect balance.

TEJON PASS TO BE CLOSED SOON

ised for coast-wise travel through Los Angeles to San Diego or San Francisco, with action being taken by the Auto Club on the readjustment of the Stephenson-avenue section of the route, which has caused a flood of complaints. This street is in such execrable condition as to cause auto accidents almost daily, and to seriously inconvenience motoring parties leaving Los Angeles for San Diego.

TAKING IT UP.

As the result of petitions from Anaheim, Fullerton, Santa Ana and San Diego, the Automobile Club has taken the matter up with county, city and State highway officials here. The matter for the present rests with the street railways in regard to moving their tracks to the center of the street before the improvement in paving is taken up.

Stephenson avenue extends practically from the top of the East Seventh street hill out to the Telegraph road, and was at one time included in the State highway projects. The section through which it passes has become a part of the residence district, and the paving of the road now rests with the city and the district which it represents, it is pointed out.

BREAKER STRIP IS MAIN THING.

The chief function of the breaker strip in an automobile tire is expressed by its name. This strip of fabric serves the purpose of cushioning the carcass of the tire against road shocks and helps to prevent fabric breaks. When the fabric in a tire is damaged trouble is certain to follow. In Stronghold tires the breaker strip is made of unusually heavy fabric thoroughly impregnated with pure gum. By being impregnated with pure gum, friction is prevented in the fabric and the absence of friction adds to the life of the tire.

VISITORS FLOCK TO SEE NEW MACHINE.

Augmenting the steady stream of visitors who have flocked into the showrooms are scores of eastern tourists, who have displayed curious interest in the new ReVere motor cars, which recently invaded the Pacific Coast and are on display in the showrooms of the ReVere Motor Car Company. The rakish roadster and the touring model with its equally snappy lines with luxurious finish have instantly attracted attention in the streets.

ROADS IMPROVING IN NORTH.

That the State is working great improvement in road conditions in the northern part of the State is the statement made by Roy R. Meads, president and general manager of the Pacific Rubber Company, distributor of Horseshoe and Polack solid truck tires for California and Arizona, who recently returned from an extended motor trip.

While away, Meads and his family and party fished and camped in the high Sierras and motored extensively as far north as Shasta.

EARLY EXODUS.

"There was an early exodus of fishing parties to the high Sierra points this year and many streams have been fished to a standstill. At Mammoth, the head of the Owens River country, more than 3400 machines were counted during the first week of July. Allowing but three people to a machine, one may appreciated the extent to which fishing has been carried on in that section. I learned that it was extensive in other favored parts," said Meads, who, with other members of his party, packed into the country at the headquarters of the San Joaquin River.

Passing to the west side of the range over the Tioga Pass road, the party motored north from Sacramento to Shasta Springs. This road, which generally follows the Sacramento River, is paved for a considerable portion of the distance and grading on the continuance of the highway has practically been completed.

FEW DETOURS.

The only detours necessary were at points where bridges are in course of construction. According to Meads, a trip through this semi-mountainous and rolling country is a delightful one. As rapidly as the work can be consummated this main highway through the northern part of the State will be completed to the Oregon line at Grant's Pass.

MULTI-MILE CORDS POPULAR.

When the fact is mentioned that of cars in Los Angeles and tens of thousands in California, not half of the wonderful record being established in the sale of Racine tires by the Osler-Racine Rubber Company is told, according to F. H. Osler, distributor in Southern California.

EACH TIRE A UNIT.

Every tire that appears on a car means a friend made by the Racine tires, according to Mr. Osler, as each tire is sold on its merits as seen by the purchaser, rather than being accepted, merely because it is given away. The reason is that the Racine Rubber Company has refused at all times to submit bids to motor car factories for the supplying of tires to be put on new cars.

As it has refused to lower quality to meet such demands, the Racine factory, according to Mr. Osler, sells its tires purely on their merits. Each car that is equipped with Racine tires is equipped that way because the owner recognizes that the tires are quality tires—so high in quality that the factory cannot afford to build them, under the expensive wrapped tread method for motor car factories. The fact that thousands of cars are fully equipped with Racine multi-mile cords and Racine country road fabrics, shows that the tires have gone over on their merits and that users are pleased with the service that they give.

SPEEDOMETER ORDERS CLOSED.

After having successfully closed one of the biggest deals of the year in automotive circles, Norman W. Church returned to Los Angeles last week with the details of the reorganization of the Van Sicklen Speedometer Company, which has just been accomplished through his efforts.

Church, who is one of the veteran figures of the automotive industry of the Pacific Coast, went East in June and secured an option on all the holdings of the Van Sicklen company for more than $1,000,000 in cash. Through his acquaintanceship with John N. Willys, of the Willys-Overland, George Holley of the Holley Carburetor Company, and other prominent men of the automobile industry, Church was able to form a complete reorganization of the Van Sicklen company, with a paid-in capital of $2,500,000, purchasing outright the interests of a majority of the former stockholders.

Contracts have already been closed by the Van Sicklen company with the Willys-Overland Company for the supplying of 325,000 speedometers. Other contracts have been closed for Van Sicklen speedometers for the Cadillac, Marmon, Peerless, Stearns, Hupmobile, Case, Elgine, Jordan, Grant, King, Moon, Velie, Westcott, Apperson, Dorris, Cleveland, Dixie, Holmes, Stanley Steamer, American, Campbell and Pilot. In addition to this list which has been made public, the Van Sicklen company holds contracts for next year for the delivery of 150,000 speedometers each to two other large automobile concerns whose names have not yet been divulged.

Church was one of the first automobile dealers of Los Angeles, and was for years Stoddard-Dayton representative here. Since the discontinuance of the manufacture of that car, Church has not been actively associated with the sale of automobiles locally, but has devoted his time to allied interests in the trade in the East, and in California. His new connection in the East will not interfere with his residence in Los Angeles, but will probably necessitate a few added eastern trips a year.

SPEED NEEDED IN TRUCKS.

To Dunlop, the man who invented the first pneumatic tire, belongs perhaps more credit for the development of the automobile industry of today than to any other one individual. It was the invention of the pneumatic tire, with its wonderful ability to absorb and cushion the shocks of the road, that gave the modern automobile its capacities for speed and comfort.

NOT MUCH CHANCE.

The keenest inventive genius of the world has attempted in vain to find some substitute for the pneumatic tire for the past two decades, but to date none has appeared that has given any promise of success. It is said that the patent files at Washington hold more patents for various types of "spring" and "cushion" wheels than any other one device that inventors have sought to perfect.

According to L. V. Starr, manager of J. W. Leavitt & Co., State distributors for the Oldsmobile, the development of the pneumatic cord truck tire to its present state of perfection is destined to have just as important an effect upon truck transportation as did the development of the first pneumatic tire on the growth of the automobile.

SPEED NECESSARY.

"In the last analysis, the speed of the motor truck is virtually its only advantage over the horse," said Starr last week. "Speed, up to a reasonable limit, of course, is a vital factor in the usefulness of any motor truck. But, prior to the development of the pneumatic tire, speed in a truck was only obtainable at a heavy maintenance cost. The solid truck tire could not cushion the vital parts of the truck sufficiently at speeds greater than fifteen miles an hour. Consequently, when higher speed was attempted, the truck quickly racked itself to pieces.

"With the big truck pneumatic cords, such as the Oldsmobile economy truck employs, speeds of from twenty to twenty-five miles an hour with full load can be readily made without the slightest injury to the truck. Increasing the speed of the truck by fully a third means the increasing of its efficiency just that much. It can cover so many more miles in a day, and at a very much lessened cost of maintenance and of fuel, for of course a pneumatic tired truck rolls much more easily than does a solid tired truck."

PASSING CARS ON ROAD A REAL JOY.

NOT A SPEED FAN BUT LIKES QUICK PICK-UP OF TWO POWER CAR.

Mr. Clarence G. White, formerly of Cleveland, O., now a resident of Redlands, Cal., is one of the most enthusiastic of Peerless boosters.

In a letter to Smith Bros., distributors of the Peerless two-power-range-eight, Mr. White says that though he has owned several makes of good cars, he had never realized that an automobile could have the smoothness and ease of acceleration of the Peerless. While not a speed fan, he says that the quickness and superior power of his Peerless seven-passenger in passing other cars on the road is a real joy to him.

Mr. White was well enough convinced of the Peerless action and permanent good qualities to place his order for a seven-passenger sedan and a four-passenger coupe at the same time. Since taking delivery, he finds that his estimate made from demonstrations was far too conservative and is now thoroughly convinced that he has missed a great deal in not using a two-power-range-eight for the past several years.

JUMBO
TRUCKS ARE DEPENDABLE

JUMBO trucks are oversize in every detail. This is a provision against damage due to overloading. Not a single detail has been neglected where strength is necessary in providing an unusually wide factor of safety.

The Clark Internal Gear Axle frees the drive from excessive friction and enables the engine to deliver more power to the driving wheels than is possible with any other type or make of axle. It also provides greater road clearance than other types.

Every unit in JUMBO construction was selected for its proven superiority in years of service on large and higher priced trucks. They are the best to be had.

JUMBO trucks are guaranteed for a whole year, whereas practically every other truck is warranted for but 90 days. This is significant of the confidence of the producer of JUMBO trucks in his product. This is of vital importance to every prospective purchaser.

Clamoring for Soft Seats on the Stage Lines

Is one of the most popular outdoor sports these days. Crowds of people have been lined up in front of the Eldorado Stage Company's offices during the past week trying to get transportation to Bakersfield. A few of the big Packard cars are shown about ready to start on the long grind.

STAGES FILLING THE GAP.

How the Eldorado Stage Company, which operates between Los Angeles and Bakersfield, and where it makes direct connections for northern points, is doing its utmost to meet an emergency created in the transportation field by strike conditions, is shown in plain figures by its general manager, S. W. Mims, who said:

ONLY ELEVEN.

"August 22, with eleven stages in operation, we carried 168 passengers. Of this number, seventy-two were destined to San Francisco. Wednesday this equipment had been increased to thirty-one cars, carrying 548 passengers, and of this number 206 were bound for San Francisco. Upon the request of the Postoffice Department we have agreed to carry mail on our stages between Bakersfield and this city. This necessarily is confined to first-class matter.

"To date no one has remained uncared for. Every night has found the floor cleaned of passengers and their baggage, although sometimes it has been as late as 3 o'clock in the morning before the last stage rolled out. Our drivers, shopmen and all employees are on edge and attending strictly to business. Particularly our drivers are performing great service, and I am proud of them. We are giving every possible courtesy to women and children, and it is our aim to see that they get over the road."

TWENTY MORE.

Thursday the Eldorado line placed twenty more stages in operation, making a total of fifty-one plying between this city and Bakersfield. Friday the total number of passengers handled was close to the 900 mark. Every stage is inspected by competent men at each terminal before it is again loaded for a return trip, so that any chance of accident shall be reduced to a minimum. Because the road between here and Bakersfield is more or less congested with automobile and truck traffic, the running time of the stages has been lengthened thirty minutes to further avoid accident.

"We are making as good time as we can — but commensurate with safety. Every stage is going to be run as though your wife and kiddies or mine were aboard. One driver came in thirty minutes ahead of his schedule last week and contrary to orders. He was promptly discharged," said Mims.

BATTERY AND TIRES NEED SIMILAR CARE.

BOTH ARE GOOD UNTIL THEY BLOW, AND THEN THE REAL EXPENSE BEGINS.

The tires that relieve your car from the shock of the road, and the storage battery that supplies current for lighting and starting are similar in several ways, according to A. J. Tobey, manager of the Western Auto Electric Company.

SIMILARITY.

It is easy to see, according to Mr. Tobey, that there is resemblance between the air held under pressure in the tire and the electricity held ready for service by the battery. In both the tire and battery you are depending on common, but invisible forces.

Care required by both show the similarity. Tires may go miles without any trouble and then suddenly fall apart. It is good until it blows, could be repaired at a small cost until that time, but then becomes useless.

BOTH THE SAME.

These conditions are closely paralleled in the storage battery with electricity instead of air as the force to be held in check; and the insulation in place of the tire casing. When the battery is new the insulation is perfect just as a new tire casing is free from flaws. As time goes on some slight weakness may develop. If you watch your battery these can be taken care of at a very small cost and no serious trouble will come up.

No matter how perfect your tires or battery are it will pay well to keep your eye on them and stop the little troubles before they develop into big ones.

MERE ORDER TAKERS TO HAVE A CHANCE.

BIG SHIPMENT OF MACHINES TO GIVE SALESMEN OPPORTUNITY FOR WORK.

After many months of weary waiting, when salesmen were mere order takers, and salesmanship developed into the fine art of explaining the reasons why cars haven't arrived, the long looked-for era when a few cars may be warehoused and when showrooms may look like an auto shop rather than a dance floor at mid-day is about to arrive, according to Frank Nelson, manager of the Nelson Auto Company, Southern California distributors for Nelson cars.

Word has just been received from the Nelson factory that the long delayed allotment of cars for Southern California is on the way and that not only will all long standing orders be filled, but that there will be cars enough at the agency in Los Angeles to make it possible for the salesmen to get out again and sell Nelson cars instead of taking orders for them.

"Because of the care put into the Nelson car, and the fact that every bit of steel that goes into the care is carefully inspected," Mr. Nelson of the Los Angeles agency says, "the factory has been unable to meet the unusually heavy demands. However, a new era has come for us. Production has been increased, and the cars are on the way. We will now be able to fill some of the orders and to sell a few cars."

ROADS VARY ON OREGON JOURNEY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Aug. 30.—For about ten years Mr. and Mrs. Austin T. Park of this city have been making a long automobile trip each summer, and they have just returned from a 3000-mile trip well into Oregon. Their car is fully equipped for camping, and Mr. Park, who is a well-known banker, makes a careful survey of the roads.

He says that this year they traveled over many roads which he hopes never to see again. The roads through California almost up to Crescent City were in fine shape; in fact, California roads are better than any he has ever traveled. They went through the Rogue River Valley and then down through the Klamath section, down to Burney Falls, on Burney Creek, then to Eureka, then the Fort Bragg road to the geysers in Sonoma county. They found many 35 per cent. grades on the trip. In some places the trout fishing was fine.

JACK GRIFFIN GOES AFTER 'EM.

Charters Truck and Takes Customers to Factory.

Owners Drive Cars Direct to Their Own Garages.

First to Exhibit New Model in South.

Every available member of the sales and mechanical force, as well as several customers in a hurry for thier cars, joined in the excursion staged by the J. G. Griffin Company during the past week to the Chevrolet factory at Oakland, where the first big "drive away" of the season was started. As the result almost a score of new Chevrolet 4-90 owners have been added to the long list already recorded in this part of the country.

DIRECT PLEA.

The drive away from Oakland to the home garages in Los Angeles was the result of a direct plea on the part of many of his customers to Jack Griffin, head of the firm which bears his name, and which retails Chevrolet passenger and commercial cars in Los Angeles city and county. When it was found impossible to get cars because of the railroad situation Griffin called his salesmen and the most interested of his patrons together and explained the trouble.

"That's easy," was the reply. "If the Chevrolet factory will give you the cars, why don't we go and get them?"

Griffin immediately got in telephonic touch with Fred Aubert, acting manager of sales at the Oakland plant, and was informed that if he could get them away from the factory within twenty-four hours he could have enough of the popular 4-90 Chevrolet, of the 1920 type, to appease the most urgent of his customers.

Then the question of getting from here to Oakland arose. With no trains running, the transportation problem was apparently unsolvable, until a big automobile bus was found that could be chartered—at several times its usual price. A quick run was made up the coast route, and well within the time limit set by Aubert a string of Chevrolet touring cars was wending its way south.

By staging its big drive away, the J. G. Griffin Company was the first Chevrolet concern in Southern California to be able to exhibit the new 1920 models of the popular 4-90 Chevrolet touring cars and roadsters. Immediately on their arrival here the cars were placed on exhibition at the temporary quarters of the Griffin company in West Pico street, and scores of orders, for delivery in the near future, were booked.

BETTER APPEARANCE.

While mechanically the same as its famous forerunner, the 1920 Chevrolet is improved in appearance. The principal item meeting with universally favorable comment was the new leatherette top. Fenders of slightly different design, and a change in the upholstery also met with favor, as did the new lighting switch on the cowl dash and the heavier spring brackets in the front of the car.

PNEUMATIC TIRES LEAD IN RESULTS.

TEST RUN GIVES AIR TIRES BIG EDGE OVER THE SOLID VARIETY.

How well actual performance figures argue for giant pneumatic cord tire equipment on medium capacity trucks which operate over country roads of all kinds, is evidenced in a report recently submitted the Firestone company on a trip made this summer by two of the tire company's transcontinental test trucks.

The trucks, each loaded to its full two-ton capacity, were sent into the West recently to assist in ship-by-truck demonstrations. One was equipped with solid tires, the other with pneumatics. Operating together over the same roads and under all other conditions as nearly as possible the same, the trucks ran up a mileage of approximately 3000, with these results in favor of the one which was equipped with pneumatic tires: Thirty per cent. more mileage per gallon of gasoline, 16 per cent. more mileage per gallon of oil, seventy-seven hours less time spent on repairs.

Under remarks on his data card, the operator of the pneumatic tire truck made this entry: "Truck No. 84, on pneumatic tires, was in good shape to run at all times during trip."

As it was necessary for the trucks to move together, no opportunity was afforded for obtaining data which would set forth how much more ground the truck on air cushions could consistently cover in a working day in excess of its companion, although increased mileage per working day is one of the most potential arguments on the side of pneumatic truck tires.

Here is the detailed score on gas and oil consumption:

Equipment, pneumatic; mileage, 3017; gallons gas, 408; miles to gallon, 7.4; gallons oil, 51¼; miles to gallon, 58 [illegible]. Equipment, solid; mileage, 2907; gallons gas, [illegible]; miles to gallon, [illegible]; gallons oil, 59½; miles to gallon, [illegible].

REMEDYING FAULTS OF CROSS STRAIN.

When engaged in work connected with excavations, when operating in plowed fields or on narrow, rough roads the motor truck frequently is subjected to severe cross strains. The engine seeks to pull the truck and its load ahead while the resistance may be from the sides or an an angle. The twisting and distortion that the truck must undergo proves to be a test that has to be provided against through the construction of the truck and if it has not been engineered and built properly wear under these conditions will result in damage and probable ruin.

PROVISIONS MADE.

The producers of the Jumbo two-ton truck, as explained by W. O. Gates of the Gates-Kelley Automotive Company, the distributors, have provided against unusual stress and strain damaging their truck by using the three-point suspension system for the engine, an unusually resilient frame and three universal joints.

"Although the three-joint propellor shaft is really unnecessary in the Jumbo truck by reason of the shaft being on a straight line with the motor and because the forward position of the driving axle member provides a much shorter shaft, the producers have adopted the three-joint type as an additional safeguard against 'whipping' or vibrating of the shafe when under strain," explains Mr. Gates. "By taking this precaution against strain on the driving parts long life and freedom from trouble results."

BEGINNER'S LUCK OR MOTOR VALUE

...s First Automobile and Tackles Everything.

...'t Say Much for Oregon Roads in General.

...verted to Gasoline at Age of Eighty-seven.

...might have been that well-...n "beginner's luck"—but it was ... it was just excellent motor equipment, and discerning car judgment, that allowed Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bain and their son, R. A. Bain, to make a trip from one end of the country to the other, over some of the most abominable roads, difficult passes, and auto wrecking country in the land, without expending one cent for motor repairs. In fact, Mr. Bain takes none of the credit for the remarkable trip himself—he admits that the trip was possible because of the sturdiness, economy and power of the Linwood model, Paige light six, in which the trip was taken.

NEW RECRUIT.

Mr. Bain is a new member in the owners ranks. Although he is 78 years old, he had never owned a motor car until the last year. In the old days he had "Old Dobbin" and the classiest rig in seven counties, but even with the thoroughness with which the motor industry swept the country, he didn't trust them. He was attracted, however, early this year, by the beauty of the Linwood model Paige, and finally bought one. Then he determined to put it to the test. After a little preliminary training in touring, driving on the boulevards of Southern California, Mr. Bain planned a trip that is probably one of the most severe that could be given any car on ordinary touring.

He left Los Angeles and visited Yosemite. Via Signal Hill and Red Bluff he made the trip from Yosemite to Portland. From Portland, and over some of the most severe roads in the country, he made a tour of the entire State of Oregon, visiting Grant's Pass, Crater Lake, and many beautiful and almost inaccessible spots.

GOOD RECORD.

Considering the fact that Mr. Bain was practically an amateur motorist, and that he covered 3744 miles of some of the roughest roads in the country, the record established by his car is considered most remarkable. Not one adjustment, no repairs and nothing more than the ordinary attention was given to the sturdy motor. It performed its duties without a hitch, taking the very difficult grades in an easy fashion, and acting perfectly even on the hardest, roughest roads.

The following log was made by Mr. Bain as a warning to other motorists who contemplate the trip:

"Practically all Oregon roads are bad. Most of them are merely cowpaths.

"From Los Angeles to Yosemite the roads are exceptionally good. From Yosemite to Merced there is an excellent highway and driving is easy with the exception of Signal Hill where the grade is bad and roads are rough.

"From Merced to Red Bluff there are excellent California highways. Red Bluff to Grant's Pass is excellent with the exception of some rough gravel roads. Grant's Pass to Ashland has the worst roads in the country. There are numerous detours and rough rocky roads full of holes. Ashland to Roseburg is practically in the same condition with 141 miles of terrible roads. There are crushed rock roads which cut and kill tires, making the roads practically impossible. In Cow Creek Canyon and on Roberts Hill, practically no car, but our Paige got through, the roads were in such a terrible condition."

MAKING IT ROUGH FOR AUTO THIEVES.

SUSPECTED "SCHOOLMASTER" OF BIG GANG IS ARRESTED BY POLICE.

In the arrest of a young man describing himself as Alfred Kellerbren, alias A. N. Klass and L. M. Miller, the authorities believe that they have in custody the leader of a gang of interstate automobile thieves and the "schoolmaster" of the gang which planned to recruit young men to the ranks of the thieves.

Kellerbren is branded by the police as a Fagan. He is alleged to have been training several youths in automobile stealing up to the time that police officers raided his alleged rendezvous in Wadsworth street.

STOLEN PARTS.

In the bungalow occupied by Kellerbren, Detective John W. Powell of the theft bureau of the Pacific Coast automobile underwriters' conference and Detectives Sweetnam and Taylor of University police precinct found parts of automobiles, several magnetoes, several automobile tires which the police say were stolen, tools, dies and a pair of bolt cutters capable of snipping steel chains, used in holding extra tires on cars.

A code used by Kellerbren in communicating with representatives of his gang in Oakland, San Francisco, Boise, Idaho, Seattle and other western and coast cities was sought following the discovery of several letters written in a secret alphabet.

HOLD WARRANTS.

The Oakland police hold warrants charging Kellerbren with unlawful operations in connection with the acquisition and disposal of some automobiles. He is alleged to have stolen automobiles and accessories in various cities of Idaho, Wyoming, Washington, Oregon and California. The police are investigating reports from various cities regarding his alleged unlawful operations.

The police declare that Kellerbren is one of the most skillful automobile thieves they have arrested during the last few years here. They allege that he is the representative of a ring of thieves engaged in the interstate traffic of disposing of stolen automobiles and accuse him of being an agent for the "theft trust" in obtaining recruits for the gang.

FEDERAL TRUCK ACTS AS ENGINE.

The freight tie-up has greatly stimulated the demand for motors trucks, according to Sales Manager Bushnell of the William L. Hughson Company. And when the tie-up came last Saturday, knowing that somewhere in the freight yards there was a carload of Federal trucks, this company decided to do all in their power to get the carload to a place where it could be unloaded.

Inspection showed that something like six freight cars would have to be moved a considerable distance in order to place the Federal truck carload at the platform, but arrangements were made through the kindness of Santa Fe officials and a big five-ton Federal truck was soon down at the yards to act as switch engine.

AUTOS AND TRUCKS WORKING OVERTIME.

NEW DEMANDS BEING MADE MAKE BEST EQUIPMENT A NECESSITY.

For the reason that automobiles and trucks have been called upon to perform a more important part in the transportation of individuals and supplies since the beginning of the strike, there has been a noticeable increase in the desire on the part of the owners to have these vehicles in the best possible state of efficiency, according to Capt. George R. Hill of the sales and service department of the Harry A. Miller Manufacturing Company, maker of Miller carburetors, who said:

"There has been a noticeable increase in our local business since the first of the week. We have equipped many cars and numerous trucks with Miller carburetors and in general it has been evident that the owners desired real engine efficiency, for it means more power, more miles and less expense."

BETTER OIL HELPS POOR GASOLINE.

Each day brings the American motorist face to face with the problem of where he is going to obtain try which is expanding enormously, reaches the point where it will demand the entire gasoline supply and more. He is being brought closer to this problem because each day sees gasoline becoming lower grade than ever.

In the day of low-grade gasoline, high quality motor oil is becoming more and more important for the successful lubrication of the automobile motor, according to L. H. Johnson of the Panama Lubricants Company, distributors of Pennzoils. Improperly vaporized gasoline is bound to get into the crank case and thin the body of the lubricating oil. The best protection against this lies in the use of an oil whose body under high temperatures will best form a piston seal and shut off the combustion chamber from the crank case below.

MORE OF THAT MYSTERY.

Mr. Frank C. Riggs, western division manager of the Willys-Overland Pacific Company, paid a brief visit to Mr. E. B. Wilson, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the same company, last week. These gentlemen held a lengthy consultation relative to some important local announcements the big Overland factory was going to make in the near future.

Mr. Riggs gave out the following statement:

"As much as I regret the fact, I am unable, at the present time, to give even a brief resume of the big and potential plans soon to be announced.

SOMETHING BIG.

"However," continued Mr. Riggs, "I can say this—everyone fortunate enough to be connected with the Willys-Overland sales organization on the Pacific Coast—be they dealers, subdealers or agents—will make more money during the next twelve months than ever before in a like period. The reason for this will be that, while the profit on each individual car will be less, the aggregate sales will be greatly in advance of anything heretofore realized in our manufacturing history.

"We will have something soon to announce in automobile construction that will be absolutely new to the automobile world, and Mr. Wilson and myself are being daily besieged by dealers in all parts of Southern California relative to contracting for our new line. Of course, it is impossible at present to make any new agency connections, as we are not prepared to present our new sales contracts. Suffice it to say that personal attention will be given every bona fide inquiry we receive in the next few days relative to same."

FULFILLS YEAR-OLD PROMISE.

It all began a year ago, when Miss Miriam Wills, pretty Orpheum star, missed her train in San Bernardino and, after a wild dash over desert sands across the California line, finally caught her train, a Buick making the run for her.

"I'll never be satisfied until I own one of these Buicks myself," she said then, and she meant it, for when she returned to California one of the first things she did was to buy a new Buick roadster.

Ever since her experience in catching a train in a Buick time tables have lost their terrors for her, so when she had to come to Los Angeles for her engagement at the Orpheum, she drove down in her Buick in the exact time of fifteen hours and five minutes, within one hour of the fast train's time, and she says that she would have beaten the train if it wasn't for a horrid old constable who stopped her and took her number and acted generally disagreeable, and scared her so that she was afraid to step on the throttle for a couple of hours afterward.

Times surely do change. Not so many years ago womenfolks were willing for the men to do the driving, but nowadays they do not think anything of having breakfast in San Francisco and dinner in Los Angeles, and doing every bit of the driving themselves. It looks as though they must have these modern automobiles down to a pretty fine point, doesn't it?

SAYS MEAN THINGS OF ROADS.

Late summer tourists, who are arriving in Los Angeles after making the trip from the East over the Lincoln Highway, cannot be said to be loud in their praise for this route of travel. In fact, the most of them are loud in denunciation of it, and declare that the country's best-known transcontinental road is a disgrace. Sidney R. Grant of Patten, Me., reached here a few days ago, and immediately joined with others in saying unkind things relative to this road.

Mr. Patten left Patten, which is 150 miles north of Bangor, Me., with the intention of following the Lincoln Highway across the continent. But as he reached farther western points the condition of the road became so bad that he was advised in a number of instances to make long detours. Some of these detours could not be called good roads, but, he says, they proved better than the main highway was described as being.

Mr. Patten made the entire drive of more than 5000 miles in a Chandler touring car. He was advised to avoid the Lincoln Highway section that passes through Cheyenne, Wyo., and pass through Laramie instead. In crossing the desert in Utah Mr. Grant ran into a terrific waterspout. Water came down in such torrents that the desert became a huge shallow lake. The Chandler had previously proved its ability to negotiate mountain grades and desert sands, and it did not fail when it was necessary to navigate the desert lake. At times the heat was almost unbearable, and many tourists are seeking shelter during the day and doing all their driving at night, when it is slightly cooler.

TRAILERS AN ADVANTAGE.

Complete demoralization of transportation facilities has been prevented by the inauguration of truck service to every point in Southern California. Every available truck in Southern California has been pressed into service to help relieve the transportation tie-up.

In order to increase the capacities of their trucks to the highest point hundreds of truck operators have added trailers to their equipment, reports Mr. Bennett, general manager of the Utility Trailer Sales Company. He states that an average of forty to fifty calls per day have been made by truck operators for Utility Trailers and that the demand has been so great there is a likelihood of a serious trailer shortage within a week's time.

With the network of good roads reaching to every point in Southern California the use of large capacity trailers in connection with trucks has met with great success. According to Mr. Bennett there are few cases where trailers failed to make a saving of at least 50 per cent. in hauling costs. Every truck, he declares, is built with an excess of power. This excess power remains idle except when the truck is negotiating steep grades.

An Average Load of Fifteen Poles at 1000 Pounds Apiece

Is the kind of work that this heavy-duty Garford truck is getting away with every day. Considering that many of the roads traveled are composed mainly of sand, this is rather heavy work for anything short of a railway train to attempt.

MUST LEARN EARLY, SAYS BILL LANGE.

WILL TAKE YEARS TO INTRODUCE BASEBALL TO FRANCE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK (N. Y.) Aug. 25.—The French "poilu" can't seem to get the "hang" of American baseball, and the sport won't ever be the rage in France until the ten-cent ball and the ten-year-old kid are properly introduced, is the way Bill Lange, famous as a center-fielder with the Chicago Cubs, sizes up the situation.

Bill is back in the United States after a period of coaching soldier baseball teams in France for the Y.M.C.A., athletic department and he isn't optimistic about the future of the American national sport in Normandy and vicinity until the French youngsters get acquainted with the game.

"You've got to teach 'em baseball young or they won't get the enthusiasm for it that chartcterizes the grand old game in this country," explained Lange. "Now in America a kid from the time he can walk is tossing a ball around. He generally sleeps, eats and talks baseball during a certain stage of his childhood. The boy isn't awkward then and just naturally learns the game right.

"Now in France the situation is different. In many sections of the country they haven't ever seen a baseball game, and its a tough job to teach grown-up men the game. They figure that to learn the game they will have to make a show of themselves, and that doesn't appeal to them very much. And a Frenchman fears ridicule more than anything else. The only way that baseball may be made a lasting and popular sport in France is to introduce it through the French children."

PAUL MULLEN IS AFTER BIG TITLE.

Paul Mullen, physical instructor at the Robert Brunton Studios, has just issued a challenge for a fight to Elmo Lincoln, the husky lion-choker of the movies. Lincoln recently gained much prominence by challenging Jack Dempsey to a fight for the heavyweight title. But Mullen goes further and provides the place and all the accessories, leaving the time to the challenged. Mullen only does this out of the goodness of his heart as he wishes to see the motion picture industry well represented in a fight for the world's championship.

One of Those Horse-less Wagons,

Which was dug out of a junk pile at a Riverside garage recently and has since been doing valiant duty in the movies. It is a Ford, vintage of nobody knows when, and is still able to limp around on its own power. The motor number is 43.

PLANNED REUNION REFUSES TO WORK.

FLIGHT OF AUTO VETERANS FALLS THROUGH DUE TO A MISTAKE.

Had it not been for a misunderstanding Elmer Apperson and Elwood Haynes, the two men responsible for the first successful motor vehicle in America would have been reunited at Kokomo, Ind., recently. The occasion was an airplane flight. The automobile pioneers had been asked to participate in an event of general interest and both had agreed. The misunderstanding in the arrangements resulted in Mr. Apperson making the flight alone.

Every effort at the plant of Apperson Bros. Automobile Company now is being directed toward getting out the 1920 models, according to Harris M. Hanshue, manager of the factory branch here. Mr. Hanshue saw the new cars while at the factory and his declaration that they would excel anything previously built by this oldest automobile company in the country with the exception of the anniversary model, which will be continued, is being borne out.

The arrival of a shipment of sample Appersons of the new models is expected here with the clearing up of the freight situation.

ONCE CONSIDERED AUTOMOBILE.

Just how far advanced the motor car of today is over the early type of horseless carriages can be easily visualized by anyone who has the time and does not mind taking a little spin in a modern automobile to the studio of the Brentwood Film Corporation.

AN OLD-TIMER.

There, if the motorist is fortunate enough to gain admittance, may be seen one of Henry Ford's earliest products—a Ford which the film people proclaim as one of the first generation of Fords.

"Stand a present-day Ford alongside its ancient relative and the contrast is as pronounced as would be a comparison of a modern railway parlor car alongside a prairie schooner," is the way B. L. Graves, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Ford Motor Company, expressed it after inspecting the old two-cylinder Ford.

PILE OF JUNK.

The Brentwood people dug the car, the motor of which bears the numeral 43, out of a pile of junk in a Riverside garage after looking the country over for the oldest motor conveyance they could find. A little tinkering put it in good running order and it is doing an almost daily stunt now in comedy scenes.

It was used with telling effect in the Brentwood picture, "Better Times," featuring ZaSu Pitts.

T. T. SULLIVAN PAYS FLYING VISIT HERE.

INTRODUCES LATEST STEWART CREATION IN WAY OF SPARK PLUGS.

Combining business with pleasure, T. T. Sullivan, vice-president of the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation, arrived in Los Angeles, and is spending several weeks visiting the Southland and with Harry A. Ungar, manager, going over the business of the Stewart Products Service Station at 321 West Pico street.

In addition to taking in the sights of the Southland, Mr. Sullivan is introducing to Manager Ungar the new Stewart one-point plug, the latest of the Stewart products. The plug, according to Mr. Sullivan, is one of the best on the market. Before allowed to leave the factory it is subject to an air pressure test of 110 pounds and then is submerged in oil and if the least air bubble is seen the plug is discarded. Similar tests made with fifty other well-known plugs, according to Mr. Sullivan, showed that only five were able to stand the test.

"Business in California," Mr. Sullivan says, "is wonderful. The magnificent boulevards and the inspiring scenery within easy riding distance of the big cities, make this State the greatest automobile State in the country. Although the business here is almost unbelievable, there seems to be no end of the automobile possibilities in the State."

AUTOS SELECTED TO DELIVER MAIL.

SPEEDY RUNS MADE OVER DESERT HIGHWAYS AND THROUGH SAND.

That Uncle Sam does not propose to allow the present railway tie-up to interfere with mail service is indicated by the contract which the Postal Department signed last week with the Owens Valley Transportation Company for the delivery of mail through the desert towns across the Mojave and through Owens Valley as far as Bishop.

In order to comply with the rigid requirements in the delivery of fast mail, an Essex car was selected by the Transportation Company for this special service.

Last Wednesday, Fred Jobes of the Transportation Company made his first trip from Los Angeles delivering mail to Saugus, Palmdale, Lancaster, Willow Springs, Mojave, Little Lake, Olanche, Lone Pine, Independence, Big Pine and Bishop.

FEW CHANGES IN LATEST ARRIVAL.

AIRPLANE CARBURETOR DESIGNED TO FUNCTION WITHOUT ADJUSTMENT.

The coming of the new Standard eight, combining all of the features of the old models, with a number of improvements that come only as a result of the last year's delving of scientific men, was announced this week by C. P. Vauclain, president of the Standard Steel Automotive Corporation, distributors for the Standard eight cars in Southern California.

NO RADICAL CHANGES.

While adding greatly to the power and serviceability of the car, according to Mr. Vauclain, the new models, which are due to arrive shortly in Los Angeles, will not mean any radical change in the popular Standard eight. The models of the Standard eight which have been in vogue for the past year, according to Mr. Vauclain, have given such service and have been so popular with the owners that radical changes were found unnecessary.

The new motor will have the Dixie airplane magneto and will also be equipped with the Atwater-Kent ignition system. The new aviation carburetor will also be a new feature on the car. It was built and used on airplanes and designed so that it would be unnecessary to make carburetor adjustments with changes of altitude in the plane. Installed in the Standard eight it will make tinkering with the carburetor on trips around the California mountains and with varying altitudes unnecessary. A slight change will be made in the front lines of the car, but the side and rear lines will remain the same.

The new car, according to Mr. Vauclain, will still have the greatest ratio of power to the pound of weight of any car on the market. With its ability to be geared up it will still be able to save 200 to 300 revolutions of the motor, making 2,000,000 revolutions saved in 10,000 miles, and materially increasing the life of the car.

How Miller Cords Outran 21 Prominent Makes

A Heroic Tire Contest on 17 Packard 'Buses Going 78,000 Miles a Month

Here is the most convincing proof of a tire's supremacy that has ever been submitted to the public. It comes from the private tests of one of the the largest users of tires in the world—the Eldorado Stage Company, Los Angeles, Cal. It meant a huge sum of money to them to establish which tire carries a heavy load lightly and runs the farthest.

Twenty-two leading makes of tires were tested on the Eldorado's seventeen 12-passenger Packards. They travel an average of 153 miles daily—a combined distance of 936,000 miles a year. That's more than 37 times around the world.

Uniform Mileage Won for the Miller

This is the "Service De Luxe" for which Miller Tires competed and won. Their victory over 21 other prominent makes of tires was based—not on exceptional mileage of a single casing—but on long distance uniformity, tire after tire.

Parlor Car Comfort

Once the burro was the only transportation where today this grand fleet carries thousands of passengers between Los Angeles, Bakersfield and Taft. They make this trip in parlor car comfort—as you, too, can travel in your own car when equipped with buoyant Miller Cords.

All Miller Tires are uniform because their workmanship is uniform. The Eldorado tests have re-affirmed it. Call up or drive up and see these championship tires. You will also like the service we give to tire buyers.

One of the Finest Drives in the South—and Seldom Taken.

Not long ago the Dodge car No. 300,000 went on an exploration trip to the top of Palomar Mountain. Good roads were encountered most of the way and the scenery and historical interest of the place are said to surpass anything in the locality.

NOVELTY IN MOTOR TRIPS.

Palomar Mountain, North of Pala, is a Scenic Drive of Interest.

Just how as huge an affair as Palomar Mountain has remained so distinctly in the background in these days of motor travel everywhere is something hard to figure out. East and north of the little town of Pala it raises its vast bulk a mile into the air and more. Its summit is a sort of tableland, twenty-five miles long and from six to ten miles wide—not a smooth mesa by any means, but cut with low ridges, alternating with grassy valleys, and covered with the noblest growth of trees that can be found in the length and breadth of Southern California. White oak, cedar, fir, pine and spruce grow on Palomar's summit in wonderful profusion.

The open fields are mostly breaks of giant ferns, six to eight feet in height. The average winter precipitation on Palomar's summit is sixty inches, and the deep, rich soil combines with this heavy rainfall to create a growth of every sort of a tropical luxuriance. If you are a lover of trees, you will find more to attract you on Palomar's summit than anywhere else south of the Tehachepi.

NOT DIFFICULT.

No one who has ever made the trip to Big Bear would find the trip to Palomar difficult. It is just 135 miles from Los Angeles to the Palomar Mountain Hotel. The road to follow is the inland route to San Diego, out by way of Riverside, Box Springs grade, Perris, Elsinore and Temecula. Just beyond the town of Temecula you leave the pavement and follow the Pala grade to the quaint little town of Pala, where the Warner's ranch Indians, evicted from their native home some twenty years ago, now live, and where the little mission church, built 100 years ago, still serves as chapel.

Pala was not a full-fledged mission, but an "asistencia," built to help the work of San Luis Rey mission, and to carry the gospel to the wilder mountain Indians who came seldom to San Luis Rey. Alone of all the mission structures, it boasts a bell tower, a graceful "campanile" that somehow lends a foreign touch to the little town that not even the rows of "portable" houses which the government supplied for the Pala Indians can quite dispel.

OLD RELICS.

Father Triana, who presides at the Pala church, can tell you much of interest about the history of the church and show you many interesting relics as well. Among them is the riding coat of Senora Pio Pico, wife of the last of the Mexican Governors of California. Pio Pico paid 100 cows for the coat, so Father Triana will tell you, and the silks of its wonderful embroidery are as brilliant with color today as they were when the coat was made. The little silken riding gauntlets, embroidered also to match, and lined with lavender silk, are with the coat, too. With them hang altar cloths and vestments, some two centuries old, woven in the looms of old Spain.

Palomar Mountain contributed to the building of Pala. The great hand-hewn beams of the roof are of Palomar fir and pine, shaped where they were felled and dragged with infinite labor to the mission site.

HIGH IN AIR.

East from Pala, a fine dirt road winds along the San Luis Rey to a point seven miles east, where the road to Palomar Mountain branches to the left. Here a twelve-mile grade begins that ends at the little postoffice of Nellie, 5500 feet in the air. The grades on Palomar Mountain road do not exceed 17 per cent., and it is not a more difficult road to drive than Waterman Canyon. There is much less traffic on the road, which is a factor that will be appreciated by most motorists. The lower reaches of the road climb through low, sunburned greasewood, or through little open meadows. Not until you are almost to the top do you find the slightest hint of the trees that are the wonder of Palomar's summit.

The famous Dodge car No. 300,000, which conducted the exploring trip up Paloma at Fred Albertson's direction, did not find the slightest difficulty on the long grade. The average car would do well to carry a canteen of water along, for there is no water for the steepest six miles of the grade, but 300,000 carried no auxiliary water supply and did not need it. It is the sort of a road that a Dodge delights in. Dr. Milton Bailey, who is the proprietor of the Palomar Mountain Hotel on the summit, uses a Dodge car on his frequent trips between the resort and San Diego, and has climbed the grade more than 100 times in his car.

When the top of Palomar is reached, the road winds between giant trees that alternate with open fields of huge ferns. The south side of Palomar is very steep, and the road follows for miles along the rim of the mountain. A marvelous view lies below, a view that on a clear day shows San Diego and the Coronado Islands as the limit of vision to the southwest, while in the far southeast the tumbled blue peaks of the Cocopahs are visible countless miles beyond the Mexican border. In between lies a lifesize contour map of most of San Diego county.

PLAN NEW ROAD.

The United States forest service in co-operation with the county of San Diego is about to begin work on a new road to the top of Palomar. It will climb the east side of Palomar, starting from a point in the valley in which Warner's Hot Springs is located. It will climb to the summit with grades that in no place will exceed 6 per cent. When it is completed there can be no doubt that Palomar Mountain will attract scores of motorists from all over Southern California where it now attracts one. But with the present road, the trip is one of the most worth while to be found in Southern California, and the motorist with camp outfit and two days to spare cannot find a more delightful place for an outing.

MORE SPEED WITH PNEUMATIC TIRES.

LIGHT TRUCK WORK GREATLY AIDED BY CUSHION EQUIPMENT.

The remarkable added efficiency that is given a motor truck through the use of pneumatic cord tires instead of solids is well illustrated by the experience of C. W. Viall of 467 Arrowhead avenue, San Bernardino. Mr. Viall operates a daily auto express between San Bernardino and Los Angeles, as well as making regular trips into the San Bernardino Mountains with freight for the various mountain resorts, and his two Commerce trucks probably are called upon to cover as much mileage in the course of a month as any trucks in Southern California.

FAST TIME.

"Both of my two-ton Commerce trucks are equipped with pneumatic cord tires," said Viall last week. "With a full load, they can cover the distance between San Bernardino and Los Angeles in two and one-half hours. The trip back, because it is uphill all the way takes somewhat longer, from three and one-fourth to three and one-half hours as a rule.

"With a solid-tired truck, the run over this same route cannot be made in less than four to five hours as a regular thing. It would, of course, be possible to drive it faster than that, but you wouldn't have much truck left at the end of a month or so. No matter how well a truck is made, speed on solid tires is extremely destructive.

TOURING CAR SPEED.

"Equipped as my Commerce trucks are with the big pneumatic cords, they can make the run at almost touring car speed with no more wear on the truck than a touring car would experience in going the same distance. The trucks require less gasoline on the pneumatics, and the tires deliver from 15,000 to 20,000 miles and more, in spite of the fact that many of my mountain trips impose severe wear on the tires."

MARINE CORPS IN THE MOTOR MARKET.

Uncle Sam's Marine Corps think so much of the 1200 Hudson super-sixes which they already have in service that during the month of July, they purchased fifty-six additional Hudsons, thirty of which will be used in the East, twenty on the Pacific Coast and the balance to China, Philippine Islands, Guam, Honolulu and Japan, according to Maj. J. C. Fegan, U.S.M.C., in charge of the recruiting station in the Central Building, Sixth and Main streets, of this city.

ANOTHER LINK IN HIGHWAY FINISHED.

One more link in the Coast highway between Los Angeles and San Francisco has been forged. It no longer is necessary for motorists to make the long detour near King City.

A party of tourists reported to H. C. McVey, the Oakland dealer, a few days ago that as they were returning from San Francisco the barricades that have prevented the use of the highway for many months, or during the progress of the paving work, were removed and their Oakland was one of the first cars over the new pavement.

BY PROBABLY the most sensational performance ever witnessed in any road race, the ROAMER again captured most of the honors at the Elgin 300-mile road classic.

Roscoe Sarles in his ROAMER SPECIAL captured second place against a big field of prominent drivers with speedy cars, and Hitke in his ROAMER, gained third honors in the race.

INCREASING TIRE MILEAGE.

Dealers in tires are ready at any time to tell what not to do with tires, to prevent any harm coming to them, according to F. H. Osler, Racine Tire distributor, but many of them fail to tell just what should be done in the preservation of the life of a tire.

To give tire users just some idea of what should be done to preserve the tire, Mr. Osler has issued the following admonitions to tire users.

GO SLOW.

Drive moderately. Speed is not essential and speedy driving over rough roads is a terrific strain on tires. Speed on boulevards causes the tires to heat and shortens the life of the tire.

Find the proper air pressure for the tires, and keep them inflated to that point. Underinflated tires soon become worthless.

Drive carefully into parking spaces. Careless driving ruins the tires by running them against the pavement, cutting them and causing weak spots.

PROPER INFLATION.

Inflate tires in the morning. At that time the tires are cool. Later in the day or after heavy traveling, the tires become heated and if inflated, lose their shape and easily develop faults.

Inspect the wheels to see that they run true. Wheels out of true quickly ruin a tire. If tires do not appear to be giving the service take them to a tire shop and have them inspected. Faulty tires should be immediately turned in for adjustment. If the fault is the wheels or lack of care, this can be explained and remedied before the tires are useless.

Avoid short brake stops. Short stops by use of breaks reader a tire useless. Stop by means of the throttle rather than the break.

In descending sharp grades use intermediate or low speed rather than brakes. The low speed will control the speed of the machine and will not cause the wheels to grate along the road.

By following out the simple rules of caring for a tire, many miles can be added to its life.

EVERYONE TALKING OF GOODYEAR MOVE.

THOSE AFFECTED DELIGHTED AT CHANCE TO LOCATE HERE.

"Everybody in Akron is talking about Goodyear coming to Los Angeles," is the word brought back to Los Angeles by R. O. Jackson of the Rubber City Clearing House Company, who negotiated the largest purchases on his month's visit East ever made by the company.

"Not only is all of Akron buzzing with the talk about the location in Los Angeles of the Goodyear plant, but so also are other larger cities, including New York," he said upon his return last week. "The impression one gains from the talk heard is that from the executives on down all who will be identified with the project here are tickled to death at the opportunity to locate in Southern California."

Notwithstanding the vexing labor conditions East, tire factories are working at top speed to catch up on orders which fell behind all through the war period and afterwards. Despite this condition the Rubber City man was able to contract for an enormous quantity of tires from leading manufacturers. These will be released in weekly carlots, arrival of which will begin at once.

Even Some Czecho-Slovak Veterans

Showed a decided interest in the Mitchell victory six on its return trip from San Diego, and finally one of 'em announced, in Czecho talk, that they would like to take a ride in it. They were all loaded into the machine and taken for a drive around Camp Kearny. As the car hit forty-five miles an hour, one of the passengers burst forth with all he knew of the English language, "This is the life!"

LEARNING ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

American slang when articulated by an alien tongue often, as countless Americans who are just back from overseas will attest, carries an inflection which makes the phrase all but meaningless. There is one bit of American slang, however, which peoples of many nations have appropriated to express their joy upon occasions which warrant such expression.

RECORD SMASHING.

Such an occasion recently was provided at Camp Kearny, when the record-smashing Mitchell victory six returned south after establishing the new mark of 3 hours and 24 minutes for the San Diego-Los Angeles run.

Thousands of motor fans who were acquainted with the Mitchell's performance greeted its return south. A crowd gathered quickly wherever and whenever the car was brought to a stop. This was true at Camp Kearny, and among those who crowded about the car were a number of Czecho-Slovak veterans.

"Bill" Williams, wholesale manager of the Security Motor Corporation, tried to translate for them the Yosemite economy run and Catalina Island records lettered on the body and hood of the Mitchell, but they apparently did not understand.

"Jump in," Williams said, determined to make them appreciate what the Mitchell could do, and they jumped.

UNDERSTOOD IT.

"That's funny," Williams remarked, to no one in particular, "they seemed to understand that all right." Then he took them for a spin, hitting it up around the forty-five-mile-an-hour mark.

About the time he was making a turn to head back into Camp Kearny a remark dropped by a Czecho veteran at "Bill's" elbow all but made him steer into a ditch.

"What'd you say?" Williams gasped.

"Some boat," was the reply. Then another Czecho broke loose and, as if by prearrangement, the entire crew which had climbed into the Mitchell chorused "This is the life."

Back in camp Williams was telling a major who had been overseas about the incident. "You know," he said, "I didn't think those birds could talk English, but they fooled me."

BLACK TREAD CORDS REAL IMPROVEMENT.

CANTON CORDS HAVE ADDED BIG FACTORS IN TOUGHNESS AND RESILIENCY.

Excelling even the quality of the former article, according to Howard S. Reed, successor to B. F. Wade Tire and Rubber Company, city distributors of Canta cord tires, are the new black tread Canton cords, which have just arrived in Los Angeles.

To be able to present the new tire to the public just as early as eastern distributors, a number of the tires were shipped to Los Angeles by express. They arrived in time to be placed on sale simultaneously with the introduction of the new tire in the East.

The new Canton cord tire with the black tread, instead of the white tread that was on the former tires, is even better in quality, according to Mr. Reed. Recent new changes in method of manufacture have enabled the Canton cord manufacturers to put into the new black tread tire added toughness, resiliency and durability.

So great has been the demand for the new tire that scarcely had they been placed in the racks when they were gone. With heavy demands both from business institutions that operate a fleet of trucks and autos and from private car owners the express lines are kept busy, Mr. Reed says, supplying Canton cords to Southern California. Another express shipment should arrive at the local distribution shop within the next few weeks.

AUTOMOBILES ARE PROSPERITY GUAGE.

The prosperity of a city is reflected in its motor cars. The rundown, moribund town has vehicular equipage entirely in keeping. On the other hand the alive, thriving community gets around with a snap in autos that look like they were regarded as an asset, not a liability.

This, at least, is the observance of George R. Bentel of the Bentel Shops. And he adds that Los Angeles is becoming more prosperous.

"Things are picking up rapidly in Los Angeles," he said. "We are certain of that from the orders we are receiving for the painting up and fixing over of cars. This does not apply alone to the passenger vehicle. The owner of the truck which is used in his business is awakening to the fact that it is not the best sort of an advertisement to have the vehicle's appearance telling a story of hard luck. The brightly-painted, shining truck is not only a good carrier—it is a good booster."

DARK CLOUD SHOWS CHEERING LINING.

MOTOR CARS SAVING THE DAY FOR BUSINESS MEN DURING CRISIS.

Sherman was not the only man who was right. Ben Franklin, or whoever it was that remarked about dark clouds with silver linings, was right forty ways, according to the sales force at Davidson, House & Meyer, Cole aero eight distributors.

SILVER LINING.

"The dark cloud in this instance is the street railway, interurban and railroad strike," H. L. Perkins, sales manager, remarked last week, "and the silver lining part comes in with the manner in which Cole eights have stepped into the breach to help relieve the worries of at least several business men of the city, who, strike or no strike, found they had to provide themselves with a sure, swift means of transportation.

ONE BAD FEATURE.

"There's one bad feature about conditions, though," he added, "and that is that the car shortage situation is made worse by the fact that what cars have been shipped are now tied up in the congestion of freight, which is fast reaching the proportions of a jam. We regard it as fortunate that we had foresight enough to get a supply of Coles on the floor here for our recent opening that have served to afford prospective owners a choice of several attractive models."

CAR "NOISES" CAN BE EASILY STOPPED.

ATTENTION TO WINDSHIELDS, FENDERS AND SPOKES IS NECESSARY.

"Noisy" automobiles are the result of neglect of car owners, rather than the result of defects in the cars.

Cars are not turned out of the factory in a condition which allows them to rattle and clatter at the slightest vibration, and a little attention to the cars will result in keeping them free from the very usual "noises" that accompany the travelling of a car, according to S. Mennice, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Western Auto Supply Agency.

GIVE IT ATTENTION.

Most owners are very neglectful of the body of the car, while paying strict attention to the motor, and thus cause themselves the inconvenience and embarrassment of hearing rattles on their cars. The body, while it must have a little attention, according to Mr. Mennice, does not need much time, and if fenders, spokes and windshields are watched noises can be avoided.

"Too little attention is given to the spokes of the wheel, while in reality they demand considerable attention. Even the wheels of the most expensive cars, after considerable wear, due evry often to friction and now and then to shrinkage in the wood, become loose. The loose spokes not only cause unpleasant noises but do considerable damage to the wheel and tire if not repaired. With loose spokes the wheels are thrown out of true and the tires become ruined.

SPOKE-TITE

"A little attention given to the spokes when they first become loose and much trouble can be avoided. Spoke-tite has been prepared especially for loose spokes. It is a liquid treatment for the spokes which causes the wood, which has shrunken, to expand to its proper size. Application of it to the spoke will make the spoke quickly resume its original tightness. Wheels once treated with Spoke-tite never loosen and once tightened the squeaks soon disappear. In addition the wheels and tires are guarded against damage which might come as a result of loose spokes."

HANDBALL CHART IS KICKED AROUND.

The handball chart at the Los Angeles Athletic Club has undergone some radical changes recently. Babe Giffin jumped into the championship class yesterday by defeating Clarence Bean, who was in that class, by the scores of 21-14, 7-21, 21-11. Jean Haskell stepped up a notch in class B when he mauled George Retzer, 21-7, 21-17. W. Harrington is contemplating something great in competition as he challenged Babe Doyle to an early set-to. A. J. Dix, in class D, did the same on the E class list.

RESERVE POWER IS VITAL NECESSITY.

PERFECTION IN AIRPLANE MOTORS ALONG THIS LINE WILL ADVANCE GAME.

"A recent quotation from a technical magazine touched pointedly on the greatest weakness of the modern airplane—the lack of reserve power in the motor. Until an airplane motor is developed that has an ample margin of power and which does not have to operate at full throttle for a long period of time, the airplane will not have achieved reliability approaching that of the modern automobile," declares Walter H. Fisher, Haynes distributor for Southern California.

"For somewhat the same reasons, perhaps, the immense popularity of the multi-cylinder motor can be accounted for. Abundant reserve power unquestionably increases the longevity of a motor. It is the periods when a motor is laboring to the utmost that cause excessive wear and strain. The motor that has a sufficient reserve of power to perform all the tasks that it is called upon for easily and without excessive effort is the motor that is apt to be the longest-lived.

"The Haynes twelve-cylinder motor furnishes a good example of a motor with this ample reserve power. Its overhead valve construction and the overlapping power of the twelve cylinders, combined with the relatively light weight of the car, result in a power supply that is more than ample to meet any emergency. As a consequence, the Haynes twelve-cylinder has proved in the years in which it has been in service to possess extraordinary qualities of longevity. The man who has the physical strength to perform his work easily can keep it up year after year. In similar fashion, the motor that has ample power to do the work required of it is less apt to wear out."

THIS DRIVER CAN'T KICK ON MILEAGE.

How long should a tire wear? Some tires run 5000 miles, some 10,000, some 20,000, depending largely on the care with which they are used. Occasionally a set of tires with careful driving renders service away beyond what the best of tires are ever asked to deliver.

For instance, S. F. Webster of Fort Collins, Colo., has just removed from his Franklin roadster, bought in 1915, two Goodyear rear tires that have served him ever since the car was purchased, with 52,000 miles to their credit. The two front Goodyears are still on the wheels rendering good service, apparently good for several more thousands of miles.

FARMERS LEAD AS MOTOR TRUCK USERS.

"Farmers use more trucks than any other single industry in the world," says R. H. Spear, president of the All-American Truck Company, Chicago, and he cites government statistics which show that 78,789 motor trucks are used by farmers as against 65,298 by manufacturers and 64,486 by retailers.

"This year, more than ever before," he declares, "those farmers who do not use trucks are carefully weighing the advisability of adding a truck to their farm transportation facilities. There are three methods by which the farmer may avail himself of motor trucks. The first, and best, is for the farmer to own and operate his own truck, thus solving his transportation problems and perhaps those of some of his neighbors. Another method is to make use of the truck owned and operated by some man in town who does a draying business that extends into the country. The third method is to patronize the truck express transportation lines operating between the leading market towns omobile "do's" and "don'ts" all right in their way, but some car men do not put much in some of them.

instance, C. W. McFadden of rsfield says that the advice to owners to keep grease and oil off their tires is a joke in as it applies to cars in cer- parts of Kern county.

ALL A JOKE.

, if the fellows around the fields who use cars tried to fol- out that advice they'd have to a hostler around with them put him to work at every stop," commented in a letter to H. H. son, sales manager of the department of Hawley, King Co., Globe tire distributors.

What men in the oil fields want have to have are tires that stand up best and resist the lizing effect oil usually has on Whether it is because of the fact that they are hand-made, have wrapped treads, or are made by the single-cure process, or what, the fact is that Globe tires, notwithstanding they get smeared with much grease and oil, appear to suffer little, even after they have seen long service in this district."

DON'T SHOW USE.

The Kern County Motor Company, with which McFadden is identified, wrote Anderson, telling of the unusual performance of a set of Globe tires on an Oldsmobile, purchased in Los Angeles from J. W. Leavitt & Co., the Oldsmobile agency in Los Angeles.

Tires and car, after better than 15,000 miles around the Kern oil fields, showed hardly a scratch after being cleaned up. But for the mileage recorded on the speedometer one could more easily believe that the car and tires had not covered more than a few hundred miles, the letter stated.

EMERGENCY BRAKE NOT PROPER TITLE.

EQUAL EASE IN OPERATING BOTH SYSTEMS ON THIS MACHINE.

There are two systems of brakes on every motor car, but on the average car the service brake gets 95 per cent. of the use. The emergency brake is just what its name implies, something that is used only in an occasion where the necessity of making a quick stop is so vital as to compel the driver to reach for it. Marmon engineers had different ideas in designing their braking system, however, and "hand" brake would be a better designation than "emergency" brake on the Marmon," declares E. E. Caister, manager for Al G. Faulkner, California distributor for the Marmon car.

ADDED SAFETY.

"From the standpoint of the safety of the user as well as for greater convenience, the Marmon engineers made the lever of the hand brake unusually long, and placed it in such a way that it is within the easiest sort of reach of the driver's hand. As a consequence the average Marmon user makes practically as much use of the hand brake as he does of the foot brake. The wear of braking is thus distributed between the two systems, which is considerably better practice than concentrating it practically all upon the service brake.

"Many Marmon users form the habit of using both the foot and hand brake at the same time, applying each lightly. This of course halves the wear upon either brake, and tends still further to prolong the good service of the braking system. It is really easier to do this, once the habit is formed, because the push you give on the foot-brake is counteracted by the pull on the hand brake.

LARGE BRAKES.

"Despite the fact that they lightened the Marmon car 1100 pounds, the Marmon engineers did not decrease the size of the braking surface. If you will notice, Marmon brake drums are unusually large. This, combined with the fact that the wear is distributed between the two braking systems, make the brakes unusually perfect in action and long wearing as well."

DRIVING ELECTRICS ON LENGTHY TRIPS.

There was a time when electric passenger cars, owing to energy limitation, were employed exclusively for city travel. And it is likely that the uninitiated public still think of the electric solely as an urban utility. Great changes in the electric passenger car have been perfected in the past few years.

No longer is its radius of travel restricted to urban or suburban territories. Storage batteries have been greatly improved, their capacities greatly increased, and, with improvements in equipment and methods of charging, they are replenished as rapidly as needed.

Just how far this type of car has advanced is cited by D. B. Rose, president of the Los Robles Electric Garage Company, distributors for the Milburn light electric. According to substantial facts, G. R. Beach, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Los Robles Electric Garage Company, drove a model 27-L Milburn recently from Pasadena to San Diego, a distance of 137 miles, taking a small boosting charge at Santa Ana and Oceanside; the time consumed ten hours.

RECEIVES TIRES IN SPITE OF STRIKE.

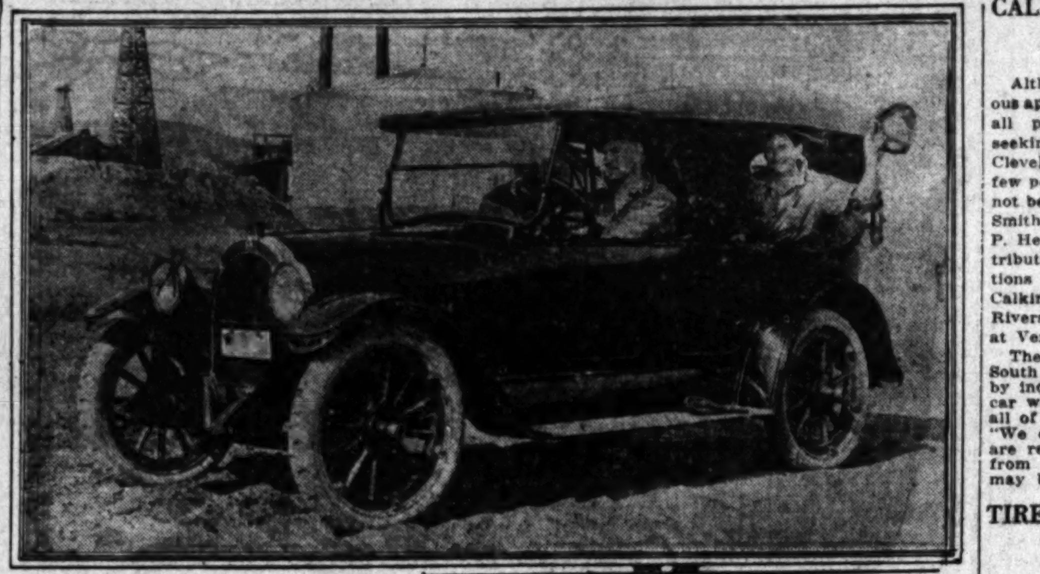
Determined to serve his patrons, strike or no strike, F. C. Osler, Racine distributor for Southern California and Arizona, has made arrangements to get tires into Los Angeles if the tires ever show up in any accessible part of California. With a car stalled at Caliente, Nev., Mr. Osler endeavored to make arrangements to get it as far as Barstow, Cal., where he had made arrangements for trucking the tires into Los Angeles. Should the strike continue, Mr. Osler will have shipments made by way of San Francisco and run trucks to the northern city to convey the tires into Los Angeles.

W. J. HARTMAN TO BE COAST AGENT.

The Advance Rubber Company, manufacturer of the Advance Top Notch tires, and which is opening an office in Los Angeles as its western headquarters, announces the appointment of W. J. Hartman as its general manager for the Coast.

Mr. Hartman is well known in the tire and automobile trades throughout the West and his appointment is heralded by his large following and friends here.

Mr. Hartman was connected with the Advance Rubber Company in its factory for a number of years and has watched the Advance Rubber Company advance from its infancy to the institution it is known to be today.



Touring Around the Oil Fields

Is usually a pretty severe test on cars and tires alike, but the latest model Oldsmobile and its Globe wrapped-tread tire equipment seem to be standing up under the strain. Oil is one of the hardest things that tires have to buck, but the Globe tires are delivering the goods in this oil country.

LOTS OF STRING TO MAKE CORD TIRES.

"How many feet of cord in my tire, a 34x4?" was one of the questions received by mail last week at the factory of the Carlisle Cord Tire Company.

Tire users who have heard about or who are using this new type of cord casing, are intensely interested to know how a machine, which is not possessed of human skill and intelligence, can receive cotton cord from spools and turn it into a perfect tire. They cannot comprehend from description or picture. Those who go through the factory laugh at their own stupidity when they stand for half an hour and see how simply the feat is performed by this uncanny, but simple little machine.

When the query came about the length of giant cord in one tire, none of the factory office force could answer it off hand. H. P. Morgan, who has been associated with the development of the Carlisle cord tire machine for five years, was appealed to and explained that there are, in a Carlisle cord tire of that size, just 1350 feet of giant cord, and this cord has a tensile strength of 235 pounds pull.

A. J. TOBEY RETURNS FROM VISIT IN EAST.

A. J. Tobey, manager of the Western Auto Electric Company, returned this week from Murray, Iowa, where he has been spending a vacation of several weeks with relatives. Mr. Tobey made the trip from Iowa to California in his car. He made remarkable time, experiencing practically no trouble during the entire trip. He used on the trip a Willard battery which has already 25,000 miles to its credit. Because of its threaded rubber insulation, he says, even after its long life, it caused no trouble.

CALKINS TO HANDLE CARS AT VENTURA.

Although there have been numerous applications for subagencies from all parts of Southern California seeking representation of the new Cleveland car, there yet remain a few points in which the dealers have not been selected, according to D. P. Smith, general manager for the W. P. Herbert Company, Cleveland distributors. The most recent additions to the organization are Glenn Calkins, who will handle the line in Riverside, and Claude C. Needham at Ventura.

The Herbert headquarters at 1047 South Olive street are besieged daily by inquiries to determine when the car will arrive in Los Angeles. To all of these it is necessary to reply, "We don't know." Three carloads are reported to have been shipped from the factory, but where they may be is not known here.

TIRE USERS FAIL TO GET MILEAGE.

That standard makes of tires give less than one-half of the mileage that is in them, and that the reduced mileage is due directly to ignorance of tire users, is the belief of H. D. Warfield, manager of the Warfield Tire Service Company, 938 South Main street.

The tread of a tire, according to Mr. Warfield, is the first part of a tire to become worn. This is easily accounted for in the fact that to give comfort to the user of the car, it is necessary to make the tread of a rubber, which although it wears well, naturally becomes worn before the harder and tougher fabric and carcass of the tire becomes at all damaged. The discarding of a tire because the tread has become worn, or allowing it to wear through the fabric, is where tire users lose considerable money, according to Mr. Warfield.

There's a Touch of Tomorrow In All Cole Does Today

THOSE who think only in the present, live in the past. It's the touch of tomorrow in what is done today that identifies advancement.

To sense the trend of the future and be the first to give it tangible expression has been Cole's aim.

Season after season—year after year, his advanced creations in motor car design have forecast the styles of the future.

The Aero-Eight became instantly the forerunner of a new vogue. It established new standards of design and performance.

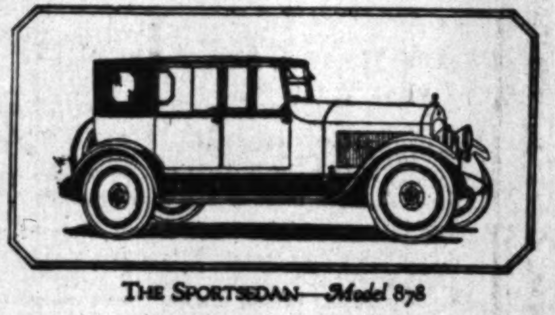
For ten years Cole had been laying the foundations for this epoch-making creation, devoting the last five years exclusively to the Eight.

He was one of the first two American manufacturers to build an eight-cylinder car—the first to apply to it the principles of aerotype engineering.

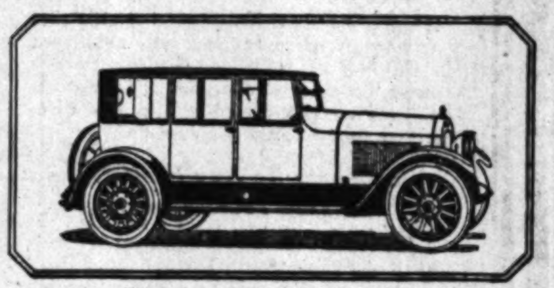
Satisfied only with that which others had not yet achieved, Cole has put a touch of tomorrow in all that he has done.

It is that which gives the Aero-Eight the prestige of advanced achievement. It is that which has given the Cole product its distinction from the very beginning.

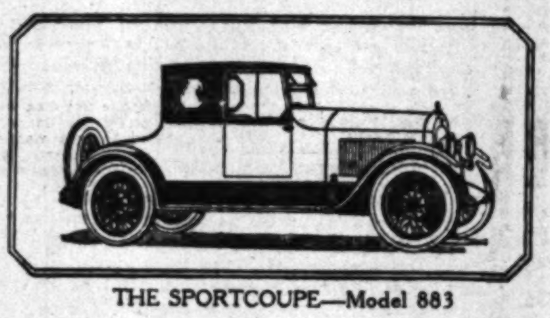
Latest Creations in All-Season Cars



THE SPORTSEDAN—Model 878



THE SPORTOSINE—Model 879



THE SPORTCOUPE—Model 883

SO it is that the new Aero-Eight All Season models again introduce striking innovations in motor car design.

They anticipate, as usual, the styles of the future and bring with their ownership a feeling of pride in the possession of that which others have not yet attained.

Original—even to their names—the Aero-Eight Sportsedan, Sportcoupé, Sportosine, Toursedan, Tourosine and Towncar are authoritative examples of advanced coach building.

They introduce flush panel construction—a new development in enclosed car design.

They eliminate permanently those features which in the past have so definitely restricted the use of enclosed equipages.

Their individuality of design, their pleasing harmony of color, the dignity and refinement of their appointments bear the hallmark of superior craftsmanship.

There's a touch of tomorrow in the new Aero-Eight All-Season Cars; a note of futurity that fortifies the confidence which the public has placed in Cole as the producer of advanced motor cars.

GARY WORM DRIVE MOTOR TRUCKS

TEST NO. 3

Simplicity

Skilled, experienced labor costs money. You don't want to increase your labor hire because of your truck investment. Before making your choice, take any truck driver in your employ and see whether he is able to correctly handle the truck to its best advantage.

Trouble Proof

Simplicity is the keynote of Gary construction. Every feature possible has been reduced to mechanical control As a demonstration will show, the actual operation of a Gary truck is extremely simple. On the road, the speed is mechanically regulated—there is absolutely no phase of operation to divert the operator's attention—nor require the services of a skilled mechanic. Any one can operate and maintain a Gary truck.

"Blowouts" A new Rubber compound that resists them

TWO years of road tests have demonstrated the Thermoid Crolide Compound Tire to be remarkably resistant to blowouts.

This result is not accidental. It is the Thermoid Chemists' answer to this most common of all tire weaknesses.

A new rubber compound

Crolide, the new substance developed in the Thermoid Laboratories is compounded with Up River Fine Para. It is blended not only with the rubber that goes into the tread, but with each layer of the rubber treated fabric.

One Thermoid Crolide Compound Tire will prove to you its resistance to the attacks of oil, water, heat and similar agencies which weaken tires and lead to blowouts. Guaranteed 6000 miles (Ford sizes 7500).

You can't pull the tread off a Thermoid Tire

STAGES TO HAVE UNION STATION.

Big Building Planned for Local Lines.

Waiting Rooms and Restaurant are Features.

Will Load Forty Stages at the Same Time.

The formal opening of the union stage depot at Fifth and South Los Angeles streets, which is scheduled to take place about September 15, will be an important event in the city's commercial and industrial life, for better than anything else, it shows what an important factor the automobile and the truck have become in interurban transportation.

GOOD ROADS HELP.

The paved highways of the State have made possible this remarkable development of automotive interurban transportation of passengers and freight as it is not known in any other part of the country, and it is further evident that this service will increase as more paved mileage is added to these highways.

The phenomenal growth of the stage line business has been without any centralized effort. Individuals and concerns in beginning operations selected points for offices and for embarking and discharging passengers that were as far as possible from congested traffic and still within easy reach of the business center of the city.

ORIGINAL.

With the congregation of several stage lines, the idea of a central depot with accommodations for several lines was conceived and a corporation known as the Union Stage Depot Company was formed. A lease was secured on the property with a sixty-foot frontage on East Fifth street and the southeast corner of South Los Angeles street.

The planning of the structure is original for it is the first of its kind to be devoted to so extensive a transportation business of this character in the United States. The magnitude of the enterprise may be appreciated when it is known that the plans provided for the loading of forty stages—four abreast—in the main entrance at the same time.

LOTS OF CLASS.

The wide main entrance is located on East Fifth street through which passengers enter and leave a waiting-room, twenty-seven feet wide and ninety feet long. Around this is a mezzanine where women may lounge in comfort while waiting for stages or friends. Couches, rockers, writing tables and potted plants are part of the scheme to make this feature attractive to women. Located on the west side will be the main ticket office with provisions for five ticket sellers, the depot manager's office and a dining-room. Over the main entrance and running the entire width of the Fifth-street front are the superintendent's office and offices for the stage lines operating out of the depot.

GANGWAYS.

The south end of the waiting-room, which leads to the loading and unloading platforms, will be divided into three gangways. One will be for long-distance passengers, the second for locals and the third for arriving passengers. Arriving cars will enter a wide entrance from Maple street and after discharging their passengers at the unloading platform will move forward to the local and long-distance sections and leave by way of the South Los Angeles-street exit for their destinations.

FOSTER CURRY TO VISIT ALL PARKS.

SEEKS IDEAS FOR BETTERING TOURIST ACCOMMODATIONS IN GREAT YOSEMITE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CAMP CURRY, Aug. 29.—Foster Curry, manager of Camp Curry, left the Yosemite Valley today in his new Cadillac on the first leg of a tour of the national parks of the United States.

"The public is just beginning to appreciate the rare beauties that have been preserved for them in our national parks," says Curry. "They are beginning to realize that when Uncle Sam believes in a place sufficiently to put his stamp of approval on it by making it a national park, that there must indeed be wonderful scenery included in the area.

"This year, nearly twice the number of people visited Yosemite than heretofore and all of the national parks are entering upon an era of unprecedented popularity and prosperity.

"Anticipating the need of further tourist accommodations in Yosemite, I am making this trip," says Curry, "to see what improvements have been made in our other national parks with a view toward getting new ideas for further improvement and extension of Camp Curry."

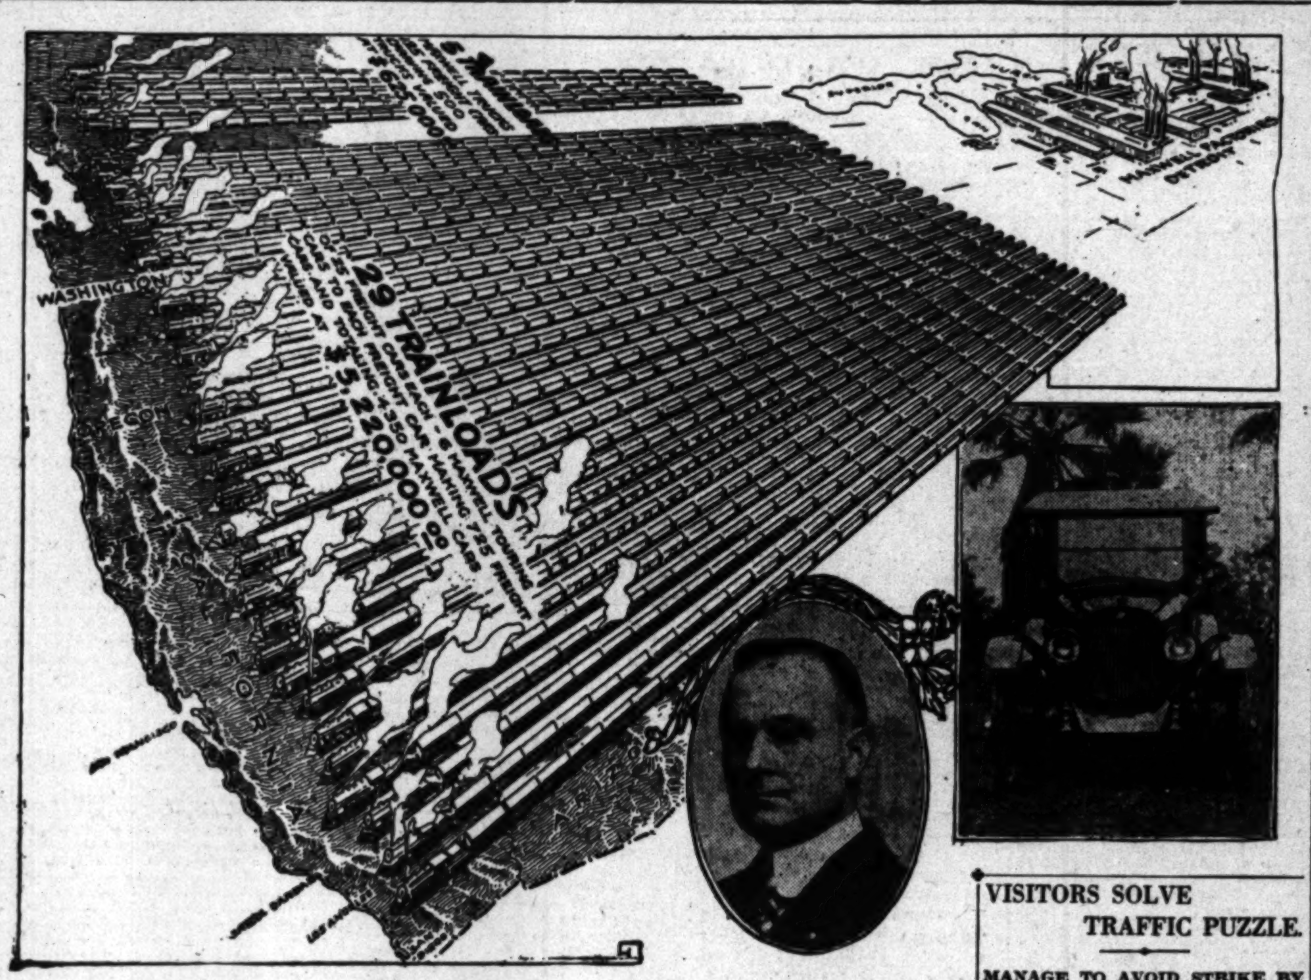
Curry will conclude his tour in Washington, D. C., where he expects to take up with the California delegation in Congress some of his plans for providing new and more adequate accommodations for the public in Yosemite.

Mrs. Foster Curry will accompany her husband on the trip

TIRE ADJUSTMENTS ALMOST UNKNOWN.

That automobile tire users are more than satisfied—that they are delighted—with the service given by Mason Cord Tires, is the belief of C. Fred Thompson, distributor for Mason tires, following a trip over his territory of Southern California and Arizona.

Thousands of Mason Cords and Mason Multi-Mile tires are seen in various parts of the Southern California and Arizona territory, according to Mr. Thompson, and everywhere that one of the tires is seen there is a contented user. Practically no adjustments are necessary on the tires as all give service better than is assured in any ordinary guarantee.



Just an Idea of the Maxwells that are Going to Hit the Coast Soon.

Sending automobiles across the continent by trainloads has been done before, but when you get into figures of thirty-four complete trainloads in cars it's rather large conversation even for the motor-car industry. But all these Maxwells are scheduled for the Coast during coming season. In inset are shown George Pierson, Pacific Coast representative of Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation, and newest post-war Maxwells.

YOSEMITE IS A FAVORITE.

More Visitors Enter the Park this Year Than Ever Before.

The Yosemite National Park, always a favorite destination of vacationists, has entertained this season the greatest number of visitors in its history, the attendance exceeding 47,000—this being nearly double that of any previous year.

Government records show that nearly 10,000 automobiles have entered the park during the spring and summer months, and this figure will be well passed long before the winter rain and snow close the roads to automobile travel.

With the coming of the autumn season, always a favored time for outings, travel is increasing, many parties of motorists arriving daily at the various hotels, camps and lodges scattered throughout the park. Some make their own camps, and some come laden to the guards, tonneau and running boards packed with equipment; others prefer to secure their equipment upon arrival in the valley, arrangements having been made providing for this service.

ALL SEASONS.

While in the valley it is summer, with a suggestion of approaching autumn, in the higher mountains there is still the freshness of spring, the brooks running full and meadows and hillsides bright with flowers. Still further, as one approaches the snow-capped summits of the Sierras, or the glacier on Mt. Lytell, perhaps, there is the chill of winter in the air, and one may indulge in a game of snow-balling.

CHOICE OF ROADS.

The greatest percentage of travel from Los Angeles and southern points is by way of Fresno, Madera, Raymond, Coarse Gold, Bissetts and Wawona. This road passes through the Mariposa grove of big trees, one of the most wonderful sights that California, or the world, has to offer, and which should be included in the itinerary of every visitor to the park. A colony of canvas and wooden bungalows is being built in the Mariposa grove, and will be in operation early next season. The dining-room has been completed, and refreshments are now being served to visitors entering or leaving the park by way of the grove.

It is recommended to motorists from Merced and other points north that they leave the pavement at Merced and continue over a good dirt road for forty miles to Mormon Bar. Eleven miles beyond Mormon Bar travelers will find the road sign pointing to Cedarbrook and Miami Lodge, and they will do well to follow this road rather than make the climb eastward over the Chowchilla Mountain.

It is suggested to visitors to the park who intend making the trip to Glacier Point that they do so on the way in. As a first view of the valley, the one from this famous vantage point cannot be surpassed, and by making Glacier Point the first objective a repetition of the climb up the mountain is avoided. Those desiring to remain overnight, in order to witness the sunset and sunrise across the high peaks of the Sierras, will find excellent accommodations at the Glacier Point Hotel.

DIFFERENT ROUTES.

To those desiring to leave the park by a different route, there is a choice of the Coulterville and Big Oak Flat roads. The old Coulterville road from the floor of the valley to Hazel Green is very steep, and for this reason the park officials consider it more advantageous to leave the valley over the Big Oak Flat road. Those wishing to go to Modesto or points north will do well to turn to the left at Crane Flat and follow the road signs leading to Hazel Green and Coulterville, thus enabling them to see Bower Cave on the outbound trip.

The Tioga road is still in very good condition, with the exception of a short stretch in the Ashpan Valley district. Although rough, this portion is entirely safe, as in the entire length of the road, from Yosemite to Lake Tahoe, and any experienced motorist familiar with mountain roads can negotiate the Tioga highway without difficulty. This road has experienced record travel this year, as the Yosemite-Tahoe trip has been a most popular one, and the Tuolumne Meadows has been a delightful destination of motor-campers. Tenaya Lake Lodge has been a favorite stopping place for travelers entering or leaving the park over the Tioga road.

WINTER TRAVEL.

The fact that Yosemite is a winter playground is becoming more and more widely known, and preparations are being made to entertain a goodly number of visitors during the period of ice and snow, when the park becomes a veritable fairyland. The Yosemite Valley Railroad brings the traveler to El Portal, the gateway to the valley, and from that point the journey is concluded by auto stage. This route is being used extensively at the present time by motorists who travel over the paved highway to Merced, and ship their cars from there to El Portal. Automobiles so shipped are taken up on flat cars attached to the passenger train, so the journey may be resumed at El Portal without the inconvenience of delay. This can be done at slight expense, and with a great saving of time and mountain mileage. The trip from El Portal to the camp center in the valley, a distance of fourteen miles, is made over a completed portion of the new $1,000,000 highway.

At Attention.

A young mother, the possessor of a very beautiful voice, as well as of two small sons, sent these boys one night to take a bath. Then, seating herself at the piano, for one hour she practiced the "Star Spangled Banner," which she had promised to sing at a Red Cross party the next day. When she went upstairs the boys were still in the tub. Asking why they were not in bed, the youngest indignantly replied: "How could we sit down and take a bath while you have been playing the 'Star Spangled Banner?'"—[Everybody's Magazine.

VISITORS SOLVE TRAFFIC PUZZLE.

MANAGE TO AVOID STRIKE BY RIDING HOME IN NEW CARS.

The traffic problem with which Los Angeles and all of Southern California is confronted at the present moment, with thousands of late summer visitors trying to get here and others here who are desirous of returning to their homes throughout the country, was most satisfactorily surmounted the past week by at least three visitors here.

Each of the trio, despairing of a speedy settlement of the street railway and the steam railroad strike, purchased a Los Angeles-made motor car, the Leach power plus six, and drove home in it.

The first purchase of a Leach car during the week was by a widely-known Los Angeles motor car enthusiast, J. J. Jenkins, to whom was delivered a specially finished Leach sportster.

The out-of-town buyers started in with the visit of P. J. Gruenberg, president of the Pacific Folding Box Company of San Francisco, who bought a Leach car after a demonstration run which lasted but half an hour.

Two El Pasoans completed the three purchases by out-of-town buyers. They were Harry Miller, a leading attorney of Texas, and R. W. Russell.

HUDSON SUPER SIX

Order Your Hudson Now For Later Delivery

Buyers Know the Advantages of Anticipating Their Wants With This the Largest Selling Fine Car Constantly for four years Super-Six sales have exceeded those of any other fine car.

Buyers have had to wait a month or more during the selling seasons before they could get delivery. On some models, at this writing, we are far behind orders. Yet factory production was never as large.

Thousands are driving less desirable cars that were accepted because they could not get delivery of a Hudson. Many frankly express their regret that they had not ordered a Hudson early enough to assure delivery in time to meet their needs.

Can There Be Any Hesitancy In Your Preference?

Four years have given universal recognition to the Super-Six. The patented principle in its motor ended destructive engine vibration and added 72% to the power without increased weight or size.

That motor was developed by Hudson and it is exclusively Hudson. In the present model are the refinements resulting from 60,000 cars in service.

And then there are its official records of the most trying tests. No other car ever so established itself.

Some, at first, may have doubted the value of such proofs as were made on the speedway and in trans-continental racing so far as they relate to the type of car that would meet ordinary service. But no one now questions the importance of those records.

The fastest mile for a stock chassis was not established as a mark for Hudson owners to aim at. Nor was the twenty-four hour record of 1819 miles set as something that should be attempted by every Super-Six.

Likewise, Hudson racing cars did their part to prove the very qualities most desirable in an automobile used for individual transportation. The one most essential quality in an automobile is its reliability. No one ever questions Hudson's right to first place in that particular.

So, Too, Is Its Style Equally Distinct

The boulevards of the great cities show what is most wanted in body lines and general equipment. Can you find more beautiful cars anywhere than are the Hudsons?

They set the vogue. Hudsons forecast the trend of motor car design. As a result a one or two year old Hudson has the same general lines as the current models of most other makes.

There can be no disappointment over the beauty of the Super-Six, regardless of the model you select.

The Wisdom of Buying Now

With these evidences is there any good reason why you should not now place your order for a Hudson?

You know the car you will get. It merits your implicit confidence.

Think of the thousands who this year have had to forego the pleasure of owning a Hudson, just because they put off ordering. Vacations planned to be taken in touring in a Super-Six had to be changed.

All the world is crying for automobiles. The demand can not soon be filled.

Hudson, as the largest selling fine car, must, as a matter of right, continue the first choice. Only those who place their orders in advance of their needs can be sure of getting the car they want.

Those were the good old days when the fielders had to work, as the writer personally can testify, and the pitchers tossed the ball to the batter so he could hit it. There was some brilliant work in the field, and no pitchers' battles, and the games were fully as interesting as they are now. As the record shows, there were times when the Reds came near to defeat, but it was not in the game played on August 31, 1869, with the Buckeyes, of Cincinnati, when the Reds piled up 103 runs against their opponents' 8!

There were only nine men on the Reds' team the year when they made this great record, the team having no substitutes. When a pitcher was not in the box he was working away in some other place. The members of the team were Harry and George Wrights, both pitchers, and whose names have gone down in baseball history, McVey, Sweazy, Brainard, Leonard, Allison, Waterman and Gould.

The scores presented speak eloquently of the development of baseball. The Reds of '69 averaged more than 42 runs a game, more than the present team averages in a week. Those were the days of the live ball, the absence of the curve, and many other of the things that have resulted in reducing the game to more of a science. Masks, mitts, fielders' gloves and breast protectors were unknown. Scoring was naturally more heavy in those days of the beginning of what is now the great national game.

There were some other strong teams in those days and the Cincinnati Reds' record was just as marvelous as though a team of recent years had accomplished such a feat. A few years later, in the early seventies, two other strong semi-professional teams made their appearance, the Syracuse Stars, and the Olympics, of Paterson, N. J. The Olympics produced the "Only Nolan," the inventor of the curved ball, so far as is known. The curved ball was an enigma to the western batters, and until their pitchers "caught on to it," Nolan had the other teams at his mercy. Later he became a policeman on the Paterson (N. J.) police force, and died within the last few years in that city.

36—Q-Kt3	RxQ ch
37—PxR	P-B5
38—K-R4	QxP ch
39—K-R5	Q-Kt4 mate.

a—Known as the slow Variation of the Ruy Lopez, wherein White's attack is not so vehement, but his grip is more lasting. 5, Castles is the usual move.

b—B-K2 is the accepted line of play, so as to prepare for castling in answer to Kt-Kt5 by White or the following move. The text move was made by Lasker with the intention of inducing his opponent to embark upon a campaign against the Black. Evidently the western champion had given considerable attention to this innovation.

c—Black did not care to risk the consequences of 8. . . KtxP, because of 9, KtxBP, bringing about a continuation similar to a well-known variation of the Two Knights Defense.

d—Black has lost a Pawn, to be sure, but has rid himself of the obnoxious White KB, and, at the same time, made sure of a free development for his own pieces.

e—Black thus drives away the hostile Knight with the gain of a "tempo," and also prepares for the advance, in due course of his KP.

f—White feared to play 16, Kt-K4 on account of 16 . . KtxKt; 17, PxKt, B—Kt5, attacking Queen and Rook simultaneously, although White could have guarded against booth threats with 18, Kt—Q2.

g—Clearly 18, KtxKt is out of the question, on account of PxP ch. There is no gainsaying the fact that White has obtained full compensation in return for the Pawn, which he invested at his seventh turn.

h—Regaining his Pawn with decisive advantage in position.

i—Splendidly played and paving the way for a speedy termination.

j—The Bishop is safe against capture by White's King, because RxP dis. ch, would not only recover the piece, but win the Queen into the bargain. On the other hand, 22, P-KB4 will not do on account of 22, Q-Q2, to be followed by Q-Kt5 ch and R-KKt3, leaving White helpless.

k—The outcome of this game can hardly be in doubt, for Black practically has full control of the board and has forced a White Rook into a useless position.

l—To provide against the check of the Queen at K8, thereby enabling White to swing over his QR to KKt.

m—The last straw, which virtually compels the Queen to abandon the first rank, after which a mate in ten moves is forced.

LOOK WHAT JOE PIPAL'S DOING!

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, Aug. 30.—Joe Pipal of California, coach of the American track team in the recent inter-Allied army games, who came to France in Y.M.C.A. service, has accepted a contract from the new Czecho-Slovak government to spend six months in Prague to train track-team coaches. The Czechs are anxious to make a good showing in the Olympic Games at Antwerp next year, so, in addition to training coaches, he will train the best athletes especially in the dashes, hurdles, high jumping and pole vaulting.

Pipal, before he became famous in California as a track coach, studied athletics and training at Yale University. There will be a school of athletics at Prague, and Pipal will teach their best trainers American track-team methods, in addition to handling those athletes expecting to enter the next Olympic contests. Mrs. Pipal is coming from California to join her husband here.

SNAKE DEALERS' BUSINESS BOOMING.

Jobbers' prices for reptiles, f.o.b. Los Angeles, quote rattlesnakes at 40 cents a pound, (more than some cuts of beef;) Gila monsters, $10 a dozen, and lizards, $2 a hundred.

Needless to state, these creatures are not in demand as food, but, according to Frank Weinberg, who furnished the quotations, additions to collections of reptiles in Europe, where many individuals, as well as menageries, keep them both as fads and as a business.

Like almost anything else, the reptile market suffered because of the war, but now that it is ended, Mr. Weinberg says, the demand is on the increase.

He and as many small boys as care to engage in the hunt search the hills and valleys of Southern California for the harmless "things that crawl with legs," but he goes alone into the desert for rattlers and Gila monsters.

He keeps his stock in his backyard, where his wife handles the creatures and helps in their care as fearlessly as does her husband.

A dangerous business? No, according to Mr. Weinberg.

"No more dangerous than driving an automobile," he declared. "Of course, you must be careful in handling the poisonous ones. But most of the reptiles people fear are not dangerous at all."

He reached into a glass box, thrust his hand under some dry leaves and brought out a large lizard, squirming and trying to bite. He held its head to his lips. It closed its ugly mouth there.

"Perfectly friendly and harmless," said Mr. Weinberg. "See how it kisses me."

A long rattlesnake, which had been sounding a warning, struck, but stopped against the glass side of another box.

"He's a little nervous," said the reptile market man. "He hasn't been handled for some time."

He opened the box, tossed a handkerchief over the snake's head and quickly clasped the creature behind where its ears would have been had it had ears.

"He's a pretty good rattler," said Mr. Weinberg. "Worth $2, anyway."

Talking of the reptile demand, he said:

"It's like everything else—there is more demand for imported serpents than for home products. In Europe they want American snakes. In America they want European reptiles."—[Buffalo Commercial.

WAYS OF RECKONING TIME.

To ascertain the time at night the Apache Indians employed a gourd on which the stars of the heavens were marked. As the constellation rose in the sky the Indian referred to his gourd and found out the hour. By turning the gourd round he could tell the order in which the constellation might be expected to appear. The hill people of Assam reckon time and distances by the number of quids of betelnuts chewed. It will be remembered how, according to Washington Irving, the Dutch Colonial Assembly was invariably dismissed at the last puff of the third pipe of tobacco of Gov. Wouter Van Twiller. A Montagnis Indian of Canada will set up a tall stick in the snow when traveling ahead of friends who are to follow. He marks with his foot the line of shadow cast and by the change in the angle of the shadow the oncoming party can tell, on arriving at the spot, about how far ahead the leader is.—[Indianapolis News.

PENNIES IN DEMAND.

Uneven Prices Caused by War Create Demand for Copper Cent.

This is the day of the penny. The insignificant copper cent has taken the place of the almighty dollar in fiscal importance to the American public.

War taxation has created a demand for pennies that is unprecedented in the history of domestic currency. To meet this enormously increased demand the United States mint in Philadelphia is producing from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 one-cent pieces daily.

The necessity for coining more pennies manifested itself as a result of the standard of uneven prices that because of war taxes, has been established in the business, transportation and almost every commercial phase of community life.

The increased demand for pennies is especially noticed in cities because of the volume of exchange of small currency in the usual daily expenditures of the urbanite. Although machines in the mint in this city are stamping out coppers day and night, the mint is still 8,000,000 pennies behind orders.

Adams M. Joyce, superintendent of the mint in Philadelphia, said that when the war taxes first came into effect the supply of pennies on the market was surprisingly inadequate to the new demand. It was first thought that perhaps some industrial enterprises might have been melting 1-cent pieces down for copper, that metal being very difficult to obtain at the time. Government investigation, however, disclosed that this was not the case, but that the scarcity of pennies on the western coast had drawn a large amount of copper coin to that part of the country.

While figures are not available at the present time, the output of pennies minted in this city since the war has been far greater than any year since the establishment of the mint in Philadelphia. Notwithstanding the increased local output, until Uncle Sam produces a supply of coppers adequate to the present demand, an appreciable loss will be noticed in the earnings of baby's penny bank.—[Philadelphia Ledger.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, July 23.—A large quantity of American motor vehicles, possibly 5000, may be admitted into Great Britain in the next few months, says the American Chamber of Commerce in London. This will include passenger cars, commercial cars, and motorcycles.

Up to the present time, importers have been rationed on the basis of 50 per cent. of their 1913 imports, in proportionate monthly quantities up to September 1, 1919, at which time the British government's "transitional policy" is to be reconsidered. Those importers who established their businesses later than 1913 have not been getting anything at all.

The Board of Trade recently requested the American Chamber of Commerce in London to suggest a scheme which would give equitable consideration to all importers from America, old and new.

The chamber has suggested as a basis of distribution, the yearly average of imports obtained by adding the totals for 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915 and dividing by four. This scheme gives preference to those importers whose organizations have been in existence for a long time, but also takes into account importers who started in 1914 and 1915.

The plan has been ratified unanimously by the importers and the Board of Trade is now circularizing the entire trade for their returns on this basis.

This is declared to be only a temporary arrangement, and not to be taken as an indication of the British government's trade policy on motor vehicles after September 1.

THE RIFLE THAT BOONE CARRIED.

Daniel Boone's rifle, a genuine old-fashioned flint lock, carried on many a perilous trip in the dark and bloody hunting ground of Kentucky and on his famous Indian hunting expeditions, was recently brought into a hardware store in a small town in southwestern Wisconsin for much needed repairs. It is now the property of a Mr. Rafter, formerly of Mississippi, who recently traded his 2300-acre plantation for Wisconsin property and has moved his effects north. The rifle was given him by a doctor, to whom it had been given by an aged hermit living in the mountains of Tennessee.

The rifle is a formidable affair, a real "long rifle," one of the type that gave the nickname of the "long rifle" to our western frontiersmen. It has a barrel 46 inches long, is 45 calibre, a flint lock with a patch-box of inlaid silver and weighs ten pounds. The end of the butt is set with a wild boar's tusk, and has the double or set trigger. On the side of the stock are carved with a jackknife the words, "Boon's Tru Fren;" on the walnut stock are the initials D. B., and five most significant and sinister notches, each notch standing for "one good Injun." At the lower end of the stock is a long and deeply cut gash said to have been cut by an Indian tomahawk thrown at Boone. What happened to the Indian is not recorded.

The rifle, badly broken in shipment, has been repaired and is now on exhibition.—Exchange.

THIRSTY ORYX, HUNGRY LION.

Story of a Terrific Battle in South Africa.

Fierce Charge for Water on Burning Plains.

Sacrifice of One Saved Lives of Many Others.

[From London Answers.]

All day the herd of oryx antelope—thick-necked, slender-legged, deep-shouldered, sand-colored above, white below, black-banded between and on the face—had hung about in sight of the drinking place in South Africa.

I do not know how long the herd had gone without water—days perhaps—but they could go without no longer. The nearest other drink was forty miles away. They could not all make that and live. Not the calves; not the mothers; not the heavy cows.

Then why not go to the drinking place—no more than holes, truly, dug by the beasts themselves in the sandy bed of a dried-up river—and have done with it?

Why? Why, lions, my friends—lions. Their splayed, round footprints, the pungent stench of their royal presence in the bushes all around the water holes. None had seen them. None needed to, being oryx and wild antelope; their noses and their ears were their Marconi receivers and good enough.

At last night came swiftly walking over the burning plains.

Then the leader of the oryx made up his mind, apparently, and gave the order to march. And the herd—all the herd, bulls, cows and calves—fell in behind, silent, springy and alert, as well they might be, for they were heading straight for the drinking place—the water holes of evil repute.

"NEVER LOOKED BACK."

Having once started, that grand old bull oryx never looked back, but his orders, though silent, must have been conveyed to the others somehow. Else how was it, as they neared the twisted trees lining the banks of the river—dried up—the herd closed up behind him—cows and calves somehow in the middle—so that he could hear them press in on his flanks, breathing hard in the stillness all about, a serried phalanx of long, glinting, straight horns?

And how was it, when they reached the river's bank, after a minute's statuesque pause, all came with him, in one solid, unbroken rush, to the drinking holes, and at the gallop, and in a fashion unlike the drinking approach of any other antelopes? And how, too, sticking together close, shoulder to shoulder, they retreated, paused, and came back to drink again, always in packed formation with their leader? Surely no lion, even, could face that.

MAD FROM HUNGER.

But the lion did. He was as famished for food as were the antelopes for water. He, too, had waited for days. So he came, out of the scrub and the dusk, coughing, and with great bounds, and of course, swift as thought, and without warning.

The old bull took the charge, thrusting forward to cover a cow over anxious and reckless for her calf, and dropping to his knees, the better to throw all his power into the blow.

The shock of the impact was terrific. So was the choking dust that rose up; the appalling, crashing roars of the lion writhing to disimpale himself from those terrible thirty-inch horns, that had gone clean through him; the furious plunging of the oryx bull to free himself and get away.

But it was all to no purpose—or, rather, it was. Before the moon went down the herd drank, and later, away up the bank of the river, the hyenas and the jackals fought audibly over that bull oryx antelope and the lion, lying face to face—dead!

WIRELESS PHONING IN TIMES OF PEACE.

SUCCESS UNDER WAR CONDITIONS HOLDS GREAT PROMISE.

The utility of the wireless telephone and of the system of direction finding by wireless instruments (recently demonstrated at the Marconi works at Chelmsford) has been proved to be very great in war. It is hoped and confidently anticipated that their uses in peace will be equally great. Therefore the widest publicity for their systems is desired by the Marconi Company, who have been unable to speak publicly during the period of hostilities concerning the progress of their investigations. It is now common knowledge that by means of stations, placed in convenient parts of the French and British coasts, the movements of Zeppelins were followed without difficulty. A Zeppelin crossing to England during the night would speak to a German station by wireless, perhaps asking for its position. As soon as the wireless came into operation all the British shore stations could get the bearing of the hostile craft with respect to their own instrument; these bearings were immediately passed on to the Admiralty, where the bearings were plotted on a map, and in an incredibly short space of time the position of the Zeppelin was accurately located. By that means also his course and probable intentions could be estimated.

Nor was this the sole use of wireless direction finding in this area. A submarine coming from its lair on the Belgian and German coasts could be located by the same means, and given a sufficient number of "positions," and the open passages through the German mine fields could be found—for where the Hun submarine was there the mines were not.

For artillery work in the field the portable variety of wireless telephone was extremely useful, even on the western front, while in open warfare where vast distances have to be covered, as in the Near East and on the northwest frontier of India, its potentialities satisfy the most exacting of military requirements. The smallest guaranteed range of the telephone station over normal flat country is sixty miles, but it is capable of carrying much greater distances in favorable circumstances. It can be transported either on four pack-horses or on a vehicle, and requires at most six men to work it. Steel masts thirty feet long are carried, supporting a single horizontal aerial, while the transmitting and receiving apparatus can be permanently set up inside the vehicle. The generating set consists of a two-cylinder petrol engine driving a high frequency half-kilowatt alternator.

Now that the inventions of war time are being utilised to further peaceful ends, a long vista of useful purposes to which wireless telephonic and direction finding instruments can be put is opened up. Already experts have said that directional wireless is the key to successful commercial flying through its capacity for overcoming obstacles to navigation provided by unfavorable weather.

In the same way shipping will receive external assistance in finding the whereabouts when necessary and in the wireless telephone will find a cheaper method of communication with the shore and with passing vessels than the permanent maintenance on board of a skilled wireless operator. Again, for work in countries of long distances and vast areas thinly populated, as for instance China, South America, and Africa, the Marconi Company anticipates a great demand will be made on their resources, as the possibilities of wireless telephony are more fully realized.

At their works at Chelmsford between 600 and 700 workpeople are employed on the making of instruments. Many of the larger parts are procured from other firms, as in the case of engines, but in the series of workshops it is possible to see transmitting and receiving sets in the process of manufacture from start to finish. In one shop—the carpenters'—the heavy solid cases in which the delicate instruments are afterward to be fixed are put together. In another, screws of various types are made. In still another, the parts are classified and stored, to be issued out later and assembled as a complete instrument, either by one skilled man, or by several girls who have been trained under the supervision of foremen to do each a special part of the work. Finally the instruments are fixed into their cabinets, either for use in aircraft, or on ships, or in the field. All the time the shops are being kept free from dust by a series of vacuum cleaners which are in constant operation.—[Correspondence of Christian Science Monitor.

GROWTH OF THE HOSPITAL.

Figures in a recent official report to the United States Department of Labor show the astounding growth of the hospital idea in this country during the last half-century. In 1873—less than fifty years ago—there were in the United States only 149 hospitals; today there are nearly 9100—an increase of nearly 6000 per cent. in the number of institutions. In 1873 the total bed capacity of the then-existing hospitals was 35,453; today the hospitals of the country have a total capacity of approximately 869,000 beds—an increase of over 1000 per cent. The amount of money at present invested in these institutions is roughly estimated at nearly $2,000,000,000; the annual expenditure for supplies, equipment, upkeep and new construction is said to be about $750,000,000.

There is much that is gratifying in these enormous totals, says an editorial in The Modern Hospital. Certainly, no stronger testimony could be adduced to show that the people of the United States are thoroughly converted to the hospital idea, and do not mean to be deprived of the benefits of hospital care.

From 'Frisco to mighty Manhattan, from Dawson clear down to Mobile, be it granite or cotton or satin, potatoes or bonbons or steel, it never asks odds of the highway nor seeks the concern of the driver, but rolls over mountain and byway one hundred percent an "arriver"!

So, pledged to a new world's assistance, and built to a proven ideal; each dowered with strength for the distance and ease for the man at the wheel—producers of friendship, not quarrels, and following no lead but their own—these Diamond T's win all their laurels on service, and service alone!

NEW FACTORY IS UNDER WAY.

To be Largest Motor Vehicle Plant in West.

Hope to be in New Home by First of Year.

Work Starts on Administration Building.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new factory site of the Moreland Motor Truck Company at Burbank. Ground has already been broken and material for the structures is arriving daily. The work of plowing and grading is being pushed to the utmost and the one-time alfalfa fields, watermelon and cantaloupe patches of the suburban town have given way to the erection of what will be one of the largest motor vehicle plants in the West.

SINGLE POLICY.

Carrying out the policy of the Moreland company to the very letter—that of boosting home industry—a Moreland tractor, every part of which was manufactured at the local company's factory, 1701 North Main street, is being utilized in breaking the ground on the new Moreland home which will cover an area of twenty-seven and one-half acres.

Watt L. Moreland, general manager of the company that bears his name, has given instructions to the engineers and contractors to use local-made products in the construction of the buildings. Just as much of the material as possible that is made locally will be used. Moreland distillate-burning trucks have been transporting cement, lime, wood and other building materials the past two weeks to Burbank.

GOING UP.

Already four huge sheds have been erected which will be used for the housing of cement, lime, miscellaneous materials and as a construction office. Special interest is being concentrated in the erection of the administration building, the process of pouring the cement for this edifice now being in progress. It is expected that before the middle of next week, the foundation will be completed.

Steel for the various structures is being prepared with all possible haste so that no time will be lost when the preliminary construction work is finished. It is expected that the steel structure will be up within ninety days. As a local iron works is preparing the steel, there is every reason to believe, according to Mr. Moreland, that Moreland trucks will be manufactured at Burbank before the first of the year.

INSULATION GOOD AFTER LONG USE.

ONE OF FIRST AUTO BATTERIES STILL GIVING FIRST-CLASS SERVICE.

Advocates of patent battery insulation will have to produce stronger arguments than have yet been employed to convince at least one experienced motorist of Los Angeles that they have something better than wood separators. In a letter to C. H. Kay of Kay and Burbank, Exide battery distributors, Edward Benten, Jr., draws upon his own experience in upholding wood as efficient insulation.

"On March 29, 1913," his letter reads, "I purchased a machine equipped with an Exide battery. This was, I believe, one of the first six-volt starting systems to be made.

"On September 19, 1914, I spent fifteen cents to buy three soft rubber filler plugs to replace the original filler plugs which had become frayed.

"In September, 1917, I entered the United States army. My car stood without any attention until December, 1918—fifteen months. During this time the battery had not been charged or filled with water. It was very nearly bone dry.

"I have had this battery six years, four months and nineteen days, and it is still on the job. The only repairs, service or expense other than distilled water was fifteen cents spent for filler plugs previously referred to."

Make 'Em Uncomfortable Anyhow.

"Oh, doctor," cried a wild-eyed man, "I am dreadfully afflicted! The ghosts of my departed relatives come and perch on the tops of the fence posts all around my yard when dusk is falling. I can look out into the gloaming any evening and see a couple of dozen spooks solemnly sitting on top of that many posts, waiting, waiting, waiting. Oh, doctor, what shall I do?"

"Sharpen the tops of the posts," briskly replied the physician. "Five dollars, please."—[Judge.

RE-EMPLOY VETERANS WITHOUT QUESTION.

POLICY OF TAKING BACK SERVICE MEN CITED BY THE GOVERNMENT.

In recognition of its policy of re-employing without question all men and women who left their positions with the company for war service, the Franklin Automobile Company has been awarded a government citation.

More than 800 returned service men have been given jobs since the signing of the armistice. The attitude of the company in putting on these men in preference to other applicants is but one step in its desire to co-operate with the government in matters of this kind.

Control boards are again in use at the Franklin factory, according to advices received by Ralph Hamlin, of Ralph Hamlin, Inc., distributor of Franklin cars in Southern California. When the manufacturers were engaged in 100 per cent. war work there was no need for these control boards and they were disbanded.

The boards detail the exact production situation of the factory and show the state of completion of each piece of material. The boards are photographed and the photostat record is preserved to show the progress of production each day of the year.

The Franklin factory is making progress in its effort to increase production, Mr. Hamlin learns, but has not been able to meet the demand for Franklin cars.

COIN MADE 2000 B. C.

One day this week the Daily Messenger mentioned several old coins owned by Mr. G. H. Jarvis, and today we learn that Mr. George F. Anderson, the well-known farmer and citizen living on the Hustonville pike, has what is probably the oldest coin in existence. The coin was found six or eight years ago while digging a well near the Boyle and Garrard county line and has an Egyptian inscription on it. "Ptolemy-King," with a fine profile of King Ptolemy, an Egyptian King. It is made of copper and brass and according to professors in Centre College and Prof. T. T. Delote, of the National Museum at Washington, who examined it several years ago, was made about the year 2000 B. C. No one has been able to account for how the coin happened to be found in this country and who was its owner. If there is an older coin than this we would like to learn of it.—[Danville Messenger.

SELECTION OF AUTO TRUCKS BIG TRIUMPH.

GOVERNMENT ADOPTS MACK THREE-ONE-HALF TON MODEL AS STANDARD.

The motor vehicles in the service of the United States military forces are selected by the chief of the Motor Transport Corps. Uncle Sam is the most widely experienced purchaser of motor vehicles in the entire country and undoubtedly the largest single owner. It was with no inconsiderable feeling of anxiety, therefore, that every motor car, motor truck, motor cycle and bicycle manufacturer awaited the announcement of the vehicles that the government would retain in peace time and standardize upon for its various departments. Practically every make of car and truck has seen some use since motorization of the army began with the first advance into Mexico and was continued during the European war.

NATURALLY.

Naturally every producer desired to see his particular make of vehicle adopted as standard and consequently there were many disappointments when the official list of those vehicles selected was announced recently. The list shows that but two makes of passenger cars, three of light delivery trucks, three of one and one-half and two-ton trucks, four of three and four-ton trucks and one of five-ton and over trucks were decided upon.

The list as received by W. R. Stoner, manager of the International Mack Corporation, in Los Angeles, shows that Mack three and one-half ton trucks were one of the four makes in the three and four-ton truck groupings decided upon.

In type 5, the five-ton or over classification of trucks, the Mack five and one-half ton model was chosen exclusively.

The Mack is the only make of heavy-duty trucks that was selected for more than one class.

REPUTATION FOR SERVICE.

In a letter to Mr. Stoner notifying him of the standardizations by the government, R. E. Fulton, vice-president of the International Motor Company, manufacturers of Mack trucks says: "You know what a reputation for service the Mack established during the war in military use at home and in the war zone. The standardization of the Mack for use by the army in times of peace is added evidence of what the truck can do in all kinds of service. The slogan 'Performance Counts' should mean as much to the purchasers of trucks in your territory buying for commercial use as it means to our military users who had actual knowledge of what the Mack truck did under the [illegible] conditions of service."

England to France by Tunnel.

From an engineering point of view the difficulties of constructing a tunnel under the English Channel are not supposed to be very great. There is under the English Channel a stratum of chalk, which, from observations already made, seems to be admirably adapted for tunneling operations. Through this chalk it was proposed that two tunnels should be made, parallel to one another, each to contain a single line of rails. This would give greater strength than a larger tunnel containing a double line of rails, and would also make for better ventilation, owing to the trains in each tunnel always moving in one direction. The cars would, of course, be worked by electricity. The length under the water would be [illegible] four miles. The distance from Paris to London would be [illegible] miles, which would take [illegible]. It would, therefore, be possible to leave London in the morning, [illegible] five or six hours in Paris, and return to London again that [illegible].—[Indianapolis News.

Here's the Latest Thing to Keep 'em Down on the Farm.

The new Moreland tractor, every part of which is being manufactured at the local plant of the Moreland Motor Truck Company. Two of the new machines, the first turned out, are being used to break ground for the new Moreland factory at Burbank.

INVESTIGATE GOOD ROADS.

The number of good roads in any locality does not depend on the number of automobiles in that section. This fact is brought out by investigations of road conditions in many parts of the country by Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Company, as detailed in a letter to Robert S. Weaver of the Seager-Clark Company, distributors of Jordan cars.

It was the prosperity of farmers throughout the West as reflected in their demand for distinctive automobiles that led Mr. Jordan to start his investigation of road conditions.

With the announcement of the new Jordan models, the Silhouette and Playboy, orders for them began to pour in from the farming districts. Farmers apparently were able for the first time to get the sort of automobile they had always longed for. This led Mr. Jordan to find out what sort of roads were available to run the new cars on.

IN AGRICULTURAL STATES.

"In Iowa," writes Mr. Jordan, "there is an automobile for every seven persons, but there are 1400 automobiles to every mile of improved road. It is about the same in South Dakota, where they have an automobile for every nine people and 800 cars for every mile of improved road.

"As we come East we find in Ohio thirteen people per automobile and thirteen automobiles per mile of improved road. In Massachusetts there are twenty-two people for every car, and a mile of improved road for every nineteen cars. New Jersey has twenty-four persons for every automobile and twenty-three cars for every mile of improved roads.

DEMAND GOOD ROADS.

"The cost of good roads to land owners has been exaggerated in some sections. This has made many enemies of good roads. But passenger cars of the better class are having a wider distribution than ever before. Manufacturers cannot begin to supply the present demand. They will not get caught up on present orders for months to come. This means that more people will be demanding good roads all over the country."

LOOKING OVER THE FIGHTS.

Jack Doyle's Entertainments at Vernon Reviewed by Dramatic Critic.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

Just isn't any place a poor guy can go these days to get away from the women!

Why, yes, there is too, bo—there's still the prize fight!

I don't suppose any male human being ever hollered all he wanted to except at a prize fight. The female muffler has not yet been put on the male's yelling at the bruisers.

So that a great roar, the loudest human noise you ever heard, greets you while you're yet a whole block away from Jack Doyle's Vernon ring—called a ring, I suppose, from male perversity, because it isn't a ring.

MUST HAVE EXCUSE.

When a perfectly good dramatic writer takes a night off and goes to a prize fight, he or she—particularly she—must have a good excuse—not necessarily a reason, but anyhow an excuse. Male picture stars are human enough to like to get away some place once in a while and holler, and that's my excuse for going to the fight last Tuesday night.

So much for polite preliminaries. As a matter of fact—but don't tell Will Wyatt I said so—I liked that fight better than almost any show I ever saw in a theater. It was so thrilling! You never knew how the plot was going to turn out! Take Fred McManus and Eddie Hanlon—one was slim like a panther and the other was strong and stocky—don't remember which was which now—but how well one's strength was matched against the other's lightning quickness—and how they could both fight! You think, you know, that you're just going to hate to see a boy go groggy, and so you do, in a way, but, oh, how you glory in his gameness for walking up to the punishment!

TWO-RINGED CIRCUS.

It's a two-ringed circus, too, if you like. For the place is full of male picture stars, every one of whom manifests his pleasure and excitement and anger in characteristic fashion. It isn't the famously athletic stars mostly who go to the fights. Maybe they think fights are coals to Newcastle. Douglas Fairbanks and William S. Hart and Bill Russell go only occasionally. Tom Mix is one athletic star who is always on hand at the ringside. Tom sits as solemnly! and quietly as if he were in church; maybe he lets his clothes speak for him! Bill Desmond is another husky that's always there at roll call. Bill fights along with the boys in the ring, and with the audience, too, whenever he can get up an argument. Bill Duncan always has two seats, because he feels that when he starts an argument with the referee he needs room or his style is cramped.

Bryant Washburn, who, you know, always plays the polite, home-broken husband, never misses a Tuesday night. Washburn is always loaded down with cigars when he arrives, because he invariably forgets to take his cigar out of his mouth when he commences to holler—says he never knows when an attack of hollering is coming on—and so drops cigar after cigar to the floor, and has to light another.

CHARLIE'S THERE.

Charlie Chaplin forgets he's a great artist when he arrives at the ringside. He hollers the loudest when he disagrees with the referee, which is nearly always. During the rounds he scrooches down in his seat and sits on the back of his neck with his eyes blazing, and the minute the round is finished, he leaps out of his seat, and when he's very much excited—which is after nearly every bout—he climbs all over the—do you call it the stage?—like a monkey. Fatty Arbuckle is always on hand at the Tuesday evening pleasantries. Fatty goes to sleep—but always wakes up just at the right places! Monte Blue puts his hands over his ears when there's a din—and then hollers his own head off! Lew Cody, when excited, gnaws the lip on which reposes the w. k. mustache. George Beban talks with all his hands between rounds. Carter de Haven brushes the top of his hat round and round till it shines like a nigger's heel.

Charlie Murray has a calm, judicial attitude most of the time, knowing he's the only one the gang will listen to when things get too exciting. Robert Warwick sits quietly tense, and has got so he never disputes anybody when they mistake him for Jim Corbett, and Jack Kerrigan is all Irish the minute he smells the sawdust.

Oh, my, yes! If there are any of their wives who don't believe that's where the stars go on Tuesday nights, I can vouch for the truth of it!

BIG MOVING JOB DONE.

A gas container seventy feet in diameter and seventy-five feet high, weighing 300 tons, was moved a distance of three miles recently at Portland, Or. First it was raised fifteen feet and loaded on rollers. Then it was moved four blocks through the city streets and lowered twenty-eight feet to a dock, whence it was moved upon a pair of barges. The barges were towed three miles to a shipbuilding plant, where the tank was unloaded and raised twenty-six feet, moved across newly-filled ground for a distance of 2000 feet, crossing a railroad track and placed on its new foundation. It took seventy-one days to complete the work.—[Exchange.

Necessary Precaution.

Hans was speaking about the high price of cabbage in his town.

"Kebbeges is awful high dis year," he said. "Me and mine vife puts up seven, eight, nine barrels of sauerkraut efery year—but ve can't dis year. De kebbeges cost too much."

"But you put up some sauerkraut, didn't you, Hans?" questioned a friend.

"Oh, yes, two or dree barrels—just to haf in de house in case of sickness."—[Pittsburgh Chronicle.

MORE POWER FOR WESTERN TENNIS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—To give western tennis organizations better representation in the United States National Lawn Tennis Association a change in voting rules of the association is to be asked by Dr. Summer Hardy, president of the California Lawn Tennis Association.

Each eastern club, it is pointed out, is entitled under present rules to one vote on questions submitted to the annual meeting of the national association. Western clubs are organized in associations, each of which is entitled to not more than five votes, although the California association, for instance, includes thirty-five clubs in its membership.

In seeking a remedy for this condition Dr. Hardy is said to have united support of the tennis clubs of the West. He is a member of the Committee on Equalization of Voting Power, appointed by the national body.

Handling Cows in Milk Tests.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

Fruitful and beautiful.

THERE are thousands of trees in and about Los Angeles that need the services of a tree surgeon. Some of them merely need cavities filled, but others need bolting and bracing to insure a long life and continuance of present vigor. All of them need the diseased parts cut out and the cavities sterilized and filled with concrete so they will be absolutely waterproof.

All soft, decaying, discolored or diseased wood should be cut away with a chisel or gouge, or both, with the aid of a mallet, until sound wood only is in evidence in all parts. The opening should be left V-shaped below and an inversion of that shape above, rather than round or square at the ends, for this shape soonest induces proper healing. The bottom of the cavity, unless it extends below the ground level, should be so shaped that if water were thrown in it would all run out, and rapidly, too. After the cavity is thoroughly cleaned it should be sterilized by a thorough coating of creosote, this to be followed by a heavy coat of tar. Next drive a good number of common eight-penny wire nails in the walls to about half their length. This will aid much in holding the tree and the concrete filling together. If both tree and cavity are large some cross rods for bracing will be needed and some cross bolts to lace and hold the mouth of the opening. Now we are ready for the filling. Some advocate a mortar of one part cement to three parts of sand, but with many large openings this would prove expensive. Some wash the cavity walls with a pure cement wash and use a filling but half as rich as that stated, but the richer it is the better 'twill be. Fill up about eight inches to a foot and then put in a sheet of heavy tarred paper and so proceed until the hole is filled. The paper separates the cement into blocks so the tree may sway or yield without breaking the filling. It is often possible, and advisable, to make a small opening from above down through the solid wood so the cavity may all be filled and then the small new passing throat as well. Finish the face with pure cement and have the surface just even with the cambium or inner layer of bark; some finish it rough like the bark and stain it or paint it to match in color. If you do not wish to bear the expense of filling, give the cleaning and coating and decay will be stopped. This is as much as can be told in print and should enable anyone to do a fair job. If trees are valuable the work should be done or supervised by an expert. of the Santa Barbara's Palms.

Santa Barbara is well supplied with palms of the better species, and Phoenix Canariensis, that "gigantic feather duster" so common in Los Angeles, is not so much in evidence. Cocos plumosa is to be found in all parts of the languorous city by the sea, and there are some of remarkable size and unusual beauty. Many short sections of streets are planted with them, but it is regrettable that no concerted effort has been made to have them aligned for long stretches. Howea (Kentia) Fosteriana also thrives so well in that soft humid clime that someone should have the courage to plant a parkway with them on each side of a city block. In years to come it would develop into the most lovely street block in California.

A Troublesome Weed.

There was sent to this office, from the Soldiers' Home, a wide-spreading weed with small pinnately-divided leaves, small solitary yellow flowers and a very spiny bur-like seed pod. As it did not occur in any book on California botany the editor could not determine it and sent it to the University of California at Berkeley. T. J. Smiley of the Department of Botany writes: "The prostrate spreading plant with spiny burs is Tribulus terrestris, of the Order Zygophyllaceae, usually called Ground Bur-nut, and rapidly becoming a troublesome weed in many places in Southern California." After looking through botanies of other parts of the country the writer found that two species of Tribulus were native to Florida. All who find it should destroy it before it gets a strong hold on this end of the State as it is worthless—a vile weed and unpleasant to handle.

A venerable patriarch.

The three graces.

Sweet Cicely.

In many gardens will be found large plants of Myrrhis odorata, the "sweet cicely," "fern" or "Myrrh." The stems, leaves and fruits are aromatic and are eaten by children because of their pleasant flavor. Some regard the plant as poisonous, confounding it with Conium maculatum, the water hemlock. But the hemlock is smooth throughout, while sweet cicely is soft with very fine hairs. The stems of hemlock are usually spotted with dull purple and the whole plant has a "mousy" smell. Cicely flowers are creamy, while hemlock flowers are white and it generally blossoms later than cicely. There are many minor differences also, but it is thought the differences will be easily recognized from these descriptions.

A Memorial Drive.

Minneapolis is the first city to plant a memorial drive. She will have one 350 feet wide, extending from Lake of the Isles to Camden Park. On each side will be planted three rows of elms of a fine type, grafted from two trees in New England that are noted for their lofty umbrageous form. Native Minnesota shrubbery will be grouped at the base of and between the trees. C. M. Loring, the "father of the Minneapolis park system" has donated a fund of $50,000, the income from which is to be used for the permanent upkeep of this beautiful plantation. Mr. Loring, to whom Minneapolis is indebted more than to any other one man, is well known here. For a quarter-century he spent his winters in Riverside and each winter worked with the writer and others for more extensive street and highway planting. Although nearly a score of years past his allotted three score and ten, this grand old man still writes his own letters and a few days ago penned: "I am still interested in civic work and am still planting trees."

Beauteous Begonias.

The begonias are one of the greatest, most interesting and most beautiful of plant groups. Few plants have been more extensively hybridized.: While there are but 500 species, growing wild in a warm belt about the globe, there are possibly an equal number of hybrids and variations. In gardens where proper care is taken of plant life there are no plants more satisfactory than begonias and few more beautiful. The late Theodosia B. Shepherd grew and introduced a number of fine varieties and also secured some fine new hybrids that are well known in the California trade. A large collection of begonias is a most interesting and attractive lot of plants but few have taken the trouble to procure a considerable number. The best collection in Southern California has been brought together by Dr. A. D. Houghton of Los Angeles.

Primroses.

None of the primroses is difficult to grow in California gardens and one or more species should be grown by all. Even the yellow English yellow primrose ranges in its own country from dry sunny banks to damp woods. Therefore, we may grow it in shaded or partially shaded spots where the temperature does not run too high. The wild English primrose has but one flower on a stem and the sexes are on separate plants. The English cowslip has darker yellow smaller flowers in a bunch or head on each stem. Many confound the two. Of late years the most popular midwinter bloomer has been Primula malacoides and it blooms profusely, in all sorts of weather, in either sun or shade. The beautiful little salmon pimpernel common in lawns and gardens is of the primrose family and is found throughout the world. In damp weather its flowers close.

Scottish Heather.

"Can Scotch heather be grown in California?" is a question often asked. It surely can, but no one would care for it except a braw Scotsman or "bonnie lassie" who would tolerate, nay, even encourage it for sentimental reasons. On the dry Scottish moors it makes bright miles of otherwise uninteresting country. It flowers in late summer, with pale purple blossoms and occasionally may a white-flowered one be found, with light green leaves. It grows from a few inches to two feet high, according to the soil supply. Its name is Calluna vulgaris, but we know of no one locally who grows it. It may be there is some in one of the Los Angeles parks, for Frank Shearer, the superintendent, is from the "land o' cakes and barley meal." If not, John MacLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate Park, also from the heather moors, may have it.

A giant feather duster.

Pink-crested Acacia.

This tree is properly not an acacia but an albizzia, of which there are several species, the more common being lophanta, a crested wattle with masses of greenish-white flowers. A. Julibrissin is a species with pink flowers that blossoms most profusely in the sands of Golden Gate Park, almost within the ocean's spray. It is rare in Southern California. There is a variety rosea of this species with brighter pink flowers, a dwarfer, hardier tree, sometimes grown under the name of A. Nemu. The writer believes he has one of these, an importation from France in 1914, but it was a tiny grafted plant and has not yet flowered. These trees are very drought resistant, but thrive best in a humid atmosphere.

Legal Orange Transfer.

If a man were to give another an orange he would simply say, "I give you this orange," but when the transaction is intrusted to the hands of a lawyer to put in writing he adopts this form: "I hereby give and convey to you, all and singular, my estate and interests, right, title, claim, and advantage of and in said orange, together with all its rind, juice, pulp and pips, and all rights and advantages therein with full power to bite, cut, suck and otherwise eat the same, or give the same away with or without the rind, skin, juice, pulp or pips, anything hereinbefore or hereinafter or in any other deed or deeds, instrument or instruments of whatever nature or kind soever to the contrary in any wise, notwithstanding."

What About the Japanese Game Fowl?

FANCIER CHAMPIONS BREED. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

UNDER date of August 10, D. S. W., until recently engineer of the Yueh-Han Railway, Canton, China, sends to this department the following interesting letter describing the Japanese Game breed of fowl, together with some of his experiences in handling the breed:

"Your remarks in the Farm and Tractor section of The Times about the Cornish as a 'gentlemen's fowl' interests me. I am a lover of the Cornish and all its kind, and am convinced that they are, or can be made, among the best all-purpose breeds.

"Do you know the Japanese Game? A Jap showed two cocks and two hens in one of the Los Angeles shows last winter, but they were not listed. The cocks were good, being almost up to Cornish standards in coloring and type, but with a little too much tail; while the hens were of a sulphur color, but of fine type. These birds are, in my opinion, the most attractive of all, and are not only capable of being developed into the finest type of meat birds, but may be made to lay at a rate that would keep the Leghorns busy—and the eggs are somewhat larger.

"Three years ago, I bought six of these Games in Nagasaki, and took them to Canton, China. In Nagasaki I found all colors of this breed, but the type is quite well established. It was hard to get the best of these birds, as their owners have a strong affection for them, and refuse to sell at any price; but I managed to get a fine young cock, black with orange hackles and wing-markings; an older cock of good type, red and brown, very like a Cornish; two heavy hens of the sulphur color, one of which was a very heavy specimen; one prettily marked pullet, between the sulphur and the gray; and one fine hen of the gray type, colored like a Brown Leghorn hen.

"These cost me, landed in Canton, about thirty [illegible], and by caring for them myself I soon had them in good condition. I mated the black cock with the gray hen and the pullet, and those two started laying almost at once. The hen laid eggs larger than those of the best White Leghorns, and her record was 122 eggs in six months, March 1, to August 30. She would lay two eggs in three days, as regularly as a clock strikes the hour. The pullet started laying small eggs, and they remained small for two or three months, when she took a rest of a few days, and then produced big eggs at the same rate as the gray hen.

"About that time I ran into bad luck. One day the cocks got together, by carelessness on the garden boy's part, and when I found them they were both so badly battered that they never recovered. The gray hen was poisoned by eating a firecracker that got into her pen somehow, and the pullet was stolen by some rascal. The two sulphur-colored hens never amounted to anything, and were eaten, proving delicious roasters.

"So I was left with none of the original six. However, I had a husky lot of youngsters from the gray hen, and some cross-bred chicks; so next spring I was able to fix up three good pens and start again. Of these, I kept two black cocks of fine type, four black hens, for one pen; and four gray hens for another. Of these hens (or rather pullets) three of the blacks and three of the grays started laying big eggs almost at once, when they were ten months old, and their schedule was either two eggs in three days, like the mother hen, or, in the case of two of them, three eggs in four days, with a rest period of two or three days every few weeks. So they all came out about event giving me from eighteen to twenty-one eggs each, every month, and keeping right on with that rate of production. Their chicks were a fine lot, big as two-months-old White Leghorns when they were four weeks old, and nearly equally divided in color between black and striped. Then I had to come away and leave them there, which about broke my heart.

"You must remember that I had to cull these six heavy layers from a lot of pullets that were only good to eat; but this was only my first generation, and I don't like to tell you what I think could be done with those birds by proper breeding and selection. The flock is all broken up now, and the people that have them are not to be relied upon for results with them; but I intend soon to make another try with them. These birds have an attraction for me, not only on account of their usefulness, but because they are handsome and intelligent creatures, and become great pets. In fact they are likely to get too familiar, so that they become regular nuisances. They will follow you around like dogs, and will fight anything that comes along; but they are not mean nor quarrelsome.

"As mothers or sitters the hens are of no use whatever; and I never had one that would stay on the nest more than one or two days. They are hardy, and seem specially well suited to such nasty, damp climates as that of South China. Perhaps they would solve the problem of a good laying hen in Hawaii, where they have so far been unable to get a bird that gives results.

"So, for a fancier who can choose his bird without thinking of expense or profit and loss, I recommend the Japanese Game, which is the first cousin of the Dark Cornish, as we have it here, but is a handsomer and better all-purpose bird. Japanese Games can be bred in almost any color you want; but type will always be close to that of the life-size Japanese bronzes you can see in the curio shops. I wish you could be induced to appreciate the fine qualities of this saucy bird, and persuade your gentleman-fancier friends to try them. I can expatiate on the merits of the Japanese Game (I think he is made up of about 80 per cent. Indian Game and the rest of Malay and Langshan, or something that put more feathers on him than the Indian has) endlessly; so when I get going on that subject, I have trouble in stopping.

"If the uplift of the Japanese, the Indian, or the Cornish is to be a part of your endeavors, I only ask to have a small and modest share in it. Meantime I stand ready to back the Japanese bird against any other as a roaster, a scrapper or a looker; and his wife as an egg machine and 100 per cent. nonsitter. Banzai to them!"

"Dubbing" Fighting Games.

Though the interest in game fowls of the fighting varieties is not nearly so pronounced as it was before it became illegal to indulge in cock fights, the practice of "dubbing" is still more or less in evidence among standard pit game and game bantam breeders. The removal of combs, wattles and earlobes gives to the bird a certain fighting appearance that seems to go with the nature of the breed. The practice is followed to protect the birds from mutilation in head gear when fighting—not professionally, but "just for fun" when two males come into collision. To the experienced game fancier, but little attention is given to the cry that the practice is cruel, quite to the contrary it has its humane side. The general ages at which the operation is done varies from four to six or seven months. The operation should be done by an experienced hand, to insure rapidity and safety, or it may be done under chloroform. "An assistant" says a writer in the Feathered World, "always holds the bird, and the operator holds the comb while he cuts off the wattles and earlobes. When these are off the best plan is to put the thumb of the left hand across the inside of the beak and the forefinger at the back of the head, but taking care not to choke the bird. Then take the comb off with one cut from the beak, keeping the scissors down firmly pretty close to the head. Some dub a little closer than others, and two little cuts are generally needed to take off ragged edges left by the first cut at the beak end. Some prefer to put the finger across the beak and thumb at the back of the head and cut from behind. The birds appear to feel very little pain, and if grains be thrown down will at once commence to feed."

Those who are handling game chickens with a view to exhibit them at poultry shows, should have them dubbed. The bird in fighting trim has the "edge" on the one that appears without dubbing.

Standard breeds in cold countries are sometimes dubbed to insure them from frost bite; in England the practice is sometimes practiced to secure fertility with excessively heavy combed males.

"Stick Tight" Fleas and Eggs.

I. W. P., Bellflower, writes to know if laying hens do as well on green range, with a "pickup" of barley in the fields, as they would penned up? Also that her fowl are troubled with the "stick tight" flea and that their combs and the area around the wattles are badly infested. She greased them with ham fat and immediately they completely stopped laying. Cleaned out the chicken house, but the sand brought up by gophers is full of fleas, and, of course, the operation will soon have to be gone over again.

The vigor and productivity of fowl rests largely on activity, hence hens on free range often do as well as those intelligently managed in confinement, where good scratching facilities are provided. Vegetables are composed of about 80 per cent. water, consequently have no great feeding value, but are good as roughage and for the mineral salts that they supply. Alfalfa is an exception, possessing good feeding values, and is beyond question the best green food that we have. Fowl eat of it freely and do well on it. Hens in the moult always "let up" on production, and if irritated by vermin at the same time, it is not to be wondered that laying ceases. Wholesome feeding under either system will yield good results. "Stick Tight" or sand fleas are bad actors about a poultry plant. A gallon of salt to four of water, sprayed over the ground is said to be effective. More than one application may be necessary to rid the soil. For methods of fighting lice and mites, see the Farm and Tractor section for July 20. In addition to what was there said, we might add the mercurial ointment remedy for injurious insects. Take an equal quantity of lard and mix thoroughly with the ointment. This is best done by placing the two substances on a plate and mixing them with a knife. Then take a piece about the size of a pea and rub it down to the skin under and around the vent, also rub a little under each wing. Mercurial ointment must not be used on hens that are running with little chicks, as it is a poison and quite sure to destroy them. The safer way to buy it is to explain its uses to the druggist and have him compound it for you. Mercury, being a deadly poison, should be handled with caution.

The Petaluma Egg Day.

Secretary Kerrigan, of the Petaluma Chamber of Commerce, writes that the annual egg day celebration will be held August 30, on which occasion the importance of the American Business Hen and the economic value of her product will be fully exploited in floats, banquets, literary exercises and parades. While the event will be a general outing for the poultry fraternity, its educational values will not be overlooked, and the nutritive importance of hen fruit and carcass will be given wide attention by the Chamber of Commerce and the Producers' Association of Central California.

Pure Air and Sunshine.

In the construction of poultry houses nothing is of more importance than ample provisions for plenty of sunshine and pure air. Both are conducive to robust health, hence good insurance against disease and the presence of disease germs. The construction should be such as to avoid draughts of air in contact with the birds, and rat proof. The University Farm at Davis recommends a house 16x20 feet, eight feet high in front and four feet at the rear, with open front facing south and a shed roof. Tongue and groove lumber should be used in the construction, with shingle roof, if the expense is not too great. The floor should be of cement, which is more sanitary than dirt or wood and can be made rat proof. Such a building will house 100 Leghorns in two pens, or 125 in one pen.

The house should be comfortable, for the laying hen is a high-strung, temperamental creature, incapable of doing her best in an unfriendly environment. Cool in summer and comfortable in winter, and kept clean and sanitary at all times, the Davis Farm house has a hood built over the roosts, allowing a current of air to pass into the house and over the heads of the hens without causing a draught upon them.

Inbreeding in Fowls.

This term denotes breeding from close relatives. Doing this once, with healthy stock, is of practically no consequence, but repeated often it dwarfs the size and plays havoc with the constitution. More or less of relationship is, however, necessary for maintenance of "points" in perfection, and a great part of the breeder's thought and planning is absorbed in so managing matters by several pens as to keep up the necessary identity of strain without too much of injurious very near relationship. The mere utilitarian breeder had better avoid inbreeding altogether as far as he can. It is found that injurious effects are largely modified by rearing stock in widely distant localities on different soil; these foreign conditions appear, as it were, to modify to a perceptible extent the blood of the animals and fowls.—[From the Feathered World, London.

The Asiatic breeds are: Brahma, Cochin and Langshan.

For general farm use the American breeds are probably the best.

Market white-shelled and brown-shelled eggs in separate packages.

The English breeds are: Sussex, Cornish, Dorking, Orpington and Redcap.

When taking eggs to market they should be protected from the sun's rays.

Uniform products command the best prices. Pure-bred fowls produce uniform products.

Begin marketing the cockerels as soon as they weigh one pound or attain a marketable weight.

When selling eggs to the country merchant or cash buyer insist that the transaction be on a quality basis.

Pure-bred poultry means uniformity of products. Uniformity of products means increased profits, if products are properly marketed.

It is not necessary to build expensive poultry houses, but they should be serviceable, fairly roomy, well lighted and well ventilated without drafts.

Given the same care and feed, pure-bred fowls make a greater profit than mongrels.

Every poultry keeper who is interested in breeding better poultry should have a copy of the American Standard of Perfection.

BEWARE GRASSHOPPERS.

Although grasshoppers are not usually noticed by the farmer until they have reached a considerable size, they begin to injure his crops immediately upon hatching from the egg. They should be detected and combated, therefore, while young and small, so that time, labor, and material, as well as crops, may be saved.

The raising of rabbits is one of the most agreeable and profitable of occupations; one that can be pursued in spare moments.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

A Great Industry.

THE live stock industry is the largest and, in more than one sense, the most important industry in the United States. Its extent, measured by the value of live animals, amounts to more than $8,000,000,000. Its importance rests in the necessity for live stock to consume the products of farms and ranges, 80 per cent. of which, according to census reports, is fed to live stock; in the maintenance of soil fertility, which cannot be kept up continuously and economically without a considerable number of animals as a part of the farm system; in the indispensable place which animal food occupies in the American diet, of which it makes up 38 per cent. based on the average consumer's food expense account; and finally, in the far-reaching influence which the growing, fattening and marketing of live stock has upon the social and economic welfare of all classes of people, including producers, distributors and the meat-consuming public.

The slaughtering and meat-packing business is the largest manufacturing industry in the United States, according to the United States census of manufacturers. The sales of live stock in the Chicago market alone totaled nearly $1,000,000,000 in 1918, or over $3,000,000 a day, and the daily sales at all of the centralized live stock markets of this country total close to $20,000,000.

Waste A Mistake.

THE great meat-packing establishments of the country, it is said, have reduced waste to such an extent that they utilize everything but the squeal of the hog, the moo of the steer and the bleat of the sheep. The fruit producers of California might well take a leaf from the packers' book of experience.

Much progress, it is true, has been made in the utilization of fruit by-products, important industries having been built up for the manufacture of extracts, juices, acids, marmalades, jellies and preserves. That waste still exists in this field of production none can deny. Chemists declare that even the washings from the canneries are rich in oils, acids and salts and the canners themselves are, of course, coming to realize more and more the possibilities in the culls that are sorted from the picking boxes and grading trays.

Fruit packers and canners are watching with interest the operations of a citrus-belt plant which is endeavoring to utilize to an extent never before attempted the bruised and imperfect fruit that remains on the different growers' associations' hands after the better products have been put in refrigerator cars or canned and dried. If the investigations and experiments that are being reduced to business practice by this concern prove up to the expectations of the backers, the result will be gratifying to the fruit men and public alike, for the avowed object of the manufacturers is to make the culls from orchard and grove so valuable as by-product material that there will henceforth be no occasion for dumping them on the city markets.

The oft-repeated criticism that the East gets the good California fruit while the Californians take the culls is not without a basis of fact, and when it is considered that a great many tourists and settlers are actually drawn to the Golden State by the delightful prospect of being able to enjoy California's delicious fruits in the land where they are grown, it becomes obvious that any change in producing and distributing practices which will make it profitable for the growers to throw their second-rate stuff into a by-product plant and give local consumers an equal chance with the rest of the country at the celebrated California quality fruit will be most welcome. Besides finding a more profitable outlet for their culls, the growers may also be pleasantly surprised, if all works out as the by-products investigators predict, to find what a big, eager market is really awaiting their best shippable-grade stuff right at their very doors.

All the best ways of utilizing culls, of course, may not yet have been discovered. If such be the case, the fruit men can find no more profitable field for investigation than that leading to such a result. As to the material heretofore regarded as of negligible value or as being so much sheer waste, there is undoubtedly much to learn. Apricot pits were considered so much refuse to be hauled away from the dryers and canneries until German chemical manufacturers just before the war put in a bid for them and began sending ships half way around the world for them. In the packing season just closed these pits have been bringing over $50 a ton right at home. Peach pits, now sold for fuel, may yet be used for who knows what valuable purpose.

It is the same with the so-called waste stuff left in the handling of California's innumerable other products of the soil—it will never be known until the most exhaustive investigations have been made just what uses may be made of them.

THE NATION'S CROPS.

National crop conditions suffered a severe decline during July. The wheat crop fell off 221,000,000 bushels. The prospective yield is now placed at 940,000,000 bushels, which is only 23,000,000 bushels more than last year's crop. The spring wheat crop promises slightly more than half a crop, being reported at 53.9 per cent. This compares with 79.6 per cent last year, and 75.9, the ten-year average condition. Conditions of other crops August 1 this year, compared with August 1 last year, follow: Corn, 81.7 and 78.5 per cent.; oats, 76.5 and 82.8 per cent; barley, 73.6 and 82 per cent; white potatoes, 75.1 and 79.9 per cent; hay, 91 and 82.3 per cent.

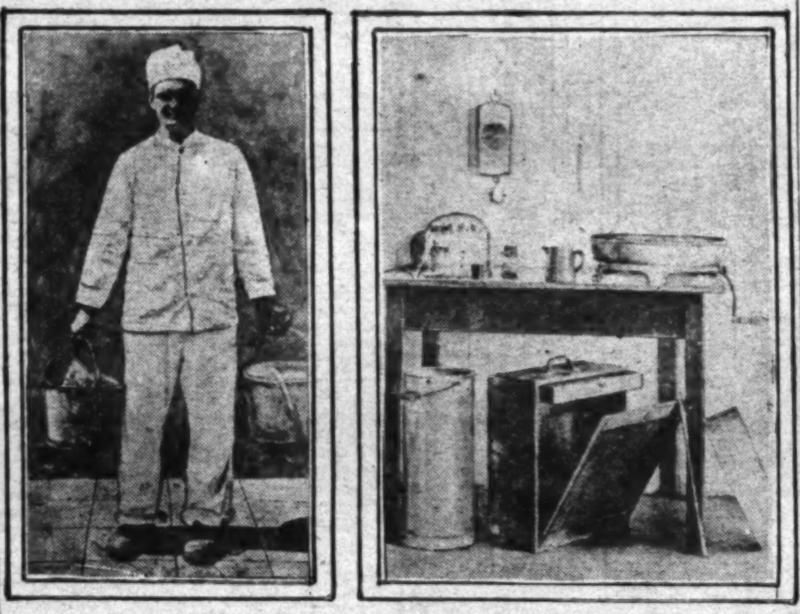
TRIALS OF A COUNTY AGENT.

A county agent in one of the Eastern States believes in diversified activities. He reports as follows for one month's work: "Burnt up ninety gallons of gasoline, five quarts of oil, had six punctures and one blow-out. Trailer broke away and upset load; pig fell out of the car and was caught with difficulty, afterwards jumped from sty and was run over by an auto. Buried three pigs with all the profits and lost $28 besides. Tore best trousers getting over pasture fence; broke watch crystal loading corn planter; but outside of a few minor troubles had a very satisfactory month's work."

It is estimated that 6000 livestock animals will be shown at the coming Los Angeles livestock show.

THE FINE ART OF CARING FOR COWS ON TEST FOR PRODUCTION.

BY H. S. HOARD.



An official cow tester and his outfit.

IN THESE days of high pressure methods of feeding and caring for dairy cows under test as to their production, it is well to get down to the first principles, and study closely the function of milk production.

Most of the beginners in the game of testing and many of the older men fail to understand the fundamental principles of milk production and go into heavy feeding with eyes blind-folded by a lack of knowledge of a few very important but simple facts.

The factors which contribute toward the production of large milk records can be divided into three large classes, viz.: Conformation of Animal, Constitution of Animal, and Care.

CONFORMATION OF ANIMAL.

It is well to get down to first principles and analyze the purpose of a dairy cow when studying her conformation, and to keep this in mind throughout every phase of the business of dairying, from the selection of the breeding stock to the marketing of the milk.

The purpose of a dairy cow is to convert a maximum of roughage and grain (which is unsuitable for the consumption of many in its raw state) into milk. In other words, a dairy cow is a machine into which is "stoked" rough feeds to be converted into highly-concentrated, refined food for human consumption. The first consideration, then, is to select cows that are constructed along the proper lines, just as a manufacturer selects the proper type of machine which will best perform a given task.

Many of the factors which go to make up heavy milk production can be greatly improved by proper care and environment, but conformation is not one of these. Conformation depends largely on heredity and cannot be improved by proper feeding or care. Therefore, cows of proper conformation must be bred or selected for this characteristic, as improvement through improved conditions cannot be made except in a very limited way.

The selection and breeding of cows for conformation was taken up in a previous article and, as this article deals with the care of dairy cows, I shall not consider it here. I have mentioned conformation in order to show the necessity of having a "properly-shaped machine" for producing heavy milk records.

CONSTITUTION IMPORTANT.

The constitution of the animal is equally as important as the conformation, for, regardless of the fact that the animal may have the proper build to hold large quantities of feed, and an udder capable of converting this feed into milk, if she does not have the necessary constitution to digest large quantities of feed or to pump large quantities of blood through the udder she will not be a heavy milk producer.

Milk is produced from blood, that is to say, the blood carries the food which passes through the stomach and intestines into the udder, where it is deposited and converted into milk.

It is vital, therefore, to have a strong constitution which will properly digest large quantities of rough feed, so that there will be a large amount of milk-producing elements in the blood. It is also equally important that there be a heavy flow of blood to carry these milk-producing elements to the udder.

Constitution is a matter both of inheritance and environment. A poor constitution can be improved to a limited extent by proper care and feeding, and by the same token a good constitution can be injured, and very materially, by improper care.

The mechanical indications of a strong constitution are: A good spring of ribs, a deep, wide barrel, a large heart girth, good width of chest and a large and regular pulsation of blood in the veins of the neck.

An animal may have these, however, and still the digestive tract will not function properly, owing to improper care.

WHERE CARE COMES IN.

Under the heading of care I am including feeding and handling of the dairy cow, as both are under the control of the dairyman in charge of the animal.

The fundamental principles of proper feeding and handling are to give the animal the maximum of the milk-producing feeds which she can digest and to care for her so that every organ in her body functions properly.

The four essential factors are proper housing, feed, cleanliness and environment.

Dairy cows when under test should be kept in a large, roomy box stall, well bedded down with straw. It should be well ventilated, but not drafty, screened to keep out the flies and preferably equipped with an electric fan to keep it cool on hot days, if maximum results are to be obtained.

Flies are a heavy drain on the vitality and the nervous system of good dairy cows. The hide of a heavy producer is invariably soft, thin and tender, and flies are a constant annoyance, so every precaution should be taken to keep the cows free from flies. Screened stalls, a liberal use of a good fly killer, fly traps and blasts of air from an electric fan will do much to prevent the losses in milk production due to flies.

When one sees the barns in which California cows have produced large records it sometimes seems that the question of proper housing is not of very great importance, but it is self-evident that, had these same cows been housed in cool, dry, comfortable quarters, free from flies, they would have made even larger records.

THE DIET QUESTION.

Charles Cole, one of the most successful if not the most successful, record-making feeders in the United States, can be properly called a "bovine dietititian." Every sack of grain is tested by him chemically to ascertain the amount of protein, carbohydrates and fat it contains. It is true that every sack is labeled by the manufacturer, but as it is impossible to get grains that are uniform in chemical content, the percentages given on the sacks are merely approximate. It is impossible for every farmer to have a chemical analysis made of his feeds, as the trouble and cost makes it prohibitive, but this is mentioned merely to show how important it is to know definitely what each animal is receiving.

Every sack of feed should be examined before it is dumped into the mixing bin to see that it is sweet and free from mould. Sacks of feed in the same shipment will vary in sweetness, and some sacks may become moldy or sour in storage, so it is always advisable to examine each sack before dumping.

STUDY COW'S TASTES.

"In feeding cows on test the most important factor is washing the individual cow," says H. L. Redd, the successful feeder for W. J. Higdon of Tulare.

If, as has been said, "the eye of the master fatteneth his cattle," it is equally true that "the eye of the master maketh big milk records."

Cows vary in their tastes and their requirements just as humans do, and the

A LARGE DAIRY PLANT IN WHICH GOATS FURNISH ALL THE MILK.

BY H. S. HOARD.

THE writer had a most interesting visit at the Goat'Airy in Los Angeles a few days ago. There are about 100 goats in milk on the place, which is said to make it one of the largest goat dairies in the United States.

It is an interesting sight to see the goats rush pell mell into the feeding barn, each going to her own stanchion. This feeding barn is unique. There is a trap door in the floor. The milking goats are given a large amount of alfalfa hay, which they pick over, taking out the choicest parts. When they have had their fill, the remainder is put down through the trap door into a hay rack which stands directly below, where the dry stock and yearlings are kept.

At the rear of the goats is an iron screen-covered gutter, into which the droppings fall. The iron screen keeps the animals clean.

As soon as the does go to their stanchions, a man starts brushing them with a steel wire brush which removes all the loose hair. The does are not milked in the feeding barn, but are taken one at a time into the milking-room, which is white enameled, and is kept as clean and sanitary as a kitchen.

The udder and hind quarters of each animal are washed before milking is begun, and the first milk drawn from each doe is put into a separate dish and fed to the kids. The milk is put into a cooler packed in ice, as soon as it is drawn.

The bacteria count per cubic centimeter averages, according to the proprietors, about 2500, which is less than is required for certification. By using such careful methods in handling the milk, it is made free from any "goat odor," and could not be told from rich cow's milk.

The herd is headed by the buck Inkyo Yusef, a Nubian buck of exceptional quality and size. His sire was Scriventon Belerophon, who was imported from England. His dow was Talassa, claimed to have the highest milk yield of any Nubian doe in America. Dr. Gregg, who is said to be the "daddy of the Nubian goat industry in America," declared that Talassa was the finest doe he ever had in his herd.

Inkyo Yusef weighs over 200 pounds and stands thirty-six inches high at the withers. He has a short coat, and his kids all show this desirable characteristic. His doe kids are large, and rangy and have large, well-shaped udders and teats.

HARVESTING SILAGE CORN.

Corn that is to be used for silage should be as nearly mature as possible without becoming so dry that it will not pack firmly and ferment properly. Corn cut at the same stage as that at which it would have been cut for fodder has made a good silage. This stage is indicated by browning of lower leaves and denting of kernels. Some farmers prefer to cut their corn at a slightly greener stage. Corn that is much drier than this will require considerable water to make it pack well. Green corn will invariably produce an acid or sour silage. Furthermore, the feeding value of corn increases as it approaches maturity. Silage from green corn is neither so palatable nor so nutritious as that from the more nearly mature crop. Sorghum should be cut for silage when the seed is well matured.

HEALTHY PIGS FROM TUBERCULOUS SOWS.

A number of swine experiments by the Bureau of Animal Industry recently have been completed or have been continued sufficiently far to make possible the announcement of results. Recent developments along this line follow:

Tuberculosis among brood sows does not seem to be a menace to their progeny if other exposure to infection is eliminated.

Feces of tuberculous cattle have been found to be the most dangerous tuberculous material to which hogs are exposed under natural conditions.

It now appears that the disease known as thumps in young pigs may in some cases at least be the result of intestinal worms, which in the larval stage migrate to the lungs, causing pneumonia. Some very thorough work leads to that conclusion, and research is now being directed to prevent infection of suckling pigs with this parasite.

The disease causing the birth of immature and hairless pigs seems to be most prevalent in the Far West. Its investigation is being continued.

It appears from experiments with hog-cholera virus and the ways in which cholera spreads that pigeons and similar birds are unlikely to transmit hog cholera.

In the field of meat inspection, the cause of ham souring has been worked out.

Canning sausage in oil has been investigated, and rules governing the preparation of this product have been adopted.

Bacteria in the carcasses of hog-cholera hogs have been studied.

The process of dehairing and washing hog carcasses in packing establishments has been investigated and measures adopted to prevent dirty wash water from entering the wound in the neck and penetrating the blood vessels.

Studies of trichina in pork have been continued, and the results, which obviate the necessity of microscopic inspection for trichina, have been used as a basis for revised meat-inspection regulations.

The best flavored pork is obtained from feeding skim milk. Next to this corn, barley, oats, peas and wheat produce good meat. Potatoes, the by-products of flour mills, beans and the like are not so desirable.

MOVE TO IMPROVE THE STOCK RANGE.

"The most constructive move ever made to secure the proper administration of the stock ranges of the Western States is due to the foresight and ability of Arizona stockmen." This is the statement made on his return from the recent Salt Lake convention by D. W. Working, Dean of the college of agriculture of the University of Arizona. The convention, which was called by President C. P. Mullen of the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association, after an extended and thorough discussion of the various problems of the national forest grazing areas and the open range, adopted a preamble and resolutions expressing the conclusions of the delegates present.

The preamble recited the well-understood facts that the "indiscriminate grazing of the public lands has resulted in a great reduction of forage;" that this indiscriminate grazing "has been brought about by the lack of supervision by the Federal government;" and that this lack of adequate administration of the public domain has resulted in "great economic loss to the nation."

A patch of barley, which can be cut as needed, leaving two or three inches of stalk on the roots, will be found handy for the fowls this fall. Turn over the sod and sow the grain broadcast, sprinkling it with the hose until it gets a start, then irrigate by flooding.

Farm News of the Great Southwest

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

RIVERSIDE.—One of the big new features of the Southern California Fair to be held at Riverside, October 7 to 11, will be the farm bureau demonstration tent. This will be both an interesting spot and an educational adjunct to the fair. Here will be shown by specialists the proper handling and cooling of milk, the grade milch cow competition, and testing milk for butter fat. There will be a miniature dairy and creamery maintained and a visual course in better methods given with special demonstrations. Also the pig clug work will be shown and pigs will be shown here and judged. Poultry production, feeding and culling will be shown with a demonstrative exhibit. Seed selection and treatment and testing seeds for germination will be featured. Pruning deciduous fruit trees, rodent control, septic tank construction and many other phases of better agricultural methods will be demonstrated.

POISON A SUCCESS.

SAN BERNARDINO.—Sodium arsenite as a destroyer of the Argentine ant and many other pests of deciduous and citrus fruit trees is more than fulfilling the fondest hopes of fruit men and of the government experts who spent several months in this county searching for a remedy for this type of pest. In addition to other depredations, the Argentine ant is a protector of the mealey bug. The latter secretes a honey dew valued by the ant who in turn protects it from its enemies. As the mealey bug is one of the worst enemies of the fruit grower, the destruction of the ant is doubly desired. The arsenite is mixed with molasses and is eagerly eaten by the insects. Farm Adviser B. W. Shaper recently distributed 500 cans of the poison among the citrus growers at Grand Terrace, and is today in receipt of applications for 750 more cans. The arsenite is the result of tests and investigations by the agricultural experts extending over a period of several months.

REDLANDS LIVE STOCK.

REDLANDS.—There is a greater interest in live stock among the farmers of this section than ever before and more high-grade cattle have been brought to the farms here in the past few months than ever in the past history of dairying in the upper San Bernardino Valley. Hollow Hill Farm, between Redlands and Colton, owned by George W. Wilder, has just received another shipment of pure blood Guernsey cows from New York State. The herd is now one of the best in the West, and the sire of the herd was one of the features of the big live-stock meeting held recently at Ontario. There has also been a number of fine cows and bulls brought into the county through the co-operation of the farm bureau. The herds of this section are being carefully worked over, the boarder cows being culled out and every effort being made to increase production and put the dairy business on a sounder, broader business basis than before. A. Gregory has ambitious plans for adding more high-grade stock to his Marigold Farm.

WATER IS LOW.

COVINA.—With less than 700 inches of irrigating water coming from the San Gabriel River last week, to be divided among all users, the amount allotted to the Covina Irrigating Company is 107 inches. The amount has not been so low for thirty years. Mr. Edwards, secretary of the company, said that generally there is such a large amount of water at this time of year that the water is not measured, because there is more than enough for all. But the water this year has been measured since early spring. The Covina Irrigating Company stockholders, as well as all ranchers in the valley, are in good shape for water, in spite of the shortage from the canyon. The Covina Irrigating Company pumps are producing nearly 800 inches steady flow. Some of the wells have lowered a little, but not appreciably. Because of these pumps there is no grove that is suffering for water.

DISCUSS METHODS.

RIALTO.—Rialto growers are just now giving much thought to the best methods of fertilization in the citrus groves and at a meeting of the Lytle Creek Water and Improvement Company, the subject came up for general discussion. Herbert W. Johnstone said that after consulting the superintendent of the J. E. Brown ranch at Riverside, Prof. Vail of the Riverside Experiment Station and other authorities on the matter he was growing a crop of whip-poor-will peas in his citrus grove, hoping the experiment to impart the needed humus to the soil by turning under large tonnage of green manure thus saving much expense for fertilizer and cost of hauling same to the ranch. Kenneth MacRae, Sr., gave an account of his visit to the Fisher ranch at Monrovia, stating that Mr. Fisher has four acres of seventeen-year-old navel trees and two cares of Valencias and that he sold last season's Valencia crop for $6000 and this season's navel crop for $8000. Mr. Fisher has not plowed, cultivated or harrowed his ranch for fifteen years. He simply basins in an abundance of stable manure and takes off these phenomenal crops. Between these two methods of fertilization there is ground for much interesting research and a lively group of citrus men will continue their study and experiments until they have real knowledge.

MORE FUMIGATION.

POMONA.—Because of the reduction in the cost of cyanide and of the more abundant farm labor there will be an increase in the amount of fumigation done this year by the citrus growers, according to F. G. Wyman of Claremont, manager of the Growers' Fumigation and Supply Company of Pomona, who has made a careful survey of the prospects for fumigation this season. Already more than 5000 acres of oranges and lemons have been signed up for fumigation this summer and fall in the Pomona district and additional acreage in the valley will bring the total fumigated by this co-operative organization to more than 11,000 acres. Two new fumigation companies, one at Glendora and one at Charter Oak, have been organized among the growers in those districts and the addition of these areas will bring about 6000 acres under the direction of co-operative fumigation enterprises. Last year the fumigation work was handicapped by the high cost of supplies and the scarcity of farm labor. This year both of these conditions have been remedied and an additional amount of fumigation will

DUCKS RUIN RICE.

TULARE.—Ranchers of the Wasco district who have been growing rice this season declare heavy damage has been done to their fields by ducks and other game birds and say if there are the usual numbers of these birds this fall their crops will be ruined. They have asked the State Fish and Game Commission for advice on the best methods for curbing the evil. As nearly all of the growers of the Wasco district are individually small owners, they declare they cannot afford to follow the system said to be in use in Butte county, of employing aviators to scare the birds from the fields.

WANTS CALIFORNIANS TO ATTEND SHOW.

The National Dairy Show, to be held at Chicago, October 6 to 12, will be the most complete and notable of all dairy shows. It will include a thousand of America's choicest dairy cows and every department of the milk industry, production, manufacture and sale will be set forth.

Col. W. R. Skinner, manager of the show, has asked Dean H. E. Van Norman of the University farm at Davis to organize a part of Californians interested in the dairy industry to go East to the show together. Dean Van Norman proposes that those desiring to go in a party secure reservations on the Overland Limited train via Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Northwestern to Chicago, for the train leaving San Francisco October 2 and arriving in Chicago October 5 in the afternoon before the show opens. He proposes that those from the southern part of the State secure reservations on the Salt Lake train No. 2, leaving Los Angeles the same day, October 2, and which joins the Overland Limited train at Ogden.

Reservations should be placed through the local ticket agent for tickets, both railroad and sleeping car. A slightly-reduced rate may be secured by the purchase of a so-called all-year tourist excursion ticket, good returning any time within the year. Sleeper car ticket can only be bought one way at a time. Request should be made for reservation in the "Dairy Show Sleeper" by local ticket agent wiring the Consolidated Ticket Office, 50 Post street, San Francisco. Persons hoping to go are asked to notify Dean H. E. Van Norman, Davis, Cal., or S. H. Greene, California Dairy Council, 268 Market street, San Francisco.

LAYS OUT FINE ESTATE.

COVINA.—Ellen Beach Yaw, famous concert singer who makes her home in the Covina Valley, is enthusiastic over the results obtained from a system of irrigation just installed on her property in Valencia Heights, south of the Covina district. Miss Yaw said last week that her property had previously been above the pipe line of the local water system, but that Fred Douglass, a local civil engineer, had solved the problem and water was now available for every portion of her property. Ornamental trees and a system of landscape gardening is to be a part of the improvements to be made at once by the well-known concert singer. Her property is planted to lemons. Miss Yaw said that she had made arrangements to build herself a home on the property, which would probably be done during the coming winter. It is a location that commands a view of the whole valley and is especially adapted to the growing of lemons.

RECORDS OF GRADE COWS TO BE KEPT.

The live-stock department of the University Farm at Davis has started a new "Record of Production" for grade cows similar to the record maintained by the University of Wisconsin. It will be conducted in connection with the county cow testing associations, the university to have absolute authority in questions as to eligibility of cows, authenticity of records, etc. A fee of $1 will be required upon application for entry of any cow and on completion of a record period of ten months (allowing two months of the year for an animal to be dry) the University of California will issue a certificate of record production for cows that have qualified. At each monthly test the tester or owner of the cow that is entered shall mail to the University Farm a report of the milk production and fat test for the testing day, blank forms being furnished by the university.

Until January 1, 1911, cows may be eligible that are of either grade or "scrub" breeding. After that date only cows sired by a registered dairy bull will be accepted.

To qualify for a certificate cows with first calf and under three years of age at the time of freshening must produce in ten consecutive months a minimum of 300 pounds of butter fat.

Cows with second calf or more must produce a minimum of 350 pounds of butterfat in ten consecutive months.

In addition to the fat production, a cow to qualify for the certificate must carry a calf at least five months of the ten-month period.

Any cow that is known to have tuberculosis will not be allowed to qualify for a certificate.

To be allowed to continue the test, any cow in normal condition must produce a minimum of thirty pounds of fat for cows with first calves, and forty pounds of fat for older cows, during the first month of the test.

The owner of cows to be entered shall agree not to use or dispose of their male offspring for breeding purposes.

Copies of the rules and regulations governing the plan may be obtained from Prof. Clarence V. Castle of the University Farm, Davis, Cal.

HEAVY HORSES SCARCE.

While there is a surplus of light horses on the farms of the United States, there is still a notable deficiency in heavy, desirable draft horses, say horsemen of the United States Department of Agriculture. Last year, they say, there was a tremendous decrease in mares bred, but during the spring of 1919 a very large percentage of good mares were bred, which is expected largely to meet the future demand for horses of the better type.

BARREN SOWS.

Give a full dose of Epsom salts. Cut down the feed and give five grains of iodide of potash night and morning for ten days. Keep the boar away for a month. Then put him in a slat pen next to the sow. If after this treatment she does not breed, it is best to sell her for meat—but not for a breeding animal.

Herefords bought by Oakland man.

Part of a collection of fifty head sold by C. B. Harris of Los Angeles to S. R. Crow of the northern city. They are mostly daughters of the bull Repeater.

LIVE-STOCK BULLETIN.

BY H. S. HOARD.

The Merritt-Bowers Company of Tulare recently purchased a herd of 160 registered shorthorn cattle in Arizona. Before shipping them to their ranch, F. S. Hall of Perris, Amos Sykes of Murrietta and Frank E. Collier of Wildomar, accompanied Mr. Bowers to inspect the herd and make selections. They report that this is a fine lot of cattle and state that the quality and breeding of the animals is above expectations. Mr. Hall purchased sixteen head, including the bull, Knight Avon 2d, a son of the noted Carpenter and Ross bull, Knight Avon, who was grand champion at the international, and was a grandson of Whitehall Sultan. He is a grandson of Imported Lady Laura. There are three choicely bred milking shorthorn females in this lot which Mr. Hall will use as a foundation for a milking shorthorn herd. Mr. Sykes purchased six females and a bull for a foundation herd, and Mr. Collier purchased several, including two bull calves by Knight Avon 2d.

That the Hawaiian Islands are rapidly developing their herds of livestock is shown by the large number of animals that have been exported from the United States to these islands in the past two years. Had it not been for the restrictions imposed by war conditions there would no doubt have been an even larger exportation. However, since the signing of the armistice, there has been a steady resumption of purchases by island buyers, indicating that there is a steadily growing demand for more livestock of the better sort. H. W. Rice, a prominent Hereford breeder on the islands, has recently purchased two young bulls from the University Farm at Davis. They were sired by Hopeful Prince 2nd, who was reserve grand champion at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

William Wrigley, Jr., owner of Catalina Island, and who has probably set more jaws to wagging than any other man in the United States, has a fine farm at Lake Geneva, Wis., consisting of 600 acres. He recently bought the Poland China boar Clansman from L. H. Glover of Kansas City for $15,000 to add to his fine Poland herd.

The Ireland Ranch, Owensmouth, has decided upon January 31, next, as a sale date for the disposal of fifty head of registered Durocs at public auction.

The Conejo Ranch at Newbury Park has recently secured the services of George Waltmeyer, a prominent Duroc breeder of Iowa, to take charge of the swine department on the ranch. Mr. Waltmeyer has been one of the most progressive breeders in the great State of Iowa, and with the facilities of the Conejo Ranch will do great things in California.

A son of Madame Schumann-Heinke, the noted diva, has recently purchased an eighty-acre ranch in the Natomas district, where he will breed Duroc swine.

Alfalfa is a great feed for the brood sow in summer and winter.

Allow the breeding stock plenty of exercise and keep in a medium fat condition.

MANGE ON SWINE.

Mange on animals can be controlled by stirring a pint of coal oil into a half tub of warm soapsuds. With a cloth bathe the skin where the mange has made the hair fall out. Only a few applications are required to effect a complete cure. A mixture of lard and turpentine is also good, but neither coal tar nor turpentine should be used alone, as they are likely to blister the skin and do more harm than good.

The fewer sows kept together during the breeding season and until farrowing time the better.

They Must Be Healthy

The cows with the big production records are first of all healthy cows. Perfect health is more responsible for their scores than breeding or any other single factor.

It is a fact that more than 80% of the poor milkers in almost any dairy can show remarkable gains in milk production by the most simple home treatment and observation.

Such common and dreaded ailments as Abortion, Barrenness, Retained Afterbirth, Scouring, Lost Appetite, Bunches and such other complaints as arise from low vitality of the digestive and genital organs are readily eliminated by simple home treatment and judicious use of KOW-KURE. Almost all diseases can be reached by this wonderful medicine. The cow can then thrive on Nature's food and increased milk flow is inevitable.

You can add hundreds of dollars to your milk income by spending a few dollars yearly for KOW-KURE. Send for our valuable free book, "The Home Cow Doctor." It gives directions for the use of Kow-Kure in each disease—also contains a wealth of general information valuable to any cow owner.

MERRITT BOWERS CO., Tulare, Cal.

MANY WILL ATTEND WATER CONFERENCE.

TULARE.—Practically all interests of the San Joaquin Valley will be represented at the water conference which is to be held here September 5 and 6 under the auspices of the Tulare Board of Trade. This is indicated in the flood of replies which has been received here to the general invitation which was sent out last month, in which the general purposes of the conference were outlined.

Supervisors of Kings, Kern, Tulare, Fresno and Merced counties, officials of irrigation companies, ditch associations and other organizations have indicated their intention of being present. Individual water appropriators from all parts of the valley also will be represented in large number, according to these letters.

No programme for the congress has been mapped out by the Tulare officials and every effort will be made to prevent the discussion following any fixed line or becoming colored from the viewpoint of any group of interests.

State and Federal reclamation service officials are to be in attendance and will discuss the governmental aspects of water control. As a result of this conference it is hoped that at least a preliminary organization can be formed which will have for its purpose a comprehensive survey of the water resources of the San Joaquin Valley. With this survey in detailed form the next step would be conservation under State or Federal regulation, or through co-operation of California and United States officials. Already there has been some correspondence with the United States Reclamation Service, and it is indicated that conditions are now such, with the coming of peace, that engineers can be assigned to the necessary preliminary work.

Officials of the Tulare Board of Trade, through whose efforts the conference has been called, point out that water conditions in all parts of the valley are such that steps must be taken for saving the overflow of the streams, which now goes to waste, and for its distribution under such conditions that present rights will be protected and the irrigable area materially extended. In many parts of Fresno county the service from ditch companies has been either curtailed or suspended. The Lindsay-Strathmore irrigation district's water supply is in litigation because of controversy with the irrigators of the Tulare section. In the Tipton-Pixley section the water table is lower than at any previous time. Vineyard owners of the Dinuba district are on short water rations. Pumps are being lowered in all parts of the Tulare county citrus district.

These are all conditions which can be corrected, it is declared, if a comprehensive plan is outlined for conservation of all the flood waters of the valley.

Property values are such, and the extent of the irrigable area is so large, that, while construction work commensurate with the project may be large in the aggregate, its area cost will be comparatively small.

It is probable that the first steps to be taken will have to do with the various legal aspects of the case, and some system whereby the present rights on all streams can be tabulated. These would have to do with the temporary use of the water by power companies, as well as the amounts now put to productive use by individual claimants and ditch and irrigation companies.

Collection and tabulation of this latter data would be, in itself, a task of some magnitude, but it can be carried on at the same time with investigations into the total acre feet of water which would become available under a general plan of storage.

In view of the size of this task, which promises to become one of the great irrigation enterprises of the country, if undertaken, the Tulareans are urging that the first conference be as representative as possible, with a view to starting the work without further delay.

WEATHER-CROP BULLETIN.

The Weather Bureau review of conditions in the Southwest for the week ending August 19 states that showers in Arizona and fogs along the coast have bettered some crops, especially sugar beets. Drought conditions elsewhere have caused early shipments of lambs, dropping of prunes, and abandonment of some alfalfa fields in the San Joaquin Valley because of a shortage of irrigation water. A heavy crop of peaches is being harvested, and walnuts, cotton, grapes, rice and cattle are in excellent condition.

A very handy bolt box which may be carried to any part of the farm for repair work, can be made of a box about ten by sixteen inches and six inches deep. Fasten a leather strap across the top for a handle. Divide one end into two small compartments for nuts and washers. The lumber for the box should be at least an inch thick.

AIM TO IMPROVE NUT CROPS OF THE STATE.

Officials and members of the California Walnut Growers' Association will co-operate with the Federal Department of Agriculture in the coming investigation of the nut crops of the United States. An appropriation of $20,000 has been made for nut improvement work, especially upon pecans, almonds, Persian walnuts, black walnuts, hickory nuts, etc. The nut industry is relatively new in the United States and probably no tree industry of equal importance presents more difficult problems to the grower. Investigations will be extended to all classes of nuts grown in commercial orchards in the areas of the United States to which they are adapted. The English walnut and almond present many of the same cultural problems as the pecan and the black walnut. The two latter species, although native, have been under cultivation a comparatively short period of time and are, perhaps, less well understood than the English walnut and the almond. Furthermore, the English walnut and the almond under American conditions present many problems which can not be solved by the experience of European cultivators.

Among the first activities undertaken will be a survey of the territory to which such species as the black walnut, the shagback, shellbark and pignut hickories, the butternut, hazelnut, and filbert are indigenous for the purpose of producing superior varieties for propagation. The first will be a survey of a portion of the walnut, almond, and filbert growing districts of the Pacific Coast to determine the varieties best suited to the respective districts and the most economical methods for harvesting, marketing and utilizing the crop.

LOW FREIGHT RATES FOR STARVING CATTLE.

Emergency freight rates to afford relief in drought-stricken territory of the Northwest have been announced by the Railroad Administration. They may mean the difference between millions of steaks and roasts in as many homes throughout the country and dry bones scattered over the farms and ranges of the Northwest. As a result of the rates probably half a million starving cattle will be moved from the stricken regions of Montana, Wyoming and North Dakota to pastures in California and other States, and feed will be shipped into the drought country to sustain other hundreds of thousands of breeding animals.

The emergency rate for feed shipped into the drought-stricken territory is one-half of the regular rate from points on railroad lines serving the destination territory. Practically all kinds of feed are provided tor. Cottonseed cake and cottonseed meal, however, are not included under the half rate.

Fine Art of Caring for Cows.

same chemical content in feeds will not produce the same reactions and milk production in all cows. So do not feed with a scoop shovel, but study the individual taste of the animals.

The best time to make these experiments is when the cow is dry, as her milk flow may be reduced if these trials are carried on when she is in milk. As soon as the cow is dried off start the experiments in feeding. As the time draws near keep increasing the feed gradually so as to get the animal fat, and by the time she freshens she should be on full feed. A fat cow will produce more butter fat than a thin one, as she has a reserve amount of fat for her bodily needs, and the milk-producing elements in her blood are not drawn upon to keep up her body, so can be converted into milk in her udder. It is claimed by some scientists that this fat, known as "sterine," will be converted into butter fat by passing through the udder, and the common expression of "milking off fat" infers that the fat on a cow's ribs is converted into butter fat.

Another advantage of having the cow on full feed a week or more before freshening is that she is used to heavy feeding and is not so liable to be "thrown off from feed," that is, have digestion trouble caused by heavy feeding during the adjustment period after the strain of calving.

WATER AIDS DIGESTION.

An abundance of fresh, cool, clean water should be kept before the animal at all times, as it aids greatly in digestion, helps to keep down excessive heat and fever caused by rich feeds, and keeps the intestines lubricated and washed out.

Succulent feeds are also a necessity in keeping the digestive organs working properly. Silage, roots and fresh alfalfa should be fed liberally.

Some of the heavy producing cows in America have been known to consume from seventy-five to ninety pounds of chopped beets per day.

Cow beets, mangle wurtzels, sugar beets and red table beets are all good. The best results have been obtained in using red table beets, by Cabana of New York and Irwin of Minnesota.

A pound of grain for every three pounds of milk produced is an approximate figure, but this will vary with the individual cows.

Watch each animal and give it as near a correct, chemically balanced ration as possible from the feeds she likes best. Keep increasing her feed gradually, not over one-fourth of a pound at a time. Watch her closely to see if she cleans up her feed well, and see if her droppings and urine are normal. Oliver Cabana of New York took the temperature of his cows twice a day, in order to catch any sign of fever resulting from overfeeding, before it had advanced far enough to cause a decrease in the flow of milk.

USES ONE "LEAN" FEED.

A. J. Stalder of Riverside advises feeding a ration rich in protein three times a day and a ration lean in protein once a day, as he says he has found that his cows tire of the rich feed at every feeding, and when fed the lean feed once a day clean up their feed better at every feeding.

A varity of feeds tends to stimulate the cow's appetite and causes her to eat larger quantities of feed. It is well to change occasionally from carrots to sugar beets and to change grain feeds from time to time. However, the latter is more liable to effect a change in milk production than the former.

Tompkins Wright of Wisconsin goes through his barn several times a day and throws a few slices of carrots, sugar beets, turnips and other roots to his test cows and says that he is well repaid for his effort in the increased amount of milk produced.

Old process oil meal should be included in every ration, as it is a milk-producing food and tends at the same time to keep the digestive tract open and functioning properly. Care should be taken not to feed too much, as it will cause an excessive looseness of the bowels.

CLEANLINESS NECESSARY.

It might be supposed that every man who had an idea of putting his cows on official test would realize the necessity of cleanliness in his stables and yards. It is surprising, however, to see how many dairymen disregard or overlook this important factor in the production of large milk records. It seems almost useless to say that the stalls in which cows under test are kept should be kept clean, but many dairymen do not seem to realize that filthy quarters are a detriment to heavy milk yields.

The animals themselves should also be kept clean, not only free from manure, but the dust and dirt should be brushed out of their hair, so as to keep the pores of their skins clean. It is very important that every organ in the body function perfectly, and clogged pores will prevent the normal action of these organs.

At the Elm Grove farm, owned by Oliver Cabana, Elma, N. Y., the temperature was taken twice each day of every cow on test. If it was found to be a degree or two above or below normal, two men would give the cow a massage of olive oil, alcohol and witch hazel for an hour or two.

This may seem superfluous to the average farmer, but we know that massage is beneficial to humans, so why not with cattle? It is evident that Cabana achieved wonderful production records, high above the average, with his cows, and it was undoubtedly very largely due to the little details which he looked after which are overlooked by the average breeder.

ENVIRONMENT HELPS.

The environment in which cows are kept while under test is of utmost impoitance. It should be constantly kept in mind that the animal is being crowded with large quantities of feed and that she will be easily thrown off her feed by undue or unusual excitement.

Watch the animal at every milking and note if there is anything that tends to make her nervous. If so, take pains to see that these things do not occur.

Dairy cows are naturally of a nervous disposition, and especially so when being heavily crowded with feed.

It is well to keep strangers out of the barns where the test cows are being kept. Many cows are especially afraid of women, as they are not used to having women about, and the fluttering of ribbons and laces and the rustle of the clothing seem to make them nervous.

Never permit loud talking, swearing, running or other unusual excitement in the stables or pastures.

Keep dogs and other animals out of the barns where the test cows are kept.

See that there are no direct drafts blowing onto the test cows, and do not leave lights burning in the barns all night. I have known each of these things to throw animals off their feed and mar production records.

An official record is supposed to show the maximum production ability of each animal, and the maximum results can only be obtained by the most careful attention to details.

UNIVERSITY HOPES TO REPEAT TRIUMPH.

Included in the University Farm exhibit at the State Fair, starting today, are a number of beef cattle which are being prepared for exhibition at the great International Live-stock Show at Chicago this year. These animals are being shown at the State Fair before being shipped East for the greatest competition in live-stock industry in this country. The lot includes about a dozen steers and Martin heifers, which have been bred and developed at the farm. They will give California live-stock enthusiasts an opportunity of seeing them during the finishing process, which will prove most interesting to those who look to California to take her place as a great meat-producing State.

This stock is being conditioned by Alex McDonald, the veteran herdsman at the farm, who has won many trophies in this line. The most notable of his efforts was the winning of the Grand Championship at the International Live-stock Show in 1917, when the great beef steer, California Favorite, was awarded the Grand Championship ribbon over the best steers produced in the United States that year. The University farm also had the reserve champion steer. The admirers of McDonald, who are numbered by the legion among stock men in the State, have every hope that he will repeat his great success at this year's show.

The opportunity to see these animals at the State Fair will be taken advantage of by many of the live-stock producers of the State.

SWISS NEED STOCK.

"There is a general shortage of all classes of live stock, meats and dairy products in Switzerland with the exception of sheep, which have increased in number since the beginning of the war," state George A. Bell and Turner Wright, representing the United States Department of Agriculture in Europe.

PLANT NOW FOR THE LATE VEGETABLES.

BY A. E. HENDERLEY.

Dependence on one's own resources while the world is busily engaged in trying to cheapen food costs is imperative, and if every owner or renter of land from a forty-foot city lot to a thousand-acre ranch fully realized what a saving he could make by raising even a part of the vegetables used on his table, there would be few unused plots in the vicinity of crowded centers of population.

This is especially applicable to California. Many who have adopted this State as their home still cling to the mistaken idea that a garden is practicable only at certain portions of the year. As a matter of fact, most of the staple vegetables can be planted and brought to successful maturity at any time in the lower half of the Golden State, except at certain periods in the very hot and very cold districts.

During the war patriotic persons in charge of the campaign for home gardens discovered that the chief reason for the lack of interest in raising a garden as far as the urban population was concerned was because the majority of city dwellers rented their places from month to month and were disinclined to plant a garden and leave the fruits of their labors to their successors in occupancy if they chanced to move before the crop was gathered. This argument was combatted by an appeal to the citizen's patriotism as opposed to his cupidity during the war, but the best reason why the non-gardening citizen's position is untenable in this case is that, as a result of war gardens, there has sprung up a traffic in garden selling among tenants of city homes. The man who rents a place in the city or suburbs plants a fine garden. If he moves he sells the vegetable plantation to his successors, paralleling the custom of selling growing crops on farms.

Remember, therefore, that there are a score or more vegetable and feed crops that can be grown at any time during the year in Southern California, except in the reclaimed desert regions, where it is inadvisable to grow leaf or root vegetables in the heat of summer, or in the high mountain valleys, which are visited with snow and frosts of such severity in winter that even root vegetables suffer.

These all-year crops include: Table beets cabbage, Swiss chard, chives, water cress, endive, garlic, seasoning herbs, kale, kohl-rabi, leeks, lentils, lettuce, millets, mushrooms, mustard, onion sets, parsley, parsnips, field peas, radishes, salsify, spinach, sunflowers, turnips.

And here are the vegetables that can be planted in late August and the first part of September and brought to maturity, in addition to the above list: Brussels sprouts, chicory, field corn (or sweet corn,) cucumbers (not after September 1), chayote, gourds, Irish potatoes (not after September 1.) A crop of squash, the Thanksgiving-pie kind, can also be raised with little danger of being nipped by frost if planted on or before September 1.

At this time of year, when the change from summer to the more delightful California winter is either on or about to begin, many gardeners rest from their labors, waiting until the time comes for sowing for winter crops. But no garden truck is as much appreciated as that which matures about Thanksgiving time, when vegetables are high as well as delicious in flavor. Three months is about the period required for maturity of the ordinary varieties of shallow-rooted crops, and if the gardener desires to beat the Jap to it during the holidays, now is the time for planting his crops, especially beets, kohl-rabi, onion sets, lettuce, parsnips, spinach, turnips, radishes, corn, squash and potatoes. But hurry about getting in the latter three crops, for an unusually early frost may catch them if planted after the first week in September. The first frosts on the coast region in Southern California do not generally appear until December 10, but, once in several years, Jack Frost has been known to descend from the mountains as early as November 15.

PUT UP A SILO.

For several years hay has not only been scarce but very high priced. It is exceedingly difficult to buy high priced hay and fed with a profit for either milk or beef production. A more liberal use of silage will do away with this high cost of hay and the succulent ration will give better returns. Along with the silo should be used leguminous hays or fodders. It has often been said, and truthfully, if you have silage then you also need alfalfa or clover and the soil needs it too. It has proven a wise and economic policy to combine these two great feeds in order to raise stock cheaply and well.

Four factors limit the growing of currants and gooseberries in the United States: The white-pine blister rust, the currant maggot, the lack of moisture, and the heat of summer.

GOING AFTER GARDEN SLUGS WITH TORCHES.

With the eradication of the snail, Helix pisana, well in hand, County Horticultural Commissioner Gorton of San Diego county contemplates utilizing the results against the common garden snail, Helix aspersa, and garden slugs. He states:

"As regards snail and slug eradication, now that we have gotten pretty well along with the employment of burning as a control measure, we expect shortly to complete some experiments which we commenced sometime ago in spray solutions for this pest upon plants or trees which could not very well be destroyed. Whatever our findings turn out to be will probably apply also to the common garden snail, Helix aspersa, and to slugs, but just at this time I do not know that we have anything very different from methods ordinarily employed. We have always found in greenhouses that working with mercury bichloride at one to 1000 strength was excellent, both as a contact killing agent and also from a certain amount of caustic effect from what residue that would be deposited upon the leaves. The lime barriers have been used in the park and in other gardens. This method has been varied by adding enough Paris green to the lime to color it to a sea-green color. This, it is believed, adds to its effectiveness. We have hopes of finding a safe copper sulphate solution which will be strong enough to be effective.

LIVE-STOCK SHOW TO BE STOCKMEN'S RODEO.

Meetings of breeders' associations, stock raisers and farmers already scheduled to be held at Exposition Park, Los Angeles, during the Los Angeles live-stock show, indicate that the exposition of what the West is doing in the way of bettering the meat-animal industry is to be a time of fore-gathering, discussion and "resolutioning" by leaders in the better live-stock movement from far and near.

The Holstein breeders are to stage a big meeting and sale on October 24, during the show. Zone No. 5 of the California Cattlemen's Association will meet on October 22, at 10 a.m. October 23 is Farm Bureau Dairymen's Day, and the Duroc Swine Breeders' Association may meet during the show.

Manager C. R. Thomas of the show has issued the very complete premium list to prospective entrymen, sending the booklets to breeders as far East as Indiana, North to Canada, and South to Mexico.

Entries in all sections other than the poultry, pigeons and rabbits divisions close September 20. Entries for the last three divisions close October 1.

A cash premium of $25 will be given the exhibitor having the best decorated quarters in each of the following divisions: cattle, horses, swine, sheep and goats.

In the cattle divisions, the following breeds are listed in the premiums: Shorthorns, Aberdeen-Angus, Hereford and Red Polled. In the dairy-cattle division, Holstein, Ayrshire, Jersey, Guernsey, Dutch belted, Brown Swiss and Shorthorns may be entered. In the horse and mule lists are Percheron, Belgian, Shire, Clydesdale, Hackney, Arabian, Coach, jacks, jennets, ponies, work teams and mules in harness. Berkshire, Poland-China, Chester White, Hampshire, Yorkshire and Duroc-Jerseys are listed in the swine division. Rambouillet, Corriedale and American or Delaine merino sheep may be entered. In the middle wool sheep breeds, Shropshire, Hampshire, Southdown, Oxford, Cheviot and Dorset horn sheep are listed, and in the long-wool breeds, Romney, Lincoln, Cotswold, and Leicester breeds are listed.

Anglo-Nubian, Angora, Saanan and Toggenburg goats are provided for in premiums, as are saddle horses, rabbits, poultry and pigeons.

CARE OF SWINE AT VACCINATION TIME.

Feed the hogs moderately for twenty-four hours before vaccinating. Do not fast them, as this will cause them to be wild and hard to handle.

During the hot weather, vaccinate early in the morning or towards the evening, rather than in the middle of the day, when it is hot.

The hogs should be kept in a clean, dry place before vaccination. This is better both for the hogs and for the persons who are to handle them.

If possible, group the hogs according to size. This will lessen the chances for error in estimating the doses of serum to be injected.

Provide a box or table on which to place the bottles of serum and virus, disinfectants, syringes, etc., where they will be convenient, but not likely to be upset.

PARTITIONED WAGON FOR HAULING SWINE.

When hogs are crowded promiscuously into a wagon for hauling to market, injuries and casualties sometimes result. Especially in hot weather should proper methods of loading market wagons is used.

A wagon box fifteen feet long and five and one-half feet wide, with a movable partition as shown in the illustration is a good one for hauling hogs. Large animals are placed in one of the compartments, and smaller hogs in another, being careful not to put so many hogs in one space that they cannot have a little freedom of movement. Of course everything depends on the care the driver takes in starting, stopping and driving over rough roads. If sudden stops are made, the danger of injury to the animals is greatly increased.

SHEEP EXHIBITS.

Educational exhibits for sheep raisers showing models of equipment such as barns, sheds, fences, feeding troughs, etc., are being furnished by the Division of Animal Husbandry, United States Department of Agricuture, to cooperative sheep specialists in various States for use at county fairs and at gatherings of farmers. The object of the exhibits is to demonstrate in as practical a way as possible the best methods of managing sheep. Large illustrations are included, showing specimens of the different breeds and types of sheep. Samples of wool, illustrating the different grades, are also included in each exhibit.

Rhodes grass has been found one of the best alkali-resistant forage grasses extant, but it does equally well on almost any soil.

GROWING OF MORE WHEAT IS URGED.

Some interesting observations on wheat-growing in California are set forth by the Agricultural Department of the Sperry Flour Company in the most recent bulletin issued in connection with its "Plant More and Better Wheat" campaign.

The only soils in California that are not suitable for wheat, says the bulletin, are the peat and muck formations on the deltas of the San Joaquin and Sacramento rivers. With all other soils, it is mostly a matter of preparation of soil, of seed selection, of moisture, drainage, and time of planting. The bulletin then goes on to give some figures and a bit of history, saying:

In 1918, 88 acres of very thin red gravelly clay near Chico produced 514 sacks of Baart wheat. In the same year 60 acres of sedimentary adobe near Stockton produced 1320 sacks of wheat, and many thousands of acres of black loam land in the Tulare Lake region produced as high as 25 sacks of Sonora wheat per acre. The Moreing Brothers on their Natomas properties in 1918 had a field of nearly 1000 acres that produced 25 sacks of Early Baart per acre.

The 1919 harvest has shown some equally satisfactory results. Nearly every type of soil has produced its quota of wheat. Failures have been due to lack of rain, foul land, poor seed, late planting, hot winds, poor soil condition, and drainage rather than to lack of fertility of the soil.

The old claim that California wheat lands have played out is a fallacy. This year many fields are yielding as much as they did thirty-five years ago. A large amount of California's original wheat land is now planted to orchards, vineyards, alfalfa and rice, but there is still available many thousands of acres of pasture land, sandy and clay loams, that will produce six to twelve sacks (13 to 26 bushels) of wheat per acre at a good profit to the grower.

A study of California soils shows many varying types with loams predominating. We have loams, clay loams, sandy loams, fine sandy loams, gravelly loams, and heavy stony loams. We also have considerable adobe soil—including clay adobe and black adobe. The adobe soils, the loams, red clay loams, and some of the sandy loams are good yielders of wheat. The rolling lands from Merced to Chico along the Sierra Nevadas are mostly clay loams of varying composition, and capable, when not too stony or too steep, of being so farmed as to produce good wheat crops.

The clay adobe of the Montezuma hills, the black adobe lands around Stockton, above Sacramento, and in the Salinas Valley will produce and have produced large yields of wheat. The alluvial soils on the west side of the Sacramento river are well suited to wheat as are also the lands of the west side of the San Joaquin Valley.

Boiled down to the last analysis, any soil that will grow grass, trees, shrubs, barley, or vines will also grow wheat.

Whether wheat is the most profitable crop to raise on these various soils is quite another problem, the bulletin then goes on to say. There are many factors influencing the decision that every farmer must make regarding his crops. Many figure that if they can get 20 sacks of barley per acre they are doing better than if they produced 10 sacks of wheat.

Let us see what that will mean in 1920, says the Sperry agricultural expert. Presuming that the price of wheat will be $4.00 per cwt. and barley $2.25 per cwt., and that bags will cost 20c each, harvesting $3.00 per acre, we find:

WHEAT.

10 sks. @ 130 lbs.	1300 lbs.
13 cwt. @ $4.00	$52.00

EXPENSES.

10 bags @ 20c	$ 2.00
Threshing	3.00
Total	$ 5.00
Net per acre	47.00

BARLEY.

20 sks. @ 100 lbs.	2000 lbs.
20 cwt. @ $2.25	$45.00

EXPENSES.

20 bags @ 20c	$ 4.00
Threshing	3.00
Total	$ 7.00
Net per acre	$38.00

These figures, the bulletin declares, are very conservative. There is little soil in California except the low delta lands that will produce more than 15 sacks of barley per acre while there are many thousands of acres that will produce ten or more sacks of wheat. There are also thousands of acres of California grain land that will yield more actual pounds of wheat than barley.

Land that is foul with black oats will produce more barley than wheat, but land that is not well drained, or on which the water stands for many hours, or in localities which have late frosts, is not as suitable for barley as for wheat.

The introduction of early maturing wheats has made it possible to produce 10 to 14 sacks of wheat on land that previously yielded 8 to 10 sacks of Bluestem wheat. Lack of rain during April has always decreased the yields of Bluestem and Club wheats in California—while early wheats are far enough advanced in their growth not to be so affected.

The wheat farmer must know better how to prepare his soil, the bulletin concludes. He must choose the kind of seed most suited to his soil and climatic conditions. He must plant good seed at the proper time. He must see that his land is properly drained—and finally, he must eliminate weeds, black oats, smut and other foreign substances that cut down his yields and affect the value of his crops.

DODDER IN ALFALFA HARD TO CONTROI.

One of the worst weed enemies to alfalfa is dodder, and this pest afflicts many San Joaquin and some Southern California growers. Burning off infected areas or using sheep to graze the fodder closely are the two best methods of control.

Dodder seed germinates in the ground and the young plants soon attach themselves to the alfalfa seedlings, causing the stem to wither away. Care should be taken by seed growers not to get the dodder mixed with alfalfa seed.

Some authorities recommend the plowing up of areas infected with dodder. But when a herd of sheep can be procured it is often a good plan to turn the herd into the alfalfa and allow the animals to graze the alfalfa closely. This sometimes results in a permanent injury to the stand, however, and this method is only successful in the early stages of the pest.

Watch the alfalfa for dodder, and when it appears, sprinkle the affected spots with kerosene, and burn them. This effectually wipes out the dodder, and does not permanently injure the stand of alfalfa. Sometimes a blow torch is used successfully.

BEAN IMPORTS AND EXPORTS..

Exports of California beans for the first time in many weeks exceeded the imports of Kootenashi Japanese beans on August 20. New York reported export of 388 tons of California beans to Greece and eighty-nine tons to Rumania on that date, and Tacoma and Seattle received 115 tons of Kootenashis.

One way to keep good farm help is to provide comfortable, clean quarters for each man or family, separate from others.

An "IDEAL" Silo Pays for Itself

"My IDEAL GREEN FEED SILO is the biggest money-maker on my farm, and I wouldn't be without it for ten times its cost. My saving on feed bills the first year has more than paid for it." So writes a man who has learned by experience that the "IDEAL" silo returns big dividends.

Before buying a silo, investigate the "IDEAL." Get acquainted with its superior features. Learn why it is more economical, lasts longer and makes better ensilage than any other.

Only the choicest lumber goes into the construction of the "IDEAL" silo. The staves are of selected California Redwood, tongued, grooved, beveled and splined by special machinery.

Refrigerator doors with "three point contact" make the "IDEAL" absolutely leakproof. They come flush with the inside walls of silo, thus preventing air pockets and spoiled silage. The ladder is securely fastened to the silo at one side of the doors. This permits easy access.

Heavy, soft-steel hoops, placed thirty inches apart, bind the silo into a true circle. Malleable iron lugs and long upset threads allow easy adjustment. Self-supporting roof — airtight, watertight foundation joint and other features too numerous to mention here—put the "IDEAL" in a class by itself.

Fill out and mail the coupon. It will bring you, free of obligation, a valuable booklet on silos.

Insure Your Water Supply

The best way to maintain a constant, never-failing supply of water is by means of a Pacific Redwood Tank.

Pacific Tanks have the everlasting qualities of the redwood of which they are bulit. As everyone knows, water preserves instead of deteriorating this wood. The patent non-shrinking system with which our tanks are fitted absolutely prevents leakage under all conditions.

Pacific Machine—Banded Wood Stave Pipe is the best and most economical for irrigation systems and pipe lines on the farm. Made in all sizes from 2 inches to 30 ins. in diameter. Write for wood pipe circular and specifications.

BROAD FIELD OPEN FOR TRACTOR EXPERTS.

Rapid development in the tractor industry, following an enormous demand, has created a new and lucrative vocation—that of tractor expert. Although almost every tractor dealer employs service men to go out into the field at the call of their patrons when trouble is encountered, the great expense of sending service men long distances into the country will be borne by either dealer or owner only until the independent tractor expert hangs out his shingle, and not longer.

These experts are being turned out in State agricultural colleges, in tractor schools conducted by counties, cities and dealers, and their education is being finished in the distributing branches and salesrooms.

When the farmer has trouble with his tractor, instead of sending many miles to the dealer for a service man, he usually has recourse to the garage repairman in the nearest town. This system, too, is unsatisfactory, as the auto repairer goes out of his line to do the work. Frequently the trouble is essentially a tractor trouble, and perhaps the breakage of an important part. The garage man in such a case may do more harm than good.

A tractor expert should not only possess a bona-fide certificate of graduation from a reputable school course in tractor repairing and operation, but should present credentials or reference from a firm of tractor dealers for whom he has worked as a practical repairman.

Farmers' sons, especially when they show an aptitude for mechanics, make ideal tractor experts, and, when they have received the necessary instruction and have passed the period of practical experience in tractor repairing, might find lucrative employment in caring for neighborhood tractors, operating the farm machines at times when they are not called upon in their professional capacity.

Using two kinds of power at once.
While the tractor plows, the mules do the harrowing and plow out the corners.

TRY TO WEAN WEST FROM GOOD OLD SACK.

Finding some confusion in getting estimates of crop production when western producers insist on computing grain and some field crops by the sack," and easterners will have nothing but the bushel in talking of the same crop, the Federal Department of Agriculture is trying to get western farmers and handlers of produce to adopt the bushel as their standard.

"Ninety million people in forty States of the Union think, talk and measure by bushels, the bushel being the standard unit of measure throughout this area. The bushel measure is definite, and Congress and the States have stabilized it and specified the number of pounds of different commodities legally constituting a bushel. The census figures of crop production have all been reduced to bushels for all commodities for which legal weights have been used and doubtless will be used until a different unit of measure has been adopted.

"A sack—the unit of measure in some sections—is not definite and cannot be made so, except by legal enactment, standardizing the volume and then, in turn, standardizing the weight per volume for different commodities. Oranges and apples are thought about and talked about in boxes, dried fruits in pounds or tons, and it is doubtful if custom will permit of a material change. In handling green fruits in large quantities the ton is the most practical unit of measure, but for small quantities the lug box is in general use. As the lug box varies in size from thirty to forty and fifty to sixty pounds, there is more or less confusion unless market quotations are made on the basis of lug boxes of specified sizes.

"The cental or hundredweight appears to be the most practical unit of measure and is coming into general use in the purchase and sale of grains and vegetables. If the bulk handling of grain becomes general, as now seems likely, the sack will disappear and the cental or bushel will take its place."

GET A GOOD OPERATOR.

It is a mistake to assume that any mere boy can run a tractor in thoroughly efficient manner. Only a proficient operator can handle a tractor properly, but many of these are young men in their late teens who have been schooled by experts in the repair and operation of the machine.

CARE REQUIRED IN GROWING BROOM CORN.

BY GEORGE P. CLEMENTS.

California-grown broom corn is not meeting the market on account of the careless methods of our growers. Manufacturers claim that the brush is too coarse; too uneven and that no care is taken in its harvesting or seed selection or variety in planting. Orders for thousands of tons are being placed in the Southeast and Middle West, all of which should be available right here at home.

The Palo Verde, Imperial, Perris and Antelope valleys are all proven broom corn districts, in fact, climatic conditions are ideal for this crop. The price per ton is sufficiently remunerative one would think to insure the necessary care in its cultivation and harvest; the great fault seems to be in the lack of experience in the grower and his refusal to profit by experience to persevere in its production until success crowns his efforts.

No crop demands greater nicety in its production. Our climate fogless as a rule, where broom corn is best grown, produces a bright green brush and relieves the agriculturist of this greatest of all worries; color is assured him no matter what grade, autumn rains are also little to be feared in curing his crop. The early preparation of his harvest, the uniformity of the stand, both in growth and quality of brush, the correct time to break down, cutting and threshing, all are lessons to be mastered through study and experience; in fact, it requires technique as well as intelligence to grow broom corn. No crop if planted right responds to cultivation better or is more sure than broom corn on summer fallow. It seems to do the best; is uniform and stands up well under our hot weather; if irrigation is resorted to, it should be with the greatest care, and the character of the soil should be studied, as irrigation will tend to coarsen the brush, particularly in heavy soils. If the soils of the field vary, so will the crop and thus destroy grade and price.

The farmer without experience should experiment with a quarter acre and not attempt more until he has mastered the art. It will surprise him what a careful season's study of a broom corn crop will do for him in the mastery of the agricultural knowledge of his soil; its response to cultivation, its varying character and requirements, its poverty or wealth in plant food are all demonstrated as in no other crop I have ever studied. The Department of Agriculture, Standard Broom Corn, No. 958, deals with the culture of this all important crop and it should be in the hands of every broom corn producer.

THIRD OF FARMERS BILLS ARE PASSED.

Out of the forty-five bills affecting the farmer introduced into the last session of the State Legislature, exactly one-third, or fifteen, were passed and signed by the Governor, thus becoming laws. Of the remaining thirty, two-thirds or twenty failed to pass both houses, while the other ten which received favorable consideration failed of signature by the Governor and automatically became pocket vetoes.

Bills introduced but failing to pass both houses probably need but little consideration in this report although the list includes a number of special merit which failed either on account of lack of support or because of appropriations carried. This being a year of retrenchment, bills carrying appropriations had an especially difficult time.

Among the meritorious bills included in this list may be mentioned a bill to increase the minimum compensation of horticultural inspectors to four dollars per day and commissioners to six dollars, an emergency appropriation to fight new dangerous pests or diseases, the Glenn County Farm Bureau sheep-killing dog bill, a bill appropriating money for the study of tractors and agricultural machinery at the University farm, and one providing for high-school tractor courses under the State Board of Education.

A survey of the list of bills passed but becoming pocket vetoes reveals some very interesting and some important legislation which the Governor saw fit to veto. Among such bills are the pure seed or seed labeling bill, an appropriation for sending an entomologist abroad to seek parasites for the mealy bug, a very important bill providing for the organization of drainage districts, legislation requiring the use of pure-bred bulls on the range, squirrel-extermination districts, a plant-disease survey, and a coast counties experiment station.

Among the bills passed and signed were one to make up the Los Angeles liberty fair deficit, an appropriation for the Los Angeles Exposition, a bill fathered by the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau providing money to fight the codling moth, and a bill appropriating $30,000 for initial payment on land for a University Farm at Riverside.

LOOK OUT FOR KNOCKS.

When the tractor is run without proper lubrication or cooling, wear in the bearings develops, and when a bearing is loose it is poor policy to operate the machine. Listen for knocks in the engine which indicate this sort of trouble, and investigate immediately.

Pays Big Dividends
For the first time in the history of the tractor industry, the 4-cylinder, 16-valve engine (valve in head type) is now applied to a tractor. THE TWIN CITY 12-20 with its 16-valve motor actually develops 25% more than its rated horse power.
This new 12-20 is a light-weight tractor that will out-pull, out-last and out-dividend other tractors of equal rating.

TRACTOR DEMONSTRATION PLANS ARE GROWING FROM DAY TO DAY.

AS THE time approaches for the opening of the fourth annual Southern California tractor demonstration, to be held in Los Angeles September 16 to 21, the event assumes larger proportions and greater importance in the farming world. Everything used on the farm, from a huge, twelve-ton tractor to a needle valve, will be on exhibition or in action. The educational features will be unrivaled, and the list of entries one of the most complete of any similar event held in the country.

In a tent big enough to cover half of a city square will be housed an attractive exhibition of trucks, trailers, farm and irrigation machinery, motor parts and accessories, oils and greases, besides exhibits of household conveniences used on the farm.

Within a few days a large restaurant will be built on the show site at Crescent and Melrose avenues for the convenience of the thousands of visitors expected. Other structures for the convenience of the crowds will be built. Precautions will be taken this year so that excessive dust will not inconvenience the visitors. Sprinkling carts will be in evidence.

Every day sees new applications from dealers for space in the big meet, and there is assurance that the exhibit of tractors and implements will be one of the most comprehensive ever held in the State. Some of the dealers have already decided on what they will show. A partial list of the detailed exhibits follows:

EXPERIMENTS BOOST CITRUS CULL PRICE.

More useful products of citrus culls are reported by the Los Angeles citrus by-products laboratory of the United States Bureau of Chemistry which is conducting experimental work.

The problem of how to utilize economically the cull and waste fruit became more acute each year with the development of the large orange and lemon groves. Fruit which is too small or too large, unsightly or misshapen, can not be sold profitably for food. Some fruit is not fit for shipment because of minor defects, such as small bruises, or punctures from thorns or gravel or rough boxes, since such defects become points of infection for bacterial and fungous growths which cause decay. The amount of waste fruit averages from year to year about 3 per cent. of the total crop.

The citrus by-products laboratory was organized at Los Angeles, in 1914, to investigate the possibility of adapting to conditions in California, and improving existing methods for the utilization of waste lemons, to develop new methods, and to make, if possible, new products from the waste lemons, oranges, and grapefruit.

There were one or two small and struggling by-products companies in California when these investigations were begun. These concerns were making no appreciable inroad into the enormous supply of cull fruit available. Since the establishment of the experimental laboratory in Los Angeles, the by-products industry has developed rapidly. Now there are four concerns manufacturing lemon by-products. The plants of these concerns have a capacity of over 50,000 pounds of lemon oil, 500,000 pounds of citrate of lime, and over 1,500,000 pounds of citric acid. Twenty concerns are producing orange by-products to the extent of 6,000,000 pounds each year. These orange by-products include marmalade, marmalade stock, jellies and candied peel.

Improved methods for the manufacture of orange vinegar have been developed by the experimental work. Methods for the production from cull grapefruit of candied peel and juices of excellent quality have been devised. The existing methods for the manufacture of citrate of lime and of citric acid have been improved and adapted to California conditions.

The benefits to the grower of fruit is shown by the increase in the price of cull fruits since the experimental work was begun. Less than five years ago cull lemons could be had in large quantities for $5 a ton, while today they bring $20 to $25 a ton, notwithstanding the fact that a larger quantity is now available. Sound cull oranges could be bought formerly in large quantities for $5 a ton. Now all cull oranges placed upon the market are snapped up quickly at from $20 to $30 a ton.

The per capita consumption of rice in this country for all purposes in years before the war ranged from about six to eight pounds, cleaned weight; sugar ranged from about eighty to eighty-nine pounds; potatoes about 3.4 to 4.4 pounds for all purposes, or, excluding seed, 3.4 bushels as the average for the ten years 1905-1914.

ARIZONA CROPS IN MONTH OF AUGUST.

General crop conditions in Arizona August 1 were better than at any time during the season, according to the Federal crop report issued by L. M. Harrison, field agent for the Bureau of Crop Estimates.

Preliminary estimates of Arizona wheat production place this year's crop at 1,120,000 bushels. This compares with 988,000 bushels last year and 825,000 bushels two years ago. Forecasts of other Arizona crops based on August 1 conditions were announced as follows: Corn, 1,258,000 bushels; oats, 542,800 bushels; barley, 1,640,000 bushels, and white potatoes, 546,000 bushels.

Condition of various crops on August 1, 1919, compared with August 1, 1918, follows: Cotton, 93 and 95 per cent.; alfalfa, 94 and 88 per cent.; pasture, 103 and 77 per cent.; grain sorghums, 93 and 87 per cent.; beans, 90 and 85 per cent.; apples, 90 and 85 per cent.; peaches, 90 and 75 per cent.

TRACTOR PLOWS DEEPER.

It has been found by tests conducted by Federal authorities that, on the average, the tractor plows two and one-quarter inches deeper than horses do on the same soil, thus making available to the plants more plant food. It is found that the average depth in horse-plowing is five inches, with the tractor, seven and one-quarter inches.

TRACTORS AID IN EARLY PLOWING AND PLANTING OF GRAIN CROPS.

BY MARVIN H. LOOMIS.

INDICATING a change in barley growing practice since the tractor came into general use, farmers growing barley in Southern California are plowing earlier than usual this year. It has been the common practice in the southern part of the State to wait until the winter rains have softened the ground before putting in the seed. But farmers who are fortunate enough to have ample machine power available are taking time by the forelock and are breaking up their land and preparing to get in their seed to take advantage of the first fall rains.

The new agriculture demands that the old California practice of waiting for softening rains and then running a disc over the ground and then seeding for barley be abandoned and more progressive methods be substituted. A campaign of education towards better barley culture is being carried on in the various farm centers of the State. The farmer who raises barley is being induced to plow, not merely disc the ground, unless, of course, large disc plows are pulled by tracklaying tractors, in which case a sufficient depth would be attained.

The ideal marley seed bed is one where the bottom is firm, and the top two inches is loose, in order that the seed may not drop below a point not penetrated by the first rains or a light irrigation. It has been heretofore held by some barley raisers that all that is needed is to lightly disc up the ground, thus loosening the top two inches. But it is bad practice to allow the seed to drop on a hard plowsole below the top mulch.

However, very deep plowing is not essential in barley culture on average soils and under average irrigation conditions. Plows of less draft may be used in breaking the ground for barley than for most crops. Barley is a shallow rooted crop and depends on the top three or four inches of soil for its nourishment.

No more waiting for rain.
A three or four-bottom disc plow, pulled by a tractor, is ideal for turning over dry soil for barley.

Tractors developing a drawbar pull of from twelve to fourteen or fifteen horsepower, specifying two fourteen-inch bottoms, can pull three eight or ten-inch plows in breaking ground for barley. The hitch should be so adjusted that the top six inches of soil are loosened. Large tracklaying machines can operate ten or twelve disc plows and at the same time draw a disc, to further prepare the seed bed, in one operation. With the smaller tractors, it is generally necessary to go over the ground with a disc after plowing, and before drilling or broadcasting the seed, but, because heavy draft is not needed, more than the usual number of cultivating discs can be pulled. It is generally possible to add one bottom to the usual equipment of tractor plows for the medium sized tractors, in plowing for barley.

The advantages of early seeding for barley is obvious. The sower of early barley takes advantage of the earliest rains which start his barley on toward early maturity, to be marketed, when feed is high and scarce. But the farmer has heretofore been disinclined to put his horses to the laborious task of breaking ground hardened by the summer sun. With the willing tractor at work, conditions are different. The machine goes merrily on its way up the field, uncomplainingly turning over hard, dry soils.

Exact costs of plowing an acre of ground for barley are hard to assemble because of the varying conditions in the California barley growing regions. In Los Angeles county, it is said that plowing contractors, in past years, agreed to plow, disc and seed barley for $1.75 per acre. This was before farm wages mounted to such a high point. The cost of plowing for barley would undoubtedly be as great now as the plowing, cultivation and seeding costs were five years ago.

Making the seed bed for barley.
This barley raiser uses a tractor to pull a double cutaway disc and a three-section pulverizer in one operation.

Costs of plowing an acre of ground for barley with a tractor have been arrived at under certain conditions in California by the California College of Agriculture at Davis. These costs are based on gasoline as fuel, where now distillate and kerosene are used in most tractors, and these fuels can be obtained at a little over half the cost of gasoline.

These costs were based on two-plow tractors, three plow tractors, and four-plow tractors. For the first, the cost was $1.79 per acre; for the three-plow outfit, $1.55 per acre, and for the four-plow outfit, $1.37 per acre.

The various items of cost for the two-plow outfit were: fuel, .39; grease and oil, .10; repairs, .15; depreciation, .41; man labor, .64; interest, .11.

For the three-plow outfit, the cost items were: fuel, .39; oil and grease, .10; repairs, .13; depreciation, .37; man labor, .47; interest, .09.

For the plow outfit fuel, .39; oil and grease, .10; repairs, .11; depreciation, .32; man labor, .37; interest, .09.

In the case of the four-plow outfit, the costs were less in every case except the items of fuel and oil than the three-plow machine, and the three-plow costs were proportionately less than those of the smaller outfit. Where distillate is used, the costs of plowing for barley would be about 20 cents per acre less.

NEW IMPLEMENT FIRM.

J. C. Spencer and J. D. Haigh, enjoying a wide acquaintance in the implement-selling field, have leased the building, three stories and basement, formerly occupied by Dixon & Griswold, at No. 146-148 North Los Angeles street, Los Angeles, and are now distributing the International Harvester Company line of tractors and farm implements and machinery.

There are more automobiles and more tractors in Southern California in proportion to the population than in any other section in the West.

EFFECT OF GRADES ON TRACTOR POWER.

The difference between plowing with the tractor on level land and on hills, of course, varies according to the soil and horse power of the machine. Generally speaking, however, it is equal to 1 per cent. of the weight of the tractor and implement for every foot rise in 100 feet.

With a tractor weighing 3500 pounds, and a two-bottom plow weighing 700 pounds, on a 10 per cent. grade, there would be a loss of 425 pounds in the effective pull on the drawbar. Where the pull should be about 1666 pounds, it would only show a pull of 1241 pounds by dynamometer test on a 10 per cent. grade.

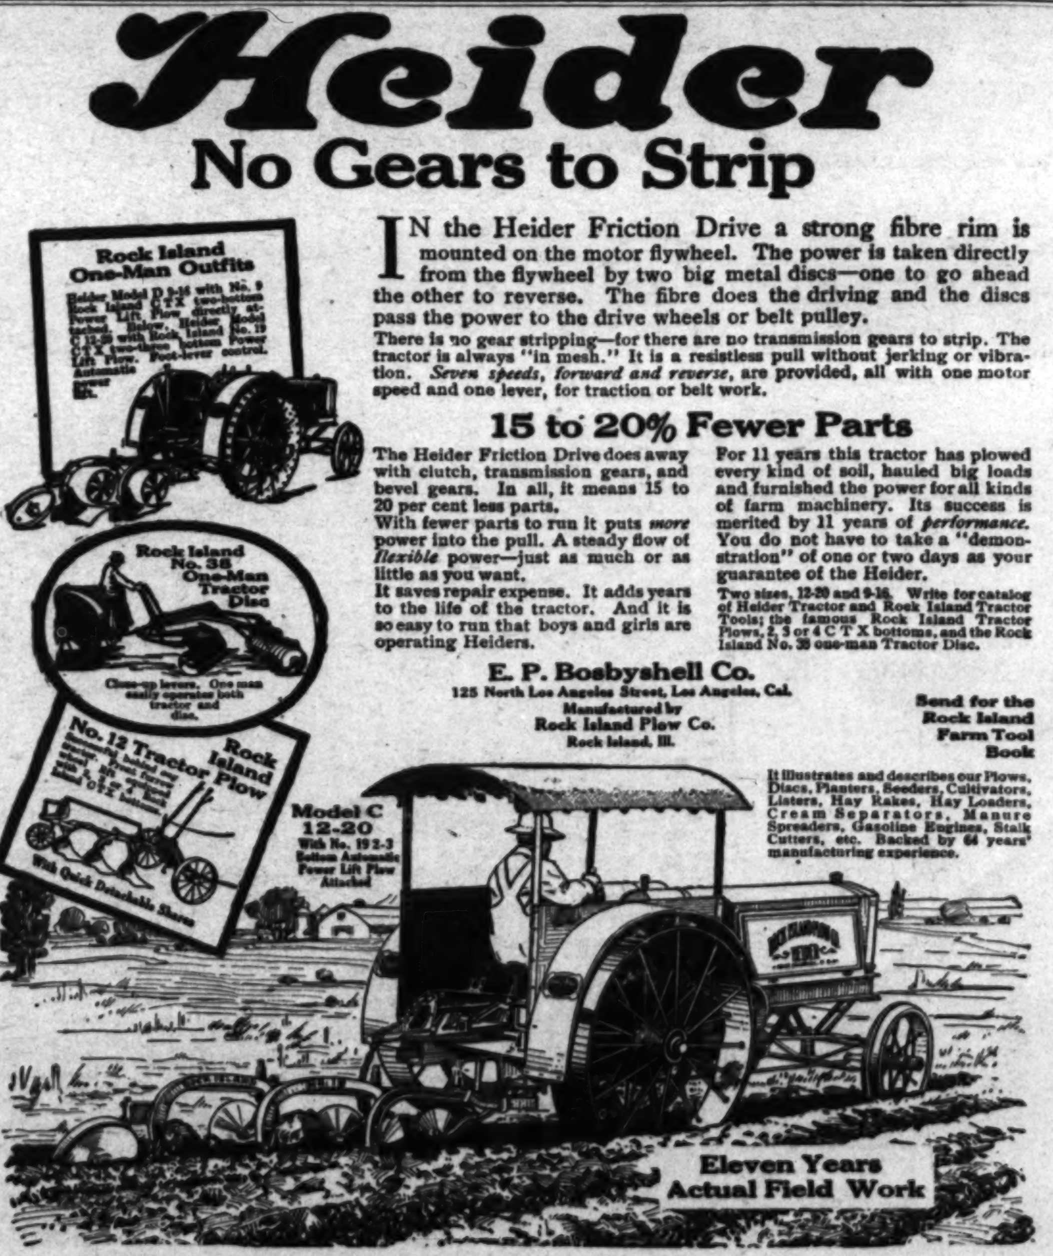
POISON BRAN BAIT FOR THE ARMY WORM.

The simplest and most effective remedy for army worms, say Federal entomologists, is the poison-bran bait, made according to the standard formula as given for grasshopper and cutworm control. It is as follows: Wheat bran, 25 pounds; Paris green or white arsenic, 1 pound; lemons or oranges, 6 finely-chopped fruits; low-grade molasses, such as refuse from sugar factories, or cattle molasses, known as black strap, 2 quarts; water as needed, usually from 2 to 3 gallons.

The bran and Paris green or arsenic are thoroughly mixed while dry. The fruits are then finely chopped and added, and lastly the diluted molasses is poured over the bait and the whole mass thoroughly kneaded and mixed. If lemons or oranges cannot be secured, crushed ripe tomatoes, watermelons or other fruits may be added. The bait should be strewed thinly and evenly over the ground in the path of the advancing worms.

This bait may be used safely in alfalfa and corn fields where it is desired, if possible, to save the crop from the worms.

Clean water for tractor cooling systems is essential. Dirty water clogs up tubes and encrusts the radiation chambers.



Heider
No Gears to Strip

IN the Heider Friction Drive a strong fibre rim is mounted on the motor flywheel. The power is taken directly from the flywheel by two big metal discs—one to go ahead the other to reverse. The fibre does the driving and the discs pass the power to the drive wheels or belt pulley.

There is no gear stripping—for there are no transmission gears to strip. The tractor is always "in mesh." It is a resistless pull without jerking or vibration. Seven speeds, forward and reverse, are provided, all with one motor speed and one lever, for traction or belt work.

15 to 20% Fewer Parts

The Heider Friction Drive does away with clutch, transmission gears, and bevel gears. In all, it means 15 to 20 per cent less parts.

With fewer parts to run it puts more power into the pull. A steady flow of flexible power—just as much or as little as you want.

It saves repair expense. It adds years to the life of the tractor. And it is so easy to run that boys and girls are operating Heiders.

For 11 years this tractor has plowed every kind of soil, hauled big loads and furnished the power for all kinds of farm machinery. Its success is merited by 11 years of performance. You do not have to take a "demonstration" of one or two days as your guarantee of the Heider.

Getting at the Fertile Soil Under the Hard Subsoil.

THERE are vast areas in California now planted to orchards, and adapted to orchard culture, which are underlaid by more or less impervious soil conditions and cannot be touched by anything other than the subsoiler or dynamite.

The roots of trees in such soils are confined to the upper two feet or thereabout, a vast body of very fertile soil being totally unavailable. Conditions responsible for this impervious soil formation are to be traced to our arid climatic conditions, and a lack of sufficient rainfall to soak down beyond several feet. The life of fruit trees, as well as their productivity, may be very greatly increased by opening up such soils for root development.

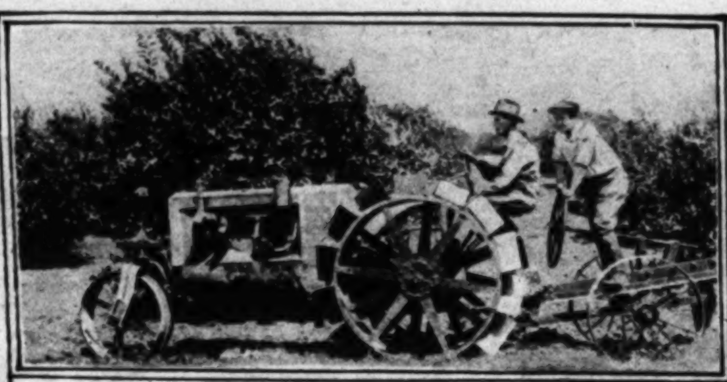
At the present time most of our newly-planted orchards in regions where the presence of an impervious soil layer is ascertained, receive a judicious blasting before the trees are planted. With older orchards, however, where the trees are already well established, many growers are hesitant about undertaking blasting. For such conditions the use of the deep subsoiler is to be advised, and has proven very beneficial.

The subsoiler or explosive opens up the soil to aeration and the penetration of water furnished by irrigation. In many cases, one or two treatments will permanently remedy hard subsoil conditions, with a noticeable response on the part of the tree.

One of the greatest difficulties in the past has been that of obtaining a tool strong enough and one with sufficient traction to put it down deep enough to get results. This has apparently been accomplished, by a number of concerns during recent years, by the use of a stiff shank cultivator bar, attached to a modern tractor.

The subsoiler implement had its inception in the so-called "mole drain" implement as used in the delta regions of the Sacramento Valley. Its use is being attended with considerable success in citrus orchards.

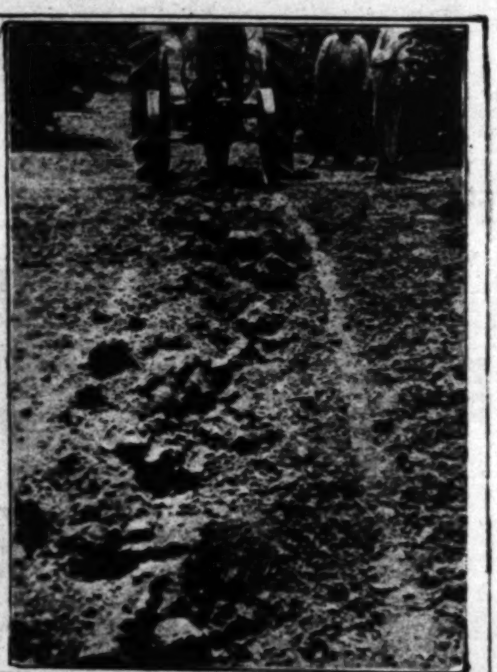
It is customary to plow with the subsoiler once or twice down the row, and crosswise, and thus the objectionable cutting off of feeder roots is reduced to a minimum.



Tractor and subsoiler ready for business. This photograph and the three immediately below were taken on the Dunlap Ranch grove near Whittier.

The tool (a Killefer 44-24-in.) consists of two wheels, a sturdy frame, and a 24-inch chisel with a three-inch hawkbill point. It is drawn by a Wallis tractor. The cultivating done by most orange growers leaves the ground under the six or eight inches that is cultivated, packed and hardened from the water used for irrigation.

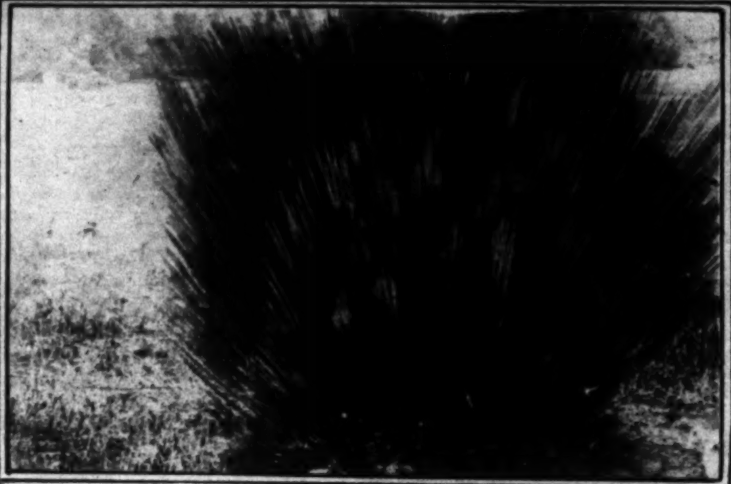
The first step in the subsoiling process is to "drop" the chisel to the requisite depth in this hardened subsoil. This, in the case of the Dunlap grove, was about twenty inches. This is sufficient to break up the ordinary orchard plow pan and allow water to get underneath the cultivated top ground.



The condition of the subsoil of many groves may be judged by the size of the chunks of hard earth thrown out with the deep cracking of the ground on the Dunlap place. Sometimes when the earth is packed to an unusual degree, the ground will be cracked for from three to five feet on either side of the chisel.

Where the subsoil has reached the adamantine condition of hardpan, as in some parts of the San Joaquin Valley, it takes a caterpillar, or other large track-laying type machine, and a big subsoiler like that illustrated to break it up.

Peace Functions of Explosives Demonstrated.



When the charge is too large or is set at too shallow a depth, the surface effect is often quite sensational.

The proper charge of explosive, properly placed, however, should give the maximum cracking and shattering effect without leaving a crater or throwing up a large cloud of dust.

SATURDAY afternoon, August 16, Frank Butler, professional farm and orchard blaster, staged at Ocean Park Heights a demonstration on the agricultural use of explosives. The demonstration was held at the place of C. E. Kelso, who is setting out a hillside tract to orchard trees, and attracted a number of spectators in spite of transportation difficulties brought on by the street railway strike.

The use of explosives in an agricultural way has increased tremendously during the past few years. Probably the greatest hindrance to its more general use is the difficulty experienced in obtaining operators experienced in its use. While the forms of explosives best adapted for agricultural use are comparatively safe to handle and will stand considerable rough treatment, the average farmer is still extremely timid about using them. Demonstrations such as that conducted by Mr. Butler are designed to encourage agriculturists to a greater use of explosives in their farming operations.

Mr. Butler not only showed how to load and handle charges safely, but demonstrated the use of explosives in removing stumps and in loosening the earth in orchard land prior to the planting of the trees. The selection of the proper charge to exert the force necessary to do the work in question is a difficult matter and only comes with experience, as Mr. Butler explained.

In the case of large stumps desired out of the way, from three to five charges located in various parts of the stump and detonated simultaneously electrically give the best results. In the demonstration by Mr. Butler a large eucalyptus stump so treated was lifted out bodily and the pieces were thrown fifty to seventy-five feet from the hole. With smaller stumps one good charge, well placed, may be sufficient and in this case the use of a fuse rather than the battery is advisable, being somewhat cheaper. For blasting out stumps, Mr. Butler recommended a 40 per cent. dynamite or blasting powder, while for orchard blasting a slower acting explosive, such as 20 of 25 per cent. blasting powder, was stated to give better results.

ORCHARD BLASTING.

For orchard blasting and farm use in general the fuse method was advocated and demonstrated. The use of explosives in loosening the soil prior to tree planting has been practiced to a considerable degree during the past ten years, but should undoubtedly be greatly increased. In arid regions natural conditions are particularly apt to favor a cementing and compacting in the lower soil stretches, which result in a practically impervious formation at a depth of from two to four or five feet. These compact formations, which may be either of a hardpan character or of the nature of a plowpan, effectively limit the zone of root feeding by preventing the downward percolation of irrigation water and limiting the aeration of the lower soil areas. There is no question but that hundreds of acres of fruit trees in California are prevented from successful production merely on account of this one factor of hard, compact soils.

And this compacting generally occurs at a depth to which cultural tools do not penetrate. The only practicable way to loosen up these dense subsoils is by the intelligent use of explosives. If done properly and if the soil is well shattered and broken, permitting much greater penetration of air and water, much has been accomplished toward the future success of the orchard. This is particularly true of certain fruits such as the walnut, cherry, and almond, which root deeply and require more soil aeration than certain other varieties. It is also particularly desirable for citrus in order to encourage deep rooting, which is an extremely desirable habit, as it tends to reduce losses from the June drop.

RIGHT AND WRONG WAYS.

But there is a right way and a wrong way to do orchard blasting. In the first place the results obtained depend very largely upon the dryness of the soil at the time of blasting. For heavy soils, particularly, the dryer the soil the better the results, as in a dry soil "pot-hole" formation is reduced to a minimum and the best heaving and cracking effect is obtained. In wet soils of a heavy character, blasting often produces a pot-hole about the charge, the sides of which are so compacted by the force of the explosion as to render them as impervious to water or more so than the original compact subsoil condition. If trees are planted in such pot-holes, they generally do very poorly as for a part of the year at least their roots are in standing water in the pot-hole. The desired effect is a shattering and fissuring which will at once admit of much better penetration of air and water and this is best obtained in a relatively dry soil. The best season is therefore late summer and early fall when summer evaporation has exhausted the soil of its water. When the blasting is done after the trees are established in place, the soil, of course, cannot be allowed to reach any such dryness without injuring the trees. In such cases, therefore, the blasting must be done in a relatively moist soil.

The depth of the charge is very important. In case a thin hardpan formation is being blasted the charge should be placed immediately under the layer. Where the hardpan layer is thick and hard the charge should be about two-thirds way through it. Where there is no special compact layer but the whole soil is hard and tenacious the charge should be deep enough to shatter the soil for from four to six feet deep for orchard trees. This means not less than three feet for the depth of the charge.

The size of the charge is of the greatest importance. If the charge is too heavy or placed too shallow, a "crater" effect is obtained, the earth being blown out and a hole left. The charge shoots up on account of too little resistance from above and the lower soil depths are hardly affected at all. If the charge is too small or too deeply placed, the tendency is for a large pot-hole formation and the effect is too much localised. The soil is apt to be compacted in the vicinity of the charge rather than shattered.

THE PROPER CHARGE.

The proper charge is that which at the desired depth gives the maximum cracking and shattering effect. In this case comparatively little surface effect is to be seen. No crater is formed. No large cloud of dust is sent skyward as is the case when either too large a charge or too shallow a depth are being used. When dynamite is doing its best work for soil shattering the visible effects are comparatively small.

Pot-hole formation cannot be absolutely avoided for no matter how well the work is done, there is a certain sized hole formed about the charge. Mr. Butler is advocating the filling of these pot-holes with a mixture of manure and ground limestone which he believes will prove an extremely desirable source of plant food to encourage deep rooting in the newly-set tree and in addition will effectively prevent the soil from ever running together or cementing again in the vicinity of the root system of the young tree. This mixture can be very easily placed in the hole immediately following shooting.

There is no doubt but that the use of explosives in agriculture is bound to increase as its benefits are demonstrated. Not only does it find a most profitable use in aerating compact subsoils, and removing of stumps, but through its use by a capable operator, ditches may be cheaply dug, ponds and lakes may be drained, boulders may be removed, land cleared, and many other things cheaply and efficiently accomplished, which formerly represented the expenditure of a large amount of effort or which were considered as impracticable to do.—H.G.F.

The place where the stump was. Mr. Butler is standing in a hole from which there has just been blown a heavy mass of eucalyptus roots, most of these having been sent out of range of the camera.

SOUTH LEADS STATE IN CROP CONDITION.

The condition of fruit and nut crops in the southern counties of California was generally better than that of the same crop grown in Northern and North Central California, it is revealed in summarizing the monthly crop report issued on August 1, by the State Department of Agriculture. The average condition of these crops in the ten southern counties was 87; in the remainder of the State, 84.

Walnuts led in the condition column, being an 108 per cent. crop. Figs were second at 101 per cent., and prunes third, at 100 per cent. Other crops throughout the State showed the following average condition: grapes, 99 per cent.; peaches, 98 per cent.; pears, 92 per cent.; apricots, 90 per cent.; apples, 89 per cent.; plums, 80 per cent.; Valencia oranges, 75 per cent.; almonds, 75 per cent.; lemons, 75 per cent.; olives, 65 per cent, and navel oranges 61 per cent.

Crops in the southern counties showed the following condition on August 1.

Los Angeles County—Almonds, 90; apples, 90; apricots, 100; figs, 100; grapes, 100; lemons 75; olives, 70; naval oranges, 66; Valencia oranges, 72; peaches, 90; pears, 70; plums 70; walnuts 107.

Orange County—Apricots, 101; lemons, 75; navels, 80; Valencias, 80; walnuts, 115.

Santa Barbara County—Lemons, 80; olives, 90; walnuts, 105.

Tulare County—Apricots, 103; figs, 101; grapes, 100; lemons, 85; olives, 30; navels, 60; Valencias, 85; peaches, 100; plums, 100; prunes 103.

Ventura County—Apricots 95; lemons, 75; navels, 35; walnuts, 105.

Imperial County—Grapes, 100.

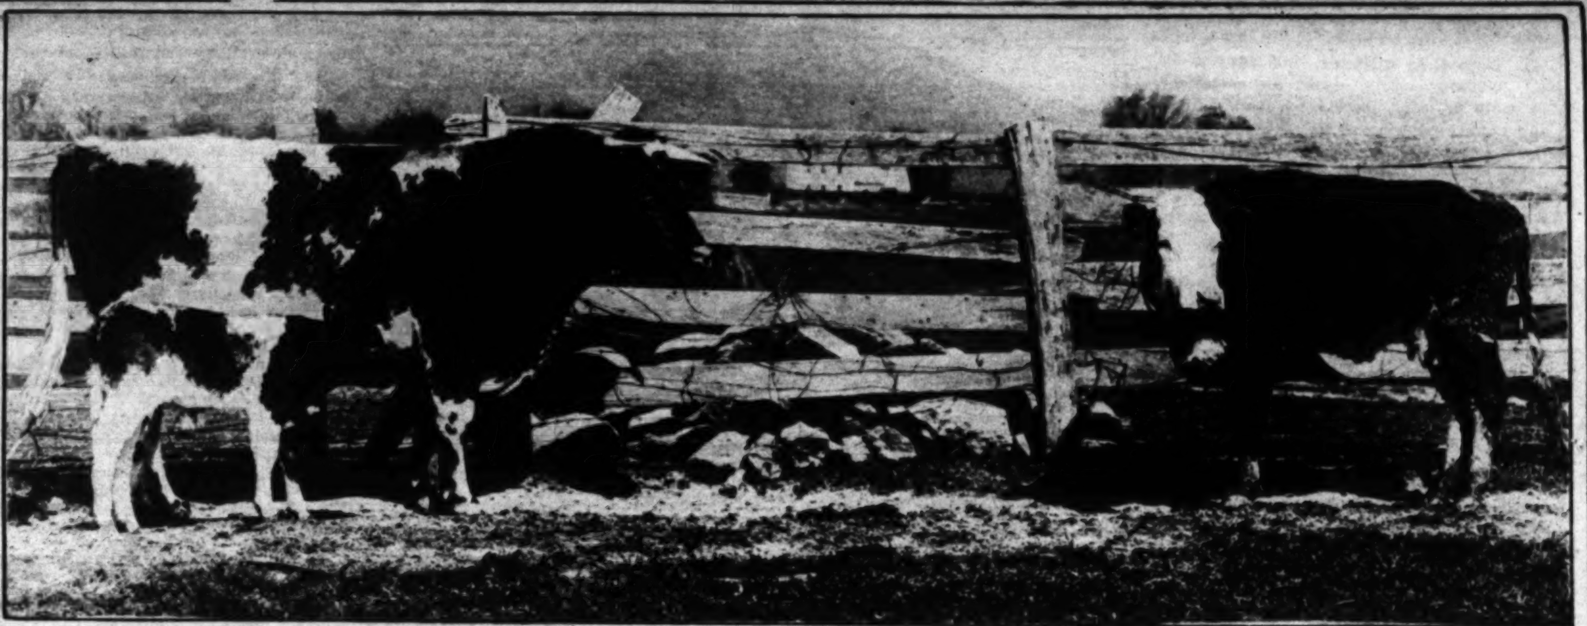
Kern County—Apricots, 100; navels, 75; peaches, 100; pears, 100; prunes, 100.

SOIL REQUIREMENTS.

It is generally agreed to be a mistake to consider that the direct application of a concentrated chemical fertilizer, such as nitrate of soda, to the soil is as effective in securing the best growth and vigor of the plants as would be secured by the addition of nitrogen in the form of organic matter. While nitrate of soda will stimulate trees and bring them from a devitalized condition back to a normal condition, in many cases it will not, however, exert much influence on the soil and, therefore, in order to improve the physical condition of the soil in many orchards, it is necesary to add organic matter.

If crates are used in potato shipping they should be so made as to protect the potatoes from too rapid evaporation and consequent shriveling.

The Sun Is Setting on the Unpopular Scrub Sire.



Notice how much more closely this calf resembles its pure-bred sire than its scrub dam.

THE scrub sire, in the opinion of some ardent exponents of live-stock improvement, has done more than drought or flood, more than insect pest, more than rodent and beast of prey, to reduce the agricultural wealth of the United States, to cut down the money return of the individual farmer from his operations.

But the day of the scrub sire is drawing to its dusk.

Preached against for generations, he is now to be actively crusaded against in every State, in every county, in every community of the United States.

It is the first attempt ever made in any large country to improve simultaneously all classes of farm animals by the use of pure-bred sires of good quality.

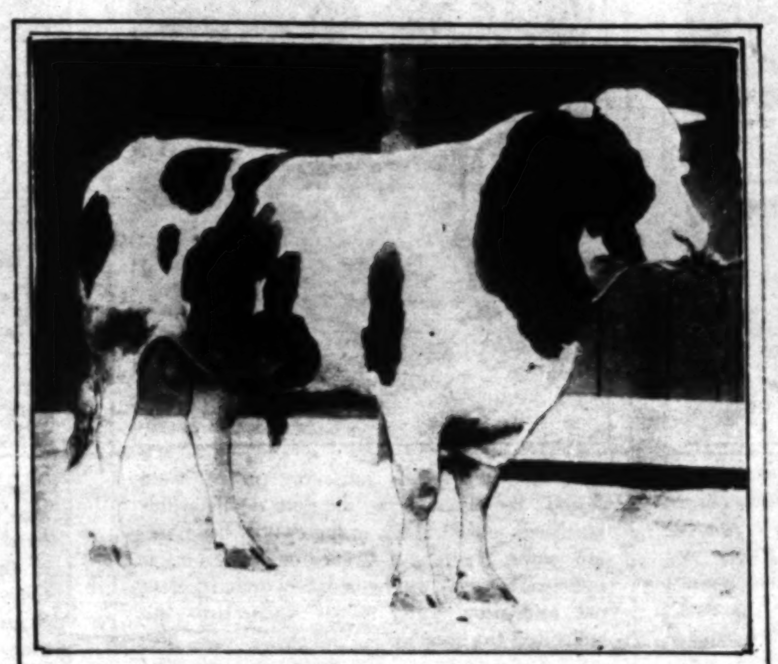
It is a movement that affects every man, woman and child in the United States because it means more food and a better quality of food. Everybody takes a profit—the farmer and stock raiser because he gets more pounds of hog or cow or chicken out of the same quantity of grass and feed, the consumer because there are more pounds of a good meat on the market than under scrub sire conditions.

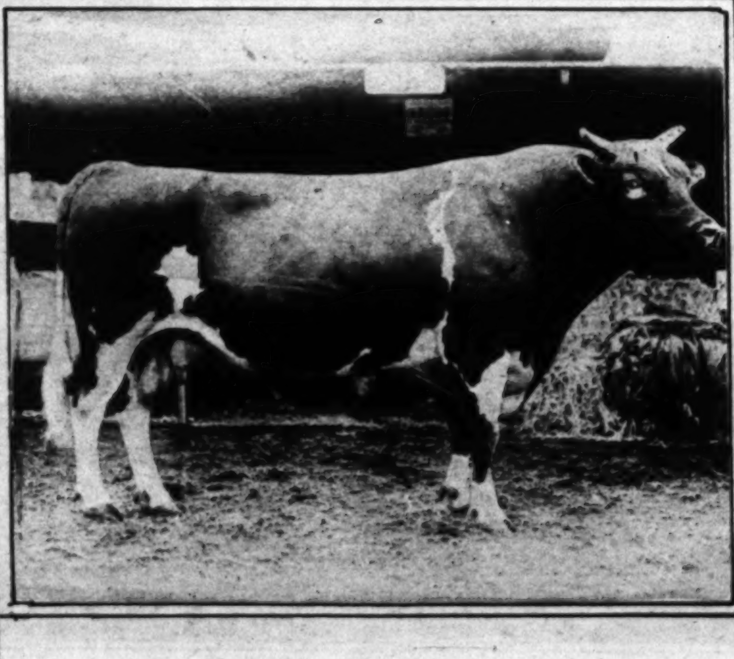
It is a crusade in which practically anyone may join as an active participant. To be officially enrolled, one must be a live stock owner—but not on a large scale. The owning of one animal of breeding age is sufficient. If a male, it must be pure-bred. If a female, it need not be pure-bred but must be bred to a good pure-bred male. Therefore, the person who owns just one mongrel hen mated with a quality cock representing a definite breed is entitled to official enrollment as a crusader for "Better Sires—Better Stock."

STARTS IN OCTOBER.

The crusade is to begin on the first day of October this year. A great many organizations, led by the United States Department of Agriculture, will co-operate in it. Prominent among the co-operating organizations are the State agricultural colleges and many associations of live-stock growers and breeders.

The Department of Agriculture, through its co-operative State agencies, will supply live-stock raisers with printed information, telling in popular language of the best animal-breeding methods and the advantages of using them. An official emblem, suitable for display, will be furnished to every farmer who agrees to use only good, pure-bred sires and to co-operate in other ways in the better live-stock crusade. It is required that he fill out a simple blank showing the number and kinds of live stock he possesses, and that he declare that his male breeding animals are pure-bred. It is not necessary that he own the males, but merely that the sires he uses, by whomsoever owned, be pure-bred.





Good types of pure-bred sires.

The great majority of people, perhaps, have never appreciated the effect of the "grading up" of live stock by the use of pure-bred sires. Very marked improvement is to be noted in the first generation. With some breeds the offspring of a pure-bred sire and mongrel dams are, in practical appearance, like pure-bred animals. A Hereford bull practically never fails to stamp his progeny with the characteristic white face of the breed. Chickens from a standard-bred Barred Plymouth Rock cock and any kind of mongrel hens are nearly all Plymouth Rocks in appearance, and usually when mature they are at least two pounds heavier than mongrel individuals.

WEIGHT CAN BE INCREASED.

The external improvement is, perhaps, not so marked in any other breeds in the first generation, but the intrinsic improvement is doubtless just as great. The improvement in the two breeds cited, however, is not merely in appearance. The Department of Agriculture proves that by the case of an 800-pound part Jersey cow bred to a Hereford bull, the calf, at a little over two years old, weighed 1650 pounds—more than twice as much as the cow. With practically any breed of horses, cattle, swine, sheep, goats, or poultry a scrub herd headed by pure-bred sires for three generations will show most of the individuals closely resembling pure-bred animals and for food-production purposes practically as useful.

For many years this country has contained many thousands of the finest specimens of live stock in the world, but in spite of that fact, the quality and productive capacity of the average farm herd has remained low, because the farmers generally have not availed themselves of the pure-bred sires but have used scrub sires. When the forthcoming crusade begins to produce maximum results—a few years from now—there will be a general improvement in quantity and qualitq of animal products, it is anticipated.

The pure-bred or "high-grade," cow resulting from wise breeding produces more milk, richer in butter fat, than the ordinary scrub cow. The Department of Agriculture cites an instance of a boy who bought a high-grade cow. His father owned five cows of the kind commonly kept in that neighborhood in New Jersey. The boy's one high-grade cow produced more milk and butter than his father's five cows.

The proper breeding of beef animals results in better and more uniform stock, having a greater percentage of desirable cuts of meat and a smaller quantity of bone, offal, and inedible parts. The same is true of hogs, sheep, goats, poultry. All of those things have been scientifically worked out by the Department of Agriculture, and the effort is now to be made to put them in operation on a nation-wide scale.

Until recently, such a crusade would not have been possible. The necessary machinery has been perfected within the past few years. Included in that machinery are the county agents, the farm bureaus, and even the boys' and girls' clubs that have aided so greatly in getting a foundation of pure blood in a great many communities.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 31.

The Government.

ALMOST as vague as that thing we call "the public," is that other thing which we speak of as "the government." It is something that somewhat reminds us of an unseen power; we know it exists, it regulates nearly all of our movements, and sometimes we feel a kind of fear or an awe of it, and yet it is a thing that we cannot just place our hands on.

It is because of this condition, doubtless, that we permit those who constitute the government to treat us so often with an amazing impudence that we allow to go unrebuked. To use a slang phrase, now the worse for long wear, we have been "buffaloed."

The government is all right, of course. It is a thing that we must have. It is necessary, and we couldn't get along without it, but it is a thing that will make a monkey out of a man if he lets it mystify him.

To make clear the idea we are endeavoring here to put forth, we may cite an incident that came under our own notice not long ago. It took place in a postoffice, and, as everybody knows, a postoffice is an institution of the government.

A man was trying to mail a package through the parcel post. He was not familiar with the modus operandi and he was asking the clerk a few questions, whereupon the clerk insulted and abused the man in a most shameful manner. The poor man was scared to death, and got so flustered that he went away at last without mailing his parcel, ashamed, and as red as a lobster. The clerk then snarled at the next person in line, scaring him also, and making the whole bunch behind him look like criminals awaiting the ax of the executioneer.

Now, what the man who wanted to mail the parcel should have done was to have reached through the window and taken that clerk by the nose and twisted it clear off his face. And he should have said: "I don't allow my employees to talk to me as you have done. You are working for me. I pay you your wages, and I now propose to discharge you. I am the government, and the government insists on courteous treatment of the public by those whom it employs."

It is the same way all up the line. It is unbelievable how much impudence and disrespect the people take day after day and year after year from postoffice clerks, and clerks and heads of the departments of the government and from executives from the bottom to the top of the entire governmental system.

But, we will say this, that any man or woman who permits a government employee, big or little, to be "sassy" or discourteous or disobliging, has only himself or herself to blame.

All we need do is to get the right slant on things. Realize that you, yourself, and your neighbors, are the government, and that all these understrappers are employed by you and get their pay out of your pockets. You should not permit them to be disrespectful to you any more than you would permit your own office stenographer, or the janitor, or your hired man on the ranch to "sass" you.

Next time you have to go into any kind of a government office, or any kind of a city or county or State office, don't act as though your soul were not your own and you came to ask a favor, but, instead, just order them around and make them wait on you.

That's their business; that's what they are there for, and you are one of the folks who pay out good money to keep them there.

Charms of Detachment.

AMONG mental exercises that are good for the soul, we cannot recommend too strongly the practice of what we would call "detachment."

Suppose you try it occasionally to see how you like it. It is a simple and easy thing to do, and many people find much rest and happiness in it.

The way to do is to just suppose that you are a man from Mars or some of the other planets and that you are merely here on a visit looking the earth over in the capacity of a looker on. Imagine, then, that nothing that is going on concerns you, at all. Strikes, wars, elections, dog fights, new religions, peek-a-boo waists and all those things are matters with which you have nothing to do whatever.

You will be surprised to know how it will rest you up and take the ache out of your legs. You will wonder at the quickness with which your brain will cool off.

We think that it would be a fine thing to have a school, in which this doctrine of detachment be taught. The man who started a school like that would make money.

A Strange Strike.

STRIKES among laboring men are so common, and have been common for so many years that they have ceased to be interesting as subjects of scientific investigation or psychological research.

There was one strike recently, however, that was out of the ordinary. It was the strike of the actors in the New York theaters.

It is so extraordinary, as a matter of fact, that we shall not now be surprised to hear that elocutionists in other lines, orators and Chautauqua lecturers, for instance, have gone out on strike.

The cause of surprise in these premises is that it is difficult to regard the profession of the actor as other than a nebulous calling. It is a calling that a man may follow without interference of other callings that he might have or that he might desire to follow. For instance, a man might earn his living as a blacksmith, or as a book-keeper, or as a lawyer and still take part in theatrical entertainments.

It is indeed really true that many of the best actors we have spend the time that does not require their presence in the theater at occupations that are listed in the bureau of statistics. We know a very clever and excellent actor who works as a journeyman carpenter when he has no engagement in the theater.

Take the movies, as an example. The ranks of the star movie actors have been recruited mainly from grocery stores and factories. One of the most successful movie actors was discovered in a delicatessen store.

Wherefore, a profession that almost anybody can jump into and succeed would not seem to have the stuff in it out of which to form a "union" and to launch a strike, would you think?

But, with all that, we like actors. They are folks that anyone would like. And while we are not in favor of strikes, because they are really stupid, we somehow hope the actors will win if they have not already done so.

SO BLIND.

If we could stand once more upon some mountain crest,
Watching the setting sun sink in the West;
If you could rouse you from your long, long sleep.
And walk again beside me by the deep
Where billows fling themselves upon the strand.
Washing our straying foot-prints from the sand—
With broader minds, we'd better understand
Why feet go straying on the shifting sand;
Why love is wafted like the drifting sand.

Causes of discontent? Forgotten things—
Your love in memory to my memory clings,
And ways of wandering feet, I would not e'en recall;
Long years of tears assuageth all.
If you were here, and standing by my side,
I would not chide! I would not chide!
Dear Love—our loving guest—to you we were unkind;
We were so blind; so blind!
Forgiving God, so blind!

CHARLES HESTON PEIRSON.

"We."

WE TRUST that the readers of this page will pardon us for referring to ourself as "we." It is no desire of ours to do so, but the editor insists on it. It is an ancient custom among editors, dating back, no doubt, to the first editor who, we are informed, was a Chinaman.

Of course, it sounds big and also profound, and we are aware of a certain dignity that goes with the custom, but we are naturally modest and retiring, personally, and we often feel this honor bearing heavily on our undeserving shoulders.

The Fag End.

IT APPEARS to be a fact that the majority of men become religious in proportion as they advance in years. There is an old quip to the effect that it was only when they were old that Solomon wrote the Proverbs and that David wrote the Psalms.

In other words, men are likely to wait until their blood cools before they do much praying or give much of their time to devotions. All of life they give to God is the fag end of it.

There are many prayers in many books, all of which any man would do well to learn and to practice, but it seems to us that the mightiest prayer man can voice is the prayer to God "to give him the power and the grace to burn his passions out of his heart while still the flame of those passions are raging.

Suppose a man were to have been cursed with a passion for liquor, and that he strangled that passion while it still burned in him and while still the flagon stood ready to his hand. You would not compare his stupendous moral victory with the complacent piety of the drunkard who had reformed because his stomach went back on him and the very smell of whisky made him sick; or because prohibition had closed the distilleries and the saloons.

Well, in the same way, it must be a great exaltation of the human soul when it has conquered some other passion while still that passion raged and burned within him. This is what made Francis of Assisi a saint. But, there are millions of men who did as Francis did, yet whose names the world has never learned.

When a man sits down only at the fag end of his life to find himself good, we can't see how he can get much satisfaction out of the contemplation.

The Pundit.

IN ONE of the kingdoms into which life is divided you will occasionally find set aside in the animal kingdom for exhibit a department known as the human zoo. And there you will find a strange animal called the pundit.

The late Gen. Horace Porter once defined a mugwump to be a man educated beyond his intellect. The pundit is even more than that. He is a man whose brain has been transformed into gray matter to the total exclusion of all other matter. A pundit takes cognizance of nothing whatever except knowledge. He not only has acquired all that is in books and all that has been written on stones and rocks, but he knows everything else in addition to that.

Now, to us, this animal is the most pathetic in the entire animal kingdom. The ignorant man is, of course, to be pitied, but when he is compared with the pundit he is to be congratulated.

For, must it not be a very sad thing to know everything, and then some? It is as though a man had seen every mile of California, all its high roads, its canyons, its rivers and lakes and its purpled valleys, and there were no thing or spot left for him to see between Siskiyou and San Diego.

The saddest affliction that life can possibly put upon a man is to be brought to a point where there is no new thing left for him to learn and no new thing left for him to see. It was a jolly fate to be allowed to lie down and die when a man comes to that.

Dearly beloved, when in your litanies you say "Good Lord deliver us," say with deepest fervor to be delivered from ever being turned into a pundit.

Two Heathen Gods.

ON A LONG and happy journey, now, alas, regretfully ended—a journey that led us upon sunlit trails through the great mountains of California—we met with an amazing number of human beings among the Indian tribes who have lived to be more than 100 years of age.

We sat, for instance, one whole day under the shade of an aliso tree with three Indians—father, son and grandson—whose ages were, respectively, 118, 80 and 60 years. And we met so many Indian men and women whose ages ran over century marks that it became, at last, a common experience.

Naturally, we looked about for an explanation of this phenomenon, for it seemed to us to be nothing less than phenomenal.

We found the explanation. The remarkable longevity of these Indians is due to their ancient heathen worship of the gods of the sun and the air. In return for that worship these two gods give the Indians good teeth, good stomachs and long life.

To reduce the matter to more practical expression, it means that folks who live out in the open under wide skies in sun and wind find health in their possession. We also made shrines for the gods of the sun and the wind, on those wandering days and nights, and many were the blessings that came to us, as had come to the Indians.

The contact we had with these old people of the hills convinced us that it is not necessary to die as soon as white folks die. Hence we are strong now for lots of bareness of body, lots of open air to breathe, and lots of sun for our bared head.

We think we would all be better Christians if we were to make a worship of the gods of the sun and air, heathen though it may seem to be.

For Lazy Men.

PARAGUAY is called "the lazy man's country." There have been so many wars there that men are scarce and in great demand as husbands. So eager are the women of Paraguay to get husbands that they cheerfully agree to do all the work and let the men spend their lives in ease. If you should happen to know of a lazy man, why not advise him to go to Paraguay?

"on the go"—on wheels, in the air, in motors, etc.—it never rests—and its brain, perpetually shaken to and fro in the whirl of machinery, is more or less addled. One has but to consider the delicate convolutions of the human spine and brain to realize the physical impossibility of clear thinking or comprehensive reading when that spine and brain are continuously jogged, shaken, pushed at high speed and "rushed" as they were never intended to be.

Public Are Like Squirrels in a Cage—Never Still.

"SERIOUS writers" realize that the majority are ceasing to read (save for hurried glances at the aforementioned "sensational" press,) and they do not attempt to write for the "squirrel-in-a-cage" turnabout man or woman.

Education was never more talked about than it is today—but the Egyptian of Pharaoh's time was better educated than the British or American of "civilized" cities! Go where you will and speak to whomsoever you meet, the ignorance betrayed among all classes of the simplest facts of life is appalling and overwhelming. The people do not read; and here will come in a devastation undreamed of. The "picture theater" is the delight of the staring savage to whom books are now nearly sealed—he thinks he can understand a picture, though that is becoming difficult—but so far as a book is concerned, he would rather "scoot off" in oilskins on a motorcycle at a tearing pace, with no particular aim or end, than open its covers.

The names of great authors who have made the splendor of nations are almost unknown to modern men; they would not know the name of Shakespeare if it were not often repeated; and some are not very sure whether he was a man or a town! Ignorance is the being of this "educated" era!—and "serious writers" will do well if they can only hold back from the vulgarity of the moment and possess their souls in patience until the public wearies of the "mere noise of wheels" and emerges once more from childish barbarism to a sense of order, fitness and beauty.

MARIE CORELLI.

The Present Era is One of Ignorance.

W. B. MAXWELL gives the following as his ideas of the questions raised by the writer:

The reading that should be prepared at this time for the world masses ought to enforce the only real lesson that the war has given us. That is, the inherent power that all men possess of rising to great heights of self-sacrifice, courage, endurance; the supreme value of the simple gifts of life, such as love, home, healthy work; the utter futility of all outward and unsubstantial show. In other words, the literature of today should deal with the widest and most permanent truths and encourage thought that is at once lofty and simple.

Of course, exactly the reverse of this is happening. Long before the war our best as well as our worst novelists had gone out to meet the "man in the street," or average individual, with open arms. The average individual never thinks at all; what he utters as thoughts are what he has heard said by somebody else or read in a newspaper. And these are the thoughts that the popular novelist gives him.

Novel of Today Only Newspapers Bound in Cloth.

CONTEMPORARY novels are for the most part merely the newspaper bound in cloth; they deal with the events of the day, the hopes of the hour, the passing fashions of the moment. Like the newspapers, they are full of undigested facts, highly colored trivialities, monstrous irrelevancies. The emotions are kept on the surface; the unchanging laws of human nature are scarcely indicated; but they are "bright, chatty, up-to-date," and, as advertised by their publishers, "eminently readable."

Even when labeled "serious" they are what Ruskin would have classed as newspapers and not books; they do not soar above the work of our special correspondent's description of the labor crisis, the law courts, the battlefields or whatever the "serious" subject matter may be. One cannot conceive of people caring to read them again a few years after publication or of being in any way the better for having read them at all.

On the commercial side, I would answer your second question by saying that in this too topical age war-time stories will continue to be good business until interest in the topic of the war has entirely faded. As a guess, I would say that this will not occur for about eighteen months from now.

As to what serious writers should do, I have already hinted at my opinion. I do not think that in England, America or France there are any serious writers in the old sense of the word. There are writers who take their work seriously and themselves more seriously still, but there are none who are entering into serious competition with the great masters that are gone; none who are attempting to write not only for the moment but for all time.

W. B. MAXWELL.

concentrate on that. All pain is only imagination."

"Well, I've got a raw strip down my neck that comes pretty near being the real thing," roared Warren. "Here's where I make for the nearest drug store."

"Oh, you mustn't mind Mr. Curtis," fluttered Helen, distressed and mortified.

"Come on, let's beat it! Feels like a red hot poker under my collar," as he bolted for the stairs.

Helen lingered to apologize for Warren's rudeness and their abrupt departure. Then hurriedly she stumbled down the dark stairs, but he was half way down the block before she caught up with him.

It was not until after the application of a cooling salve in the corner drug store that his grim scowl relaxed.

"There, that's something like," as he replaced his collar by the soda-fountain mirror. "That beats any 'concentrating' on a blue carnation!"

"Oh, dear, you were disgraceful! You almost broke up the party. And you were so rude to that poor Mrs. Madden."

"Serves you right for dragging me into a bunch like that! Huh, if you'd let loose a few squirrels—wouldn't be much left of that crowd." Then with a chuckle, "Talk about 'fervid interpretations' that hootchie-cootchie female had nothin' on me when that cussed candle leaked down my neck. Just about that time I gave some pretty 'fervid interpretations' myself!"

clothes. I had my shoes off and one young woman put on my shoes, my khaki coat and hat, and opening my umbrella she sat on the ground under it for the rest of the time we were there. I did not know whether I would get them back or not, she had taken such a fancy to them, but when we started she loathfully gave them up.

A short distance from this place we found quite a wide and deep river and were just about to prepare to swim, when a young girl came running to us and offered to take us across in a canoe. This girl we found could speak a little French and we asked her where we could go to stay all night. She said that her grandmother lived not very far across the river, that she could speak American, and that she would be very glad to have us come there. The girl went with us to show the way, and the old lady was so glad to have us stop there that she started at once to kill chickens and soon had a fine dinner ready for us.

The woman was born at this place but it seems her father was an American and she was very proud of it. Her son, a young man, lived with her and in the evening we went out on the ocean in his boat with him to fish. We stayed out till midnight and brought back quite a fine load of fish. On our return to the house we found they had prepared some good beds for us and we were made very comfortable for the night. We got up early the next morning and, after drinking our coffee, again started on our way

I do not consider that the picture palaces are serious rivals to the writer of fiction.

Sincerely yours,

BY RAYMOND G. CARROLL.

DURING the war virtually all of the more or less famous British writers engaged themselves in the so-called propaganda work; those who were unable to get into the army. With the German signing of the peace terms and the whole world settling down once again to normal conditions the question naturally arises: "What are the plans of the British fiction writers?"

To the end of ascertaining if possible the present state of mind of the leaders in fiction, I addressed the following questions to some of the foremost:

First—What sort of reading should be prepared at this time for the world masses.

Second—Are wartime stories the proper sort of literature to be presented either in the magazines or through the customary channels of books?

Third—Whether it is not important for serious writers to bestir themselves before the neighborhood picture theaters have entirely captured the time and interest of the average public?

What the Big Writers Have to Say.

TO THESE queries I have received some interesting answers. Sir Gilbert Parker sent the following reply:

24 Portman Square, W. I.

My Dear Mr. Carroll:

Your questions are not easy to answer, for at best the answers to the first two must be purely speculative and uninformed. But I've done the best possible in the inclosed.

First—The same as in the past, with an addition of historical matter, since the general public throughout the world has been roused and educated by the war to a keener historical sense. It is impossible to force the public into a system of reading, but a tendency can be cultivated, and the historical tendency is apparent.

Second—Personally I think that the public generally is for the moment tired of war-time stories and would welcome fiction far away from the hurly-burly and horror of war. Yet the taste for war-time stories will return and will provide for the next generation or two a field of interest inexhaustible and deep with drama and humanity.

Third—I do not think writers can deliberately "bestir themselves" to produce books. If they do, they will fail. Inspiration is the secret of success in all walks of life, but infinitely more than all in literature, otherwise it is manufactured stuff. My own view is that all authors who are worth while have been stirred deeply by the tremendous drama of the last five years (nearly,) and big things will be the result. I have no fear of the picture theaters. In the end they will cultivate a greater taste for the drama in the regular theater and will also help to create or renew a taste for reading. I know that people read less than they did before motoring and "the movies" became popular, but that is only temporary. People will read more than ever they have done, as publishers know now, and I regard the future with confidence and hope.

Yours sincerely,
GILBERT PARKER.

War Should Not be the Plot of New Books.

THE views of E. Phillips Oppenheim on war stories are expressed in the following letter which he sent me:

13 Clarges Street, W.
Mayfair 4997.

Dear Sir:—In reply to the inquiry contained in your letter of the 6th inst., I do not think that it is possible to ignore the war or the changes which it has brought about in any work of fiction written today. From my own point of view, however, I prefer, at the present time, to seek for a plot and incidents as remotely connected with the events of the last five years as possible. That is to say, virtually that while the great upheaval in our social and political life must be indicated in any work of fiction which is to be in the least convincing, it should supply neither the raison d'etre nor the incident for an acceptable story.

I do not consider that the picture palaces are serious rivals to the writer of fiction.

Sincerely yours,
E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM.

But War has Colored Literature For Some Time to Come.

FROM E. W. HORNUNG came the following:

Midway Cottage,
Partridge Green, Sussex.

To Raymond G. Carroll, Esq.

Dear Sir—I have found your letter awaiting me on my return from Germany, and beg you to excuse the necessary delay in acknowledgment.

Of the three very interesting questions which you proposed, the second is the only one I can pretend to answer with any conviction. I feel very strongly that every serious modern novel, for a considerable time to come, will have to be in some sense a "war-time story." In so far as it reflects or depicts contemporary life, it cannot ignore the incidence and influence of the war upon the dramatis personnae. That which has altered all our lives can only be avoided, in a study of contemporary life, by antedating the action; but the immediate pre-war days are now chiefly interesting in contrast with the days of the war itself, and this particular contrast has already been somewhat overworked in fiction. The modern novelist who would avoid the incubus altogether had best go back a generation or so and write a semi-historical novel, more Mr. Arnold Bennett.

On the other hand, I cannot think that a war-time story of the war itself—a novel of trench warfare—would now stand any chance of success unless a work of real genius. In every village there is a man who could cap the hero's most tremendous adventure out of his own experience; in fact, so much authentic adventure is in converastional currency that the fictitious type is likely to be discounted for many a long day.

The trouble is that it is difficult to conceive of a "hero" who has not fought in the war, but still more difficult to make him stand out in a world of heroes!

I doubt whether the gist of all this is of the slightest use for your purpose; but it is what I feel on almost the only points of interest that remain in life.

Yours very truly,
E. W. HORNUNG.

Marie Corelli Scores the Restless Public.

MARIE CORELLI sharply rebukes the tendency of the times in her caustic answers to my questions, which she gets down seriatim as follows:

Mason Croft, Stratford-on-Avon, Warwickshire.

First—Not a "sensational" press. The press should be a bettering influence; not a purveyor of evil and foolish suggestions as it is now. I consider half the mischief and discord between nations is the work of the press; of the lies it circulates, the jealousies it fosters, the wretched attitude it holds toward religion and education, apart from the pure silliness it encourages in women with regard to dress and behavior. Immortality is openly encouraged by the press; prurient literature, low pursuits and indecent pictorial matter; the worst possible "reading" for the "world's masses," who are to be deeply commiserated for serving as the grist of this grinding mill of commercial exploitation, which takes no account of the degradation of human neutrality but only of the dollars it can wring out of the destroyed matter. The press was the chief criminal cause of the war; it will again be the chief criminal cause of dissension between the Allies should such dissension arise.

Second—"War-time stories" have for the most part been written "for the moment"—in slipshod English and bad style. War is too terrific a thing to be dealt with by writers who hurry a tale off the typing machine to make a few dollars. They are not the "proper sort of literature" as written nowadays; a real "war-time story" needs the pen of a Sir Walter Scott, a Dickens, a Thackeray; men who thought before they wrote; not the men of today, who write before they think.

The Real War Story has Yet to be Written.

THE "war-time" story of the present epoch will not be written perhaps for a hundred years. Meantime the public, which is still lashed and stung by the griefs and burdens of battle, should be given some other subjects to cheer, strengthen and uplift its mind.

Third—By "serious writers," I presume you mean writers who love their profession and seek to hold up its dignity. But for these there is a poor chance and I do not think they would trouble to "bestir" themselves into competition with the picture theater. The "average public" is being thrust back by a greedy commerce into old savage ways of ignorance, when "signs" or "pictures" were the only way of making them understand events.

Moreover, this "average public" is forever

THINGS FOR EVERY HOUSEKEEPER.

BOTH travelers and stay-at-homes are going to be made happy by the folding aluminum ironing board, it is so light and strong and compact. The top is of aluminum and is fastened onto a well made frame of wood. It is a real ironing board that can be put across the backs of chairs or anywhere else you want it to be for ironing skirts, and yet it can be folded up to go into the bottom of your trunk, and when you get to your destination there it is, all ready to press out your clothes. I would suggest a padded slip-over cover that will let the board fold up, and that can be taken off and washed. One always feels so mussy after a long trip in an automobile where your clothes are stuffed into a suitcase, so take the board, and your electric iron along in the bottom of the car so that when you arrive at hotels on the way you may freshen up for dinner and the evening. The satisfaction of your dress not being full of wrinkles will repay you for the little trouble.

If you live in an apartment-house where space is very precious you will find this board that folds up most useful, for it can be tucked away in some odd corner where the regular long ironing board would not go at all.

Make your own butter

Open, it is a regular board

HOW TO WASH RIBBON.

Spread the ribbon flat on a smooth, hard surface like a table top or a marble slab and sponge or brush with lukewarm water in which a little mild soap has been dissolved. Rinse by holding the ribbon stretched between the hands and passing it through a bowl of clear water of the same temperature. Dry by spreading it out straight and flat on a smooth, hard surface. Draw the hand gently over it to press out air bubbles which may have formed under the ribbon and would make it look "blistered" when dry.

SOME HANDY HOUSE ECONOMIES.

Two ordinary wooden clothes pins make a good trivet to prevent meat from sticking to the bottom of a kettle when boiled or steamed.

The ice pick makes a handier can opener for a can of condensed milk than a regular can opener, for it can be done quickly, it makes a small opening which prevents air from getting in, and spoiling the contents, and there are no ragged edges to cut the hand.

A piece of coarse wire screening with half-inch mesh makes a good trivet to use in a wash boiler when canning. Although only about an eighth of an inch thick, it is sufficient to allow water to run under the jars which will prevent the jars from cracking because the jars are thus heated on all sides uniformly.

Shoes, tennis shoes, rubbers or overshoes that are worn only part of the year can be kept in good condition if cleaned and polished if necessary and placed in paper bags on the closet shelf. They will last much longer if protected this way, instead of being stepped on, on the closet floor, getting dusty, or spoiling their shape squeezed into the tight pockets of a shoe bag on a closet door.

A dozen tin tops from bottled soft drinks such as grape juice, or ginger ale, nailed to a board with the tin edges uppermost makes a fine step scraper to keep mud out of the house.

When the inner tube of an automobile tire has to be removed as worn out, it is still useful to make rubber bands. Select the places least worn, and with a sharp knife or a pair of scissors, cut into quarter-inch bands. They are stronger than ordinary rubber bands, and are very handy to keep various supplies neatly done up.

An ordinary wire paper clip makes a very handy tie clip to keep a man's necktie from dangling into dirty work.

A hatpin or hairpin straightened out will often clean out clogged pipes in the sink or wash bowl and save a plumber's bill.

Ordinary hatpins can be transformed into much prettier pins if covered with colored sealing wax, beads or a crocheted or ribbon flower.

CAULIFLOWER WITH CHEESE.

Boil a head of cauliflower until just barely tender. Place in a buttered baking dish and put between all the flowers or heads as many strips of cheese as possible, also some underneath and on top. Pour over this a white sauce made of one ounce of butter or butter substitute, one pint of milk, and one tablespoon of flour or cornstarch. Dust with bread crumbs, salt and cayenne, and brown in the oven for a short time.

CHEESE AND RICE.

Butter a baking dish well and fill with alternate layers of salted boiled rice and coarsely chopped eastern cheese. Add butter and place a few large pieces of cheese on top. Fill with milk and bake.

RAMEQUINS.

Beat two eggs—whites and yolks separately. To the yolks of the eggs add two tablespoonfuls of flour, two ounces of melted butter, two ounces of grated cheese, and the whites of the eggs. Mix well, bake in buttered gem pans about fifteen minutes. Serve hot.

THE MISSING REGISTERED PACKAGE.

BY NORVAL N. EDWARDS.

DOUBLE-HEADER No. 10, Lighting Chicago Limited, rolled into Red Rock at exactly one minute past midnight, schedule time. The proud conductor, losing some of his dignity in his hour of triumph, alighted from the smoker and tore into the telegraph shanty where he snatched his flimsy orders from the file. A telegram, addressed to the postal clerks on his train, also lay on the counter. He picked this up.

"Well, I got 'er on time tonight," he shouted to the dozing operator whose stool tilted menacingly against the wall. The latter, evidently not caring to be aroused, did not answer.

"I'll be durned," grunted the disgusted trainman. "Every other night when I'm late you're here wide awake and now—" Leaving the sentence unfinished, he slammed the screen door and hurried to the engine some few hundred feet away. The engineer, flaming torch in hand, was tinkering at the giant wheels of the locomotive. He calmly beheld the breathless conductor approach.

"See here, Jim," exclaimed the latter, "If we're goin' to get into Rose in time for church we'll have to be gettin' outta here."

"Say the word," good-naturedly returned the engineer.

"All aboard," the conductor carelessly tossed his lantern and No. 10 was again upon its way.

Another scene, unwitnessed by 200 slumbering passengers, was being enacted in the mail car.

Four gasping clerks were excitedly firing questions at an equally excited youth.

"Who are you?"

"Where's Bill?"

"Ever been on this line before?"

The young fellow appeared to be about is known as a "sub" in the mail service. He had been sent in place of one Bill, who regularly boarded the train at this junction. The reason for the consternation among the clerks was apparent—with an inexperienced man, their chances for finishing the distribution of the mail in time to get a little sleep before daybreak were slim.

The young fellow appeared to be about 20 years old. His apparent youthfulness, coupled with the awkward manner in which he had pulled himself into the car, bespoke his inexperience. His cap was pulled down over his eyes, his uncombed hair and general appearance showed that he had hurriedly thrown on his clothes. A small valise, half opened, disclosed more confusion.

"Damn 'larm clock of mine," he began in an apologetic tone, "Didn't go off an'—"

"That's all right about that," interrupted the clerk in charge, trying to make his voice heard above the increasing rattle of the train, "Get on yer workin' duds—an' fall to. Mail's not so heavy t'night an' we might get a little spot at least."

The youth nodded his assent and retired to the front of the car. Tom Cook, veteran clerk, who had the car in charge, had neglected to ask for any credentials. The coming on of substitutes in place of regular man was a common occurrence to him—a necessary evil.

When the substitute returned a moment later, no one appeared to notice the absence of his badge. In fact, the other clerks, busy at their own duties, barely glanced at him as he passed them.

"Next station's Boulder—catcher—left side," shouted Tom as he tossed a limp catcher pouch to the youth. "You c'n catch it."

The boy flung open the door and peered into the darkness. It was cold. Tears came to his eyes as he leaned out to catch sight of the lighted mail crane.

"There it is—there it is—throw it." The mail arm clanged to the door. He has missed the pouch.

The clerk in charge tried to be patient. "Guess I'll get the next one," he said, "You can go back an' help George."

"Hey, George," he bawled, "Put the kid to buckin' sacks."

The youth gathered up a heavy sack of papers and threw it upon the table. He did that splendidly but when it came to his opening the sack, he tugged at the clasp in helpless confusion.

The older clerk looked at him queerly. "Haven't you ever opened a tie sack before?" he asked. The novice admitted that he had not and the other being too busy to say more asked no further questions.

Only those who have been in the service know what real hot work in a close mail car is like. Few realize the enormous amount of mail that is handled there. The iron-barred postoffice of the railroad does not receive its just credit. Working harder, perhaps, than anyone else on the train, sometimes as long as fifteen and twenty hours at a stretch, postal clerks strive to terminate their runs with all the mail "cleaned up." To "go stuck" is a disgrace.

If clerks can complete the distribution, well and good, and they are permitted to rest. But until this event each stays at his post.

"Well, boys," shouted old Tom several hours later, almost losing his corncob in the attempt. These were the first words he had spoken since putting the substitute to work. "How're you all fixed?"

"All up," from Slim, gulping down a tin cup of ice-water.

"One more sack," lamented George, who eyed a well-packed sack of circulars lying at his feet. He had left it until the last. "Easiest first," was his motto.

Fatty Parker was slow and he knew it. Accordingly he said nothing. He had just begun to tie out his case.

"S'matter with you?" All eyes were turned on poor Fatty. His face turned red and he gulped.

"Don't mind me," he answered, "I'll be in bed before—" Plop! A package of his letters went to the floor and scattered like feathers. He bent over grudgingly. With each procured letter he let out a curse.

"Didn't know Fat had such a large vocabulary," teased Tom. The victim was too mad to answer.

A few minutes later all had retired and spotted themselves in different parts of the car. Lights were turned low; mail sacks hung over the windows in place of curtains, and each clerk lay snug in a bed of empty sacks and pouches. The boy alone was injoined to stay awake.

"You can lay down and rest," Tom had said. "But you mustn't go to sleep. Some one's gotta' stay guard. You were the last man on so it's up to you.

The substitute accepted his orders without comment. He would gladly have given anything to finish his slumbers which had been interrupted a few hours before—but—orders were orders. He meant to play the part of a good soldier and obey them.

The desert sun, lifting its head from behind distant hills, sent its ray of light into the darkened mail car. The clerks knew it was time to resume work. All must be in readiness for another crew.

"What's this door doin' open?" demanded Tom. "I thought it chilly last night."

"And the safety bar's down, too," volunteered George.

"That's a hell o' a note," muttered Fatty, shivering in his underclothes. "One of us might of fell out."

"Where's the kid?" sang the quartette in unison. All looked around. He was missing.

No one spoke. Each looked at the other—first in wonderment, then in fear, then in suspicion.

"Do you suppose—" Tom started toward the pile of registered pouches. "Here, check," he said, thrusting a book of bills into the hand of the nearest man.

"Twelve hundred and two. X," he called.

"Here."

"Six thousand and four. B."

"Here."

"Twenty-nine. Y."

"Wait a second—I don't see that one," responded the clerk, fumbling among the pouches. "Read the number, again."

"Twenty-nine. Y," nervously this time.

The clerk shook his head. "Not here," he said, hollow like.

Tom went literally into the air. "Oh, God," he screamed, pulling his hair frantically, "It's from the First National Bank." He grabbed the air brake valve and sank to the floor.

Conductor, brakemen and passengers scrambled out of the cars. Something had gone wrong everyone knew. Why had the train halted in the heart of the desert, miles from any town, switch or water tank? This was the question each tried to solve.

Once the news of the missing pouch and clerk was out, it traveled from mouth to mouth with the rapidity of wild fire.

Passengers threw up their arms and begged to be searched. "We doan' want non o' his conso'ts areun' heah," shivered a white-coated porter.

After the excitement had subsided sufficiently to allow the trainmen to herd the passengers back into the coaches, the engineer jumped into his cab, and with a grim determination to make record time, speeded for the nearest telegraph station, some seventy miles away.

"Guess I'm in for it," groaned Tom. No one answered. He felt his responsibility. He had allowed a crook to enter his car and walk away with a pouch of gold. He had made no attempt to establish the impostor's identity. He had failed miserably in protecting the mail he was entrusted with. These were some of the bitter thoughts that tormented his mind.

Each of the clerks went about his work in a dazed, mechanical fashion. Surely "weeping endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning" had been reversed.

"Did you see this?" asked Fatty holding up a Western Union envelope. "I found it in the mail chute. Some one must have stuck it in at Red Rock and we overlooked it."

Tom lifelessly tore it open. Probably more trouble he feared.

"It's safe—it's safe," he exclaimed, dancing up and down.

The other clerks snatched the telegram from him.

"Cancel registered twenty-nine Y. Will go forward on train, 2 a.m.," it read.

The clerks had never received the pouch in the first place. Had they checked them over before leaving they would have made this discovery. But in hopes of getting to bed early they had neglected to do this. Great was their joy now.

"But where's the kid?" upspoke Slim when the jubilee was at its height. Here was another thought for worry.

"Can the gloom," scorned Fat, "We've had our share of sorrow for one night," and he heaved a deep sigh. "The kid's all right. Probably got homesick and crawled out at one of these jerkwaters."

Tom and his companions journeyed home on Train No. 3. When they arrived the next day at Red Rock they were electrified by a familiar voice. The quartette rushed to the door. There on the ground stood the substitute, his arm in a sling and his face badly scratched up.

"Your valise?" exclaimed Fat. "Why Lord, boy, that's in Kansas City this time—"

The screeching engine drowned his voice and in a moment the train had swung around a curve and was lost to sight by Red Rock and the gasping "sub."

War and Whiskers

A considerable increase in whiskers has always been one of the results of warfare. The soldier is traditionally bearded like the pard. Nor need this fact be explained by the sordid motive of convenience. "If the Russians," it was once half-humorously remarked, "didn't wear beards we wouldn't be afraid of them." A great symbolic principle is involved. Alexander the Great, to be sure, ordered his soldiers to shave lest the enemy seize them by the beards, and Scipio Africanus, a fighter of renown, was the first Roman, according to Pliny, to shave every day. Tacitus says that the Teutonic barbarians who overwhelmed the Roman Empire regarded a shaven face as a badge of servitude. Perhaps it was for this reason that the Romans from the time of Hadrian abandoned the habit of shaving. Yet beardless warriors overcame the bearded, as Achilles overcame Hector and Caesar Pompey. The mightiest Julius, it is said, could not have raised a beard had he wished. Philip V of Spain was in a similar predicament, and his loyal courtiers shaved to keep him company. A tax on beards was imposed by Peter the Great, and even in the last century they were tabooed in some European countries because they were supposed to indicate revolutionary symbols.

Yet neither fashion nor law has been have been luxuriantly cultivated even in times of peace. The modern world has never returned to the Jacobean practice of trimming them in formal shapes like hedges and evergreens, but the varieties of whiskers remain infinite. The subject is full of technical difficulties which only an expert can discuss. Thus the origin of the prejudice against whiskers deserves careful inquiry. For a generation at least it has been much in evidence. In this country the Civil War made whiskers the only wear. Is the frequent use of the razor one of the consequences of pacifism? Do women prefer shaven chins, and is shaving a part of the suffragist movement? It might well be; in reactionary Turkey wives kiss their husbands on the beard.

Even in times when whiskers were least in fashion the possessors of them have cherished them proudly. The clean shave administered to the convict is justly regarded as a humiliation. When Joao de Castro of Portugal captured Goa he demanded of the inhabitants a loan of 1000 pistoles, and gave one of his whiskers in payment. "All the gold in the world," he declared, "cannot equal the value of this natural ornament, which I place in your hands."

In France the name "poilu," which means hairy one, was given to the soldiers during the war; but we are not informed that our American boys have evinced any desire to grow whiskers as a badge of military service.

THE WEST.

ETHEL A. VERNON.

I would be forever dreaming,
  If I wandered far away,
Of a home where moonlight gleaming
  Turns the night to mystic day.

I would be forever longing
  For the sage-sweet western hills,
All my soul with memories thronging
  Of a land whose memory thrills.

When the snows of early winter
  Whiten all the eastern land,
I would think of San Jacinto,
  Towering snowy-capped and grand.

I would hear a wild stream dashing
  Down a rocky canyon bed,
And the wind to fury lashing
  All the pine boughs overhead.

When the flowers of spring, returning,
  Start beneath the melting snow,
I would see the golden burning
  Of the poppy fields aglow.

I would hear the sweet lark calling,
  Luring all my heart away,
Where the low hills, seaward falling,
  Slope into the dying day.

And when summer sweeps in splendor
  Over eastern field and lane,
Then my thoughts, grown sadly tender,
  Would come stealing home again.

I would see the sunlight creeping
  Over mountains misty-blue,
Where a valley town lies sleeping,
  And a stream goes winding through.

I would be forever turning
  Shimmering warm against the sky,
While the gray hills wait for croon-time
  And the cool wind's lullaby.

I would be forever turning
  Toward the setting of the sun,
And my heart would break with yearning
  When the homesick day was done.

Huns Have a Town Crier.

The officers of the regiment have nothing on the burgomaster of Polch when it comes to having a striker. The only difference is that he is a clanger, for he rings the bell to announce new tidings to the populace. For instance, if the square heads are not on the square with the Americans and a fine is imposed, the tidings of Heinie's hard luck must be published broadcast. So the chief mogul of Polch crooks his finger and explains the mission to the bell ringer, who in turn goes to each street corner announcing that Herr Hassenfeffer has been fined 200 marks for not leaving the outside door unlocked. All this time the bell plays a clanging accompaniment.—[Barrage, Polch, Germany.

Care of the Body.

dicitis." It most emphatically does not "contain all the elements to build muscle, bone and brain."

Even the life-giving germ of wheat is often taken out, to make a breakfast food.

The making of this imitation bread is due to a combination of millers, who have invested millions in expensive machinery, and who derive large profits from selling by-products of wheat.

Get a hand mill, grind your own wheat, and make your own bread. If you wish to make it light, you may add a third of white flour.

Remember, however, that Americans eat far too much starch, and that a great many of them are starch poisoned.

Eat less bread and more vegetables, salad and fruit.

Raw Roots.

WHEN I was a boy, in England, old women would warn children against eating raw vegetables, because they "made worms."

Like modern physicians of the bacteriological school, they confounded cause and effect.

Raw roots are a vermifuge, cleansing the colon. Whether you have worms or not, you should eat a few occasionally—turnips, parsnips, beets, carrots or even potatoes. Raw carrots are especially efficacious as a vermifuge. Grated carrots may be added to a salad.

This medicinal action is due to the large amount of organic salts, or mineral elements in the vegetables, elements that are largely de-organized in cooking.

You must not eat the raw vegetables with other foods. Make a meal of them, preferably the first meal of the day.

Children get worms because they are fed largely on concentrated foods, like white flour and sugar. This also makes the blood acid, which favors the propagation of worms and other parasites.

By the way, it is surprising that the medical fraternity has not declared worms to be dangerous causes of disease, like their smaller scavenger brethren, the much discussed "germs."

Feverish Flesh.

A DISPATCH from Paris recently announced that forty-four Brittany peasants, who had eaten the flesh of a mad cow, reached the Pasteur Institute, after what the Matin feelingly describes as an "agonizing journey."

The pilgrims did not accept the reassurance of the physicians and insisted on a thorough individual examination. Finally after much discussion, they decided to return home themselves, and telegraphed their fellow-villagers that treatment was unnecessary.

The flesh of all animals is more or less poisonous, when they are greatly excited or terrified. They tell of a hare, hunted in England by noble sportsmen, that stopped to give birth to its young, and then resumed its flight. Do you think the flesh of that animal was wholesome?

The same is true of animals driven, panic-stricken, to the shambles.

Many acute diseases, sometimes ending in death, are due to the consumption of such food. So are the animals revenged on their tormentors, who should be their protectors.

Man Not a Machine.

MAN is not a machine, nor is the human stomach a test tube. Laboratory work and vivisection of animals cannot replace bedside study. Bernard Shaw says:

"Here am I, a mass of carbon and sodium. There is any amount of these chemicals lying about. Now, what has assembled them into this thing you see before you called Bernard Shaw? What is it that has taken them and holds them together in this strange and fantastic shape, making a curious noise, and getting them into this bone box, in which there is an amazing brain?

"Imagine a man dealing with that miracle and imagining he can treat it as a mere mechanical or chemical thing. The thing is inconceivable. The man who does that ought to be ruled out, not merely of the medical profession, but of the sweeping of crossings."

LOAFING IN THE SOUTH SEA ISLANDS.

BY FRANK H. SANBORN.

I HAVE just been around the world, that is the Tahitian world or island. I went with my house mate on foot, traveling about fifteen miles each day. We did not need a guide as there is but one road around and this road passes through every place where there is any one living. The natives all live close to the water, as fish forms a large part of their food and the interior is rough and barren.

The road is very much like the old road in Griffith Pa k, replacing the trees with banana, cocoanut and other tropical fruits. Wild guava trees are the most plentiful and are filled with guavas the size of a large lemon. Cocoanuts, bananas, bread fruit and many other kinds of fruit grow wild. The green cocoanut, which is the one most used by the natives, has over a quart of cool milk in it and a thin layer of pulp or meat. The natives grate the pulp, add a little water, press it and have a thick cream for their coffee. When a native opens a cocoanut he is surrounded by dogs, cats, ducks, chickens, pigs and children, all of whom eat the pulp of the cocoanut with great relish.

A Day With a Young Couple in Tahiti.

AS WE entered the native village of Faaa we heard a call and saw a young couple up to their waists in the water, fishing. The girl was about 13 and the man about 16 and proved later to be husband and wife. Their home, which was near by on the shore, was a platform built six feet above the ground on posts and covered with a grass roof. The house had no sides.

The young couple wanted us to stop and be entertained by them. They could speak only native and sign language and we had to do the best we could with that. They were fishing with a pole and line and had caught several fish. After a while they came ashore and got a long arrangement of banana leaves about three feet wide and thirty feet long. The man taking the first end waded into the water about ten feet from the shore. The girl at the other end kept nearer to the shore and together they dragged in for about a hundred feet, and then brought it in with over half a bushel of fish about the size of a large sardine.

They then built a small fire of cocoanut husks and when it was going well they covered it over with rocks the size of your fist. When the fire was about burned out and the rocks were hot they placed upon them some of the fish, also some bread fruit, fais (that is cooking banana) and some other fruits. This was all then completely covered with bread fruit leaves and weighted down with stones.

Two young ladies of Tahiti.

The Simple Service of a South Sea Island Meal.

WHILE the meal was cooking they got the table cloth and dishes and set the table for dinner. The earth under the banana tree was the table; leaves from the banana tree were the cloth; the leaves from the bread fruit tree were the dishes; and our fingers were the knives, forks and spoons. Cocoanut, grated with the milk partly fermented and warmed in a gourd, made the sauce. When all was ready we were invited to sit down on banana leaves for chairs.

They did not have a girl to serve at table so we all helped ourselves by dipping in our fingers and in this way filling our faces, both inside and out with food.

Cocoanut soup was served in a cocoanut shell and was eaten by our hosts by placing the end of the thumb and the forefinger together, sticking them in the soup, lifting what they could of it to the mouth and sucking it from the fingers (with emphasis on the sucking) which could be heard for quite a distance. Everything was very fine, except perhaps the soup; I did not eat much of this myself. There was enough of everything served for a party twice the size of ours but after the meal was finished the remainder was thrown away. After eating our host lay down to sleep and invited us to do the same which, after our hearty meal and long walk, we were glad to do.

We spent the remainder of the day with these people, and on their invitation the night too. Cocoanut leaves again came in handy, being used to make a bed on the floor of the hut for us. As there was only one room, 8x8, in the house, we all slept together.

Before going to bed we all took a bath in the river near by, the natives rubbing their bodies and hair with cocoanut oil. In Tahiti the first thing you smell when you come to land is cocoanut oil, and you can never get away from the smell of it. It is used for everything and the natives all rub their hair, heads and bodies with it. Many of the natives are good looking and I might have fallen in love with some of them if it had not been for their strange smell of cocoanut oil.

Why they Get up Early in the South Seas.

ALL of the natives on the island get up at daylight. They don't work so I suppose the reason they get up so early is that they may have time to eat before they go to sleep for the day. Eating and sleeping form a large share of one's duties to this country. Soon after daylight we were ready to leave but the couple seemed so loath to have us go that we stopped to have coffee with them. The native breakfast is not ready before 11 o'clock, but coffee is served between 6 and 7.

This young couple had nothing on earth to the value of $5 and probably never will have if they live to be old people. Their clothes cost them nothing, they pay nothing for their food, except the trouble of gathering it from the trees a stone's throw from their door or from the sea. If they get tired of their house they could build one like it, or better, in two or three hours.

They are good and kind and generous and the people of Tahiti will not steal. I left my trunks at the house with all the doors and windows open and while on our trip I often left my umbrella, coats and hats for several hours lying around any old place and always found them on our return.

OING on to the village of Papara we were made welcome by the chief and spent the night there. The name of this chief in English would be Solomon and he is called that by the Europeans. He speaks both French and English. His son is a fine looking man, but he has had the misfortune to have lost his hand. The son is well educated and has traveled in California and the Hawaiian Islands. He told me he spent over six months in Los Angeles. He had a number of native Tahitians with him and they gave the native dance at Chutes Park. He told me of his many experiences while in Los Angeles.

It seems that the famous Scotty, the miner, and Gen. Lee took him around to show him the town. Scotty took him to dinner at Levy's and then getting fifty dollars in small change he scattered it to the crowd on the street. Then hiring an automobile he filled it with women and they started for Baldwin's ranch. They went so fast the young Tahitian was about frightened to death and begged them to let him out, but there was no escape for him until they reached the ranch. There he made an excuse to leave the room and then ran until he found a street car and thus made his escape to Los Angeles.

He says there are many nights even now that he has nightmare and dreams he is in that automobile again with Scotty and that crowd of women. He believes that for the rest of his life he can find all the excitement he wants in growing cocoanuts in his own native village.

We were treated very cordially by the chief, who had chicken killed and made an attempt to give us an American dinner, which was very good although cooked in the native primitive style on hot rocks. I don't believe there are more than three cook stoves on the island of Tahiti.

Two days after leaving this young couple we took breakfast at Papeari at the home of the chief of that district and found all there to be bustle and excitement, for they were getting ready for the wedding of the son of this chief to the daughter of the chief in the next district, Alphaahiti. We were invited to stay and go with them as their guests the next morning, which we did.

A Wedding of Social Importance in Tahiti.

HE wedding was a grand affair on account of the prominence of the parents. Pigs, chickens and other animals had been killed, and fruit of all kinds gathered for the feast. Relatives from all parts were present and all was very joyful. They were to be very surely married, first by the French government representative, then by the church, then by the chiefs of the district of their parents.

The first two ceremonies were very tame and soon over, then came the real wedding in native style. The first thing to describe at an American wedding would be the costumes of the bride and guests. The bride had on a white mother hubbard, the husband-to-be a white linen suit, and the natives were all the way from undress to full dress, but mostly undress.

The bride and groom were a fine looking couple, quite young and apparently very happy. Their new home was ready for them and there was lots of fruit in sight. There was no danger of his losing his job, or that his family would ever suffer from hunger or from cold; such troubles are unknown in this country.

It would be hard for me to describe the marriage by the chiefs, as I could not understand their talk, and there was no one there to explain it to me, but it was very impressive and grand. Members of each family took part and most of the time it was hard to tell which would be the most married, the bride and groom or the representatives of their families. It took some time for them to finish it and do it in proper style, after which everyone sat down to the grand feast. This was part of the ceremony I could understand, and I know I did my part of it right, anyway I left the table well satisfied. After wishing the bride and groom luck, the best we could in sign language, we continued on our way.

Women Love Dress, no Matter Where they Live.

AT ONE place we found a collection of natives, men, women and children, who acted as if they had never seen white people before. They were very much interested in looking at our watches, compasses, microscopes and examining our

MARRIED LIFE OF HELEN AND WARREN

A Dripping Candle Accelerates Warren's Exit From a High-brow Party.

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

IT WAS an old frame house, paintless and run down, shrinking back from its crowding menacing neighbors of brick and steel.

A small tailor's shop on the first floor and a hair dresser's on the second were both dark. But from the top floor windows came a flood of light and crashing chords of a harassed piano.

"What're we in for anyway?" growled Warren, as they went up the steps. "An evening of high-brow music?"

"Oh, no, there's to be a lot of literary people—a real Bohemian crowd. Now don't be critical," pleaded Helen. "Try to enter into the spirit of things."

Up three dark musty flights and the top of the stairs plunged them into Elsie Wilford's studio — two large attic-like rooms thrown together.

The air was stifling with cigarettes, candles and incense. It was an overflow party, for many were sitting on the floor.

"Here, we can't wrestle with that bunch!" Warren took a retreating step.

"There's Miss Wilford." Helen moved on to check his flight.

"Oh, Mrs. Curtis, I'm so glad you could come! Do let me introduce you to George Wilton Kenneth, the poet. I'm sure you know his work."

"Oh, yes," murmured Helen untruthfully, to the pallid spectacled youth.

"Where's Mr. Curtis? Oh, there he is," and Warren's retreat was now impossible. "I want you to meet George Wilton Kenneth, the poet. Of course you know his work."

"Can't say that I do," was Warren's blunt retort.

"Then you've a real treat in store—Mr. Kenneth is to read some of his poems. And you must meet Anna More Harding. Miss Harding has just written a very remarkable book on Dadaism."

"Are you interested in Dadaism?" radiated Miss Harding, as the hostess was claimed by another arrival.

"Why, yes—though I'm afraid we don't know so very much about it," admitted Helen hastily, to forestall any brusque remark from Warren.

"Well, of course, very few of us have really mastered its great truths. We are all disciples of—"

But here the hostess interrupted by clapping her hands for attention. Then as the general buzz ceased, she announced,

"Rose Sherwood Miller, with whose verse you are all familiar, has consented to read some of her latest poems."

A murmurous applause greeted a florid woman of 40, her stout uncorseted figure in a straight-lined Batik-dyed gown. She took her place by the piano where the candlelight fell on her manuscripts.

An impressive pause, then in an impassioned resonant voice she read,

"Oh, Love, from thy cup my spirit stewed
Unclad, a pallid glowing wanton mood.
Thou swooning bridegroom of the naked flower
Shampooed beneath a verdant shower!
And when my purple tears embraced thy ravished fate
I dreamt, beloved, that bald hadst grown thy pate!"

"What exquisite subtley of thought!" "How colorful!" "What a haunting rhythm!" were the murmured expressions of appreciation.

Rose Sherwood Miller very willingly responded to the request for "More!" She next favored them with "Love's Rapturous Chalice"—quite a lengthy poem. This was followed by "The Ravished Soul" and "Oh, When Lost Ardors Weep."

After each there was less applause. Surely she would not read another, worried Helen. But she did—several others. Even the hostess was growing restless.

"Somebody ought to throttle her," muttered Warren.

"Sh-sh," whispered Helen. "And don't scowl so—they'll notice it!"

The situation was becoming painfully awkward. Did she intend to read all the manuscripts in her hand? It would take the rest of the evening.

Whispering, coughing, restless movements—but still she read on with even more impassioned emphasis. Could nothing stop her? Helen's face grew hot with sheer sympathetic embarrassment.

Finally politeness, nerves and patience reached the breaking point. She had been reading almost an hour—an hour of gushing sensuous love poems!

The hostess lacking the courage to interrupt a guest, a lank Vandyke-bearded man after a whispered conference assumed the unpleasant task.

At the close of the next poem, before another could be launched, he stepped forward with a nervous but resolute,

"Miss Miller, er—ah, we shall be happy to hear more of your poems a little later. But Prof. Maraschino has promised to play for us— and as he must leave early—"

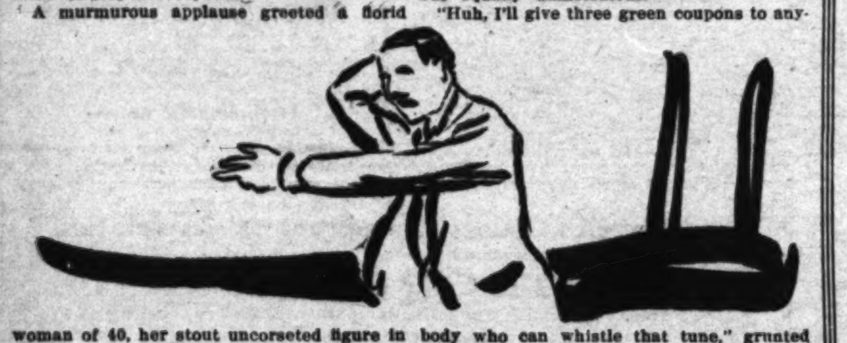
"Oh, very well, I'll just read this, "Ode to an Amorous Megalosaurus!"

Helen gasped. It was unbelievable. Yet she read another poem with increased dramatic fervor. And had not the Vandyke gentleman again stepped determinedly forward, she would have gone on indefinitely.

Prof. Maraschino, small, dark, foreign, relieved the embarrassment by coming forward promptly. A profound bow and he took his seat at the piano.

As though enraged at the instrument he attacked it with frenzied violence. This tumultuous storming died down to the faintest whimper—the soft-pedaled twittering of two keys. Then again the explosive thundering and again the twittering whimper. An infuriated finale followed.

For an encore he favored them with a strange discordant composition, less violent but equally unmelodious.



"Huh, I'll give three green coupons to anybody who can whistle that tune," grunted Warren, and again Helen nudged him to silence.

"Now, if you'll all move back just a little, Miss Irene Hepburn will give her interpretation of 'A Spring Shower on the Nile.'"

The floor space by the piano cleared, an anaemic young man struck some accompanying chorus, and the next moment Irene Hepburn writhed on the scene.

Her costume or rather the lack of it was amazing. Her feet, legs, abdomen and most of her back were bare. Curious bead ornaments covered her bust, while a skirt of dangling pendants came barely to her goose-fleshed knees.

Her stout muscular legs were almost shapeless. Her black, straight bobbed hair was encircled with a jeweled serpent.

She posed and writhed, a heavy-limbed middle-aged woman contorting grotesquely through a sensuous dance that only youthful slenderness could have made pleasing.

"Airy fairy Billikins," grumped Warren, ignoring Helen's silencing nudge. "If that's 'A Spring Shower on the Nile'—no wonder they're all Nihilists there!"

Whatever Irene Hepburn lacked, it was not assurance. And she danced two more numbers, each more weirdly contorting than the last.

"How fascinating!" "What a wonderful fervid interpretation!" "What poetry of movement," were the gushing comments.

The hostess's next announcement was made rather nervously, and with almost a note of apology.

"We have another poet with us this evening—a very famous poet—Mr. George Wilton Kenneth. He will read us a couple of his favorite poems."

Mr. Kenneth took his stand by the piano and drew a slim volume from his pocket. So his verses had at least been published. That alone distinguished him from the poets who were forced to read from manuscripts.

Like Rose Sherwood Miller, his effusions were also of love, and he read in a deep, throaty, languorous voice.

A howl of rage and pain from Warren burst on the saccharine cadence! Dancing wildly about, frenziedly he clutched at the back of his neck!

"Oh—oh, what is it?" breathed Helen, as they clustered about him.

"That damned candle!" he exploded.

He had been sitting on the floor under a book shelf on which stood a candelabra. One of the candles had dripped down his neck!

"Oh, dear, don't—don't make so much of it," whispered Helen pleadingly.

"What d'you think I am—a wooden Indian? Think I can sit still and grin with that boiling grease sizzling down my neck!"

"Oh, I'm so sorry, Mr. Curtis," apologized the hostess. "I'll get you some vaseline or some—"

"You need no remedies," a woman with faded blue eyes touched his arm.

"Eh?" queried Warren suspiciously.

"Oh, I forgot Mrs. Madden was here. She's made some wonderful cures."

"Now close your eyes and relax," instructed Mrs. Madden in a "now-all-is-well" voice. "Think of some flower—a red rose or a pink carnation or a yellow tulip. Just

Among other things, Prof. Hawk advocates eating hot bread, drinking ices water freely with meals, bolting meat, swallowing milk rapidly, boiling milk and eating "bob veal."

As to bolting meat, that is the way in which carniverous animals eat it, but man is not carniverous, and flesh is not a natural food for man.

As to "bob" or immature veal, it is no more harmful than any other kind of meat, and less so than the flesh of a grown animal, that contains much waste matter.

The stomach of a healthy man, taking active exercise, may for a time be able to endure all these abuses, for the human stomach is wonderfully patient, but the result will inevitably manifest itself, sooner or later, in dyspepsia, and a train of more serious ills.

On the same principle, you might argue that it does not harm you to use whisky, coffee, tobacco or drugs.

If every dietetic error was quickly followed by punishment, people would not commit them. The result of wrong eating is cumulative.

The professor had some of his students take a test meal of bob veal, sandwiches made with hot bread and bolted rapidly, ice cold water and boiled milk, swallowed in gulps and he was surprised that they did not die.

Let them keep up such a diet for a year, and I will guarantee that they will die—or will wish they were dead.

Profitable Business.

TALKING to a friend of mine, who is a drugless healer, a surgeon connected with one of the leading Los Angeles hospitals said:

"I performed ten operations today at $200 each. That is more than many of you people make in six months. The people want it. Why not give it to them?"

The people do not want it but are scared into operations by fee-splitting physicians, who act as "cappers" for surgeons, and own stock in hospitals.

• • •

Blood Pressure.

BLOOD pressure and temperature tests are among the fads of modern medical science, used as "camouflage" to impress and scare "laymen."

As I have previously said, high blood pressure is largely high gas pressure, due to fermentation of food, caused by wrong eating.

Remove the cause and the blood pressure will quickly decline. Also the temperature.

Normal blood pressure, in middle age, is about 135, in older people 140 to 145.

• • •

The Body Politic.

THE body politic has its diseases, as well as the physical body. Absolutism is suppression of disease, that is sure to break out in more dangerous form. Bolshevism is a skin eruption. Sane democracy is a state of social health.

Distructive operations will not permanently cure either physical or social diseases. Educate, and establish wholesome living conditions.

Many of our social diseases are due to our consuming—or importing—more human material than we can assimilate.

In a list of killed, on one day, in Chicago race riots, ten were white men. Of these, only three bore American names.

You may note the same thing in I.W.W. and other labor disturbances.

This country has to pay dearly for the false policy of excluding the products of cheap European labor, while admitting freely laborers who are ignorant of the first principles of democracy, and therefore easy dupes of incendiary demagogues.

It is gratifying to note that many broadminded employers of labor have adopted a liberal, intelligent method of considering the welfare of their employees. Others may wait until it is too late.

Medical Treatment.

HENRY LINDLAHR, M.D., writes:

"Dr. Schwenninger, the medical adviser of Prince Bismarck, and later of Richard Wagner, the composer, published a book entitled "The Doctor." This work is a most scathing arraignment and condemnation of modern medical practice, especially of poisonous drugs and of surgery. Dr. Treves, the body physician of the late King Edward of England, is no less outspoken that Drs. Osler and Schwenninger, in denunciation of the practice of drugging.

"Only a few men, who, like these, have achieved financial and scientific independence in the medical profession, can afford to speak so frankly. The great majority of physicians, even though they know better, continue in the old ruts, so as to be considered ethical and orthodox and in order to hold practice.

"It is not the medical profession that has brought about a reform in the treatment of typhoid fever and other diseases. They have been forced into the adoption of the more advanced natural methods through the pressure of the Nature Cure movement in Europe and America."

• • •

System in the Household.

WE HEAR much, nowadays, of system and efficiency in business. It is about time that a little should be introduced in the household. Then women would not so often become nervous wrecks.

If any business was run in the way the average woman runs her house that business would inevitably go "broke."

The "Staff of Life."

A MAGAZINE advertisement reads:

"Eat more bread. It is strength-giving; it is healthful; it is economical.

"Bread contains all the elements to build muscle, bone and brain. It will sustain your energies at their best, and be less of a tax on both your purse and your digestion than rich, heavy foods.

"Try doubling your bread allowance. Prove that bread is the staff of life."

This is ludicrously false.

Instead of being the "staff of life," modern "process" white flour, deprived of most of the necessary mineral elements, that lie just beneath the bran, is a starvation food, on which—if fed exclusively—a man would soon waste away and die.

Whole wheat flour contains twenty-three parts of minerals in a thousand parts of solid food, as compared with six parts in white flour.

Superfine white flour is a leading cause of constipation, followed by inflammation of the bowels, which the doctors call "appen-

A Lap Behind.

O WOULD it be "A splash behind?" Duncan was driving home from market in Perthshire, where the roads are perilous by reason of the many headlong brooks or "burnies" that run across them. He was sitting on the front seat of the gig with his wife behind him, her back to his.

Presently he met Donald, who hailed him.

"How are ye, Duncan?"

"A'm fine. How's yersel?"

"Brawly. And the wife?"

"The wife's well. She's there behind me."

Donald eyed him curiously. "Na, na, man," he said at length, "she's no behind ye."

Duncan turned and meditated at the empty seat. "Aye, aye," he said deliberately, "that would be the splash."

ROBERT JAGGSBY'S countenance was not at any time remarkable for indications of intellectual brilliance, but now as he stood before the camera for the purpose of being photographed, his expression was so imbecile that even the polite camera man was moved to protest.

"You'll excuse me," he remarked, "but do you want this photograph for a beauty competition or an advertisement for a new rat poison? Because, if it's for any other purpose, you'd better try to look a trifle more pleasant."

"That's just the trouble," exclaimed the unfortunate Robert; "you see, I've the misfortune to be a trifle bandy, and I'm trying to hold my knees so that it won't show. When I smile I forget all about my knees, and when I pay attention to my knees I forget to smile."

Shimmie.

IT WAS the night they nailed the Demon Rum's tail to his own coffin. The world and his wife were going home reluctantly from the cafes with a bulge of whisky inside and out and a feeling of liquid regret. Near the center of the city a stout woman tried to fight her way onto the trolley car.

"Hurry up there!" shouted the conductor. "Get on edgeways."

The plump passenger glared at the speaker belligerently.

"Say, you freshie," she called, "what if I ain't got no edge?"

Can You "Bait" It?

MR. JONES keeps a shop not far from the fishing pier at Santa Monica where he sells fishing tackle. For the sake of advertisement he has a large rod hanging outside, with an artificial fish at the end of it. Not so long ago, in the early hours of a June morning, a man, rather the worse for his night's enjoyment, caught sight of the fish, and went quietly to the door and knocked. Jones, being in bed, looked out of the window and asked, "Who's there?"

"Don't make a noise," was the reply, "but come down as quickly as you can."

Thinking something serious must be the matter, Jones dressed like lightning and came hurrying down as quickly as possible. "What's the matter?" he asked, breathlessly.

"Hush!" was the reply. "Pull your line in quick. You've got a bite!"

A Friend in Need.

"THE race riots in Chicago remind me of the same sort of excitements that ran around Atlanta when I was living there as a young man," said George McDaniel of Metro recently.

"My brother and I were both medicos—owners of smooth and virgin sheepskins. We shared the same office and lunched at the same counter. In the midst of wild confusion, one day, a wounded negro rushed into our office and begged for protection. This was freely granted, for we had no race prejudices, in spite of our southern upbringing. We also poured salve on the negro's bruises.

"'Yo' shuah been good to me,' said the grateful darky, turning to my brother—who, by the way, is now practicing in Los Angeles—'an' I'll 'member it, doc. Say, if yo' ever kills anybody mah friends and I'll get you out if we have to bust the jail to do it.'"

Welcome!

THE boys were coming home and Slushton was determined to give them a great reception and not to be outdone by any other of the near-by towns, so everybody hung out decorations.

"What's the matter?" asked the vicar of a khaki hero who wept with joy.

The man pointed to the local police station on which was displayed a huge banner reading:

"Welcome Back Again."

The Cussograph.

"T WOULD never in the world do to mention this golfer's name. He is a prominent player on the various greens of Los Angeles.

He is a rather choleric gentleman, who went out to play for the second time on a certain course. Evidently his fame had preceded him, for at the drive-off he found an interested audience of local youngsters.

"What's this?" demanded the choleric one. "What do you want?"

"Nuthin'," was the noncommittal reply of the leader of the bunch.

"Then clear off, every one of you!" exclaimed the player. "There isn't anything going on here for you to watch!"

"We didn't come to watch," returned the youngster. "We came to listen."

Dad Wasn't Worrying.

"JURD SIMPSON'S oldest daughter got married last night," related Gap Johnson of Rumps Ridge, Ala., who was on a shopping expedition.

"Ah! Who was the happy man?" asked the editor of the "Torch of Liberty."

"Jurd, I reckon. Leastways, when I rid by his place this morning I seen him standing on his head in a fence corner, with his heels waving in the air. And, as Jurd is all of 50 years old, I don't 'low that grief would drive him to cutting capers like that."

• • •

Puzzled.

THE police reporter turns this in: "You can never tell what a jury is going to do," remarked Judge Blank the other day. "Sometimes they are remarkably intelligent, but soft hearted. Others I have seen were what you might call hard boiled. And every once in a while you strike a chap who makes you wonder if the jury system is right, after all.

"Like the fellow who made up one of a jury trying a man accused of stealing a watch. The testimony was all in and the jury was about to retire when the court asked if any juror wished to ask a question. He declared he would be glad to answer it.

"The jury then filed out, all but one man, who was obviously puzzled.

"'Would you like to ask a question?' the court asked.

"'Yes, Your Honor; would you mind telling me if the prisoner really stole the watch?'"

Kitchen Science.

THE young couple sat in their six-by-eight "garden."

"I see by this medical work," said the lady, "that a man requires eight hours' sleep and a woman ten."

"Yes," agreed the man, "I've read that somewhere myself."

"How nice!" said the lady. "You can get up every morning and have the fire made and the breakfast ready before it is time for me to get up!"

As Man to Man.

LITTLE Sidney had reached the mature age of 3 years and was about to discard petticoats for the manly raiment of knickerbockers.

Mother had determined to make the occasion memorable, and the breakfast table was laden with good things when the boy was led into the room.

"Ah," exclaimed the proud mother, "now you are a little man."

Sidney was in ecstasies. Displaying his garments to their full advantage, he whispered, "Can I call pa Bill now?"

From Missouri.

REPRESENTATIVE ESSEN said at a banquet in St. Louis:

"There is a story that illustrates the superior business ability of Missouri's sons.

"A Missourian and a Californian were traveling in India. On the way through the jungle a tiger sprung upon a native, and the two travelers, simultaneously raising their guns, shot the animal dead.

"The native was profuse in his thanks. He turned out to be a high priest of Buddha and he invited the two travelers to visit his temple, where he would grant them, he said, any wish they might express.

"So they visited the magnificent seat of worship and the grateful high priest asked them what they wished.

"'I,' said the Californian promptly, 'wish to be a millionaire.'

"'Go home,' said the priest, 'and within six months you will be rich beyond the dreams of avarice. And you?' he added, turning to the Missourian.

"'I don't ask much,' said the Missourian. 'Just give me this Californian's address.'"

Couldn't Be True.

HE WAS a lawyer, and a good lawyer when he was sober, but as his country was going dry July 1, he had few chances to show how good a lawyer he really was. Night after night he came home looking more like the Northern Lights than a human being, which greatly alarmed his wife and friends.

"Don't scold him, Mrs. Blank," a friendly neighbor advised. "That will only make him worse. Try kindness. When he comes home wondering if it's night or morning put yourself out to be gracious to him."

A few nights later Blank came home, after a forty-eight hour absence. He was in his usual condition and he nearly fell through the door as it was opened. But wifey was there with a smile.

"Come right in, dear," she said. "You look awfully tired. My, but you're working hard and I'm so sorry."

She helped him to a chair and saw that he was comfortable. "Now," she said comfortingly, "don't you feel better? You want a smoke? Don't move, I'll get you one."

Blank stared at her. He couldn't quite comprehend.

"Now," she said, "let's see, what else do you want. Oh yes, a nice cool drink, with a good kick in it. What do you say?"

Blank still stared. He stared some more. Then he sank back with a smile:

"A'right," he said. "But a good—hic—good kick in it. Might's well—hic. I'll get—hic—h—l when I get home, anyway."

Or Sand?

DESCENDING at Nice from their open car, Gen. Pershing and a party of officers were received by a French government official, who, noting the white coating of dust under which their uniforms almost disappeared, said:

"You are very brave, general, to undertake to motor on our roads in their present state. Poor France! Her roads, once the best in the world, are now the worst. With their holes and dust they are really impossible. Yes, indeed, I repeat that you are brave."

Gen. Pershing politely disclaimed that it was a matter for bravery, but a staff officer, shaking from his cap a big dust cloud, remarked:

"Well, if it is not a question of bravery, it is at least one of grit."

Of Course!

THE literary society was meeting in Odd Fellows' Hall. Rev. Josiah Dobson presided. Hon. James Bolivar McHenry, the noted orator from the adjoining county, was speaking on "The Peace Table," and the audience was rapt in respectful attention.

"And that was what they conceded," he concluded. "I ask you, fellow-citizens, what does this nation need? What is her necessity, as she leaves the Far Western shore and steps proudly across the Pacific, and in the eye of the world lays the hand of democracy upon the brow of the Orient? What, I repeat, does she need?"

"Rubber bootsh!" hiccoughed the town souse.

Bum Choke!

BILLY BYRNE, the Covington, Ky., attorney claims that the oldest joke is the one about the Irishman who had a run of hard luck and decided to commit suicide. A man discovered the Irishman a few hours later. He had a rope tied around his waist and was dangling from a tree.

"What are you doing?" asked the man.

"I'm hangin' myself," replied the Irishman.

"You can't hang yourself by putting the rope around your waist," said the man. "You should put it around your neck."

"Och!" replied the Irishman, "I tried it that way, but I couldn't breathe."

And She Faded Away.

IN A SOUTHERN camp a private was to be operated upon for appendicitis. A pretty nurse had been assigned to his case and the two became quite friendly prior to the operation. The head nurse observed this and decided that the efficiency of the nursing force would be increased if another nurse took the place of the pretty one.

The change was accordingly made, but not until after the patient had been taken to the operation room. The new nurse was no beauty, but was on the job to care for her newly acquired charge. As the ether began to lose its effects and his thoughts were still in a turmoil, the patient looked up at his nurse and remarked:

"My God, how you have changed."

"Now run like the devil."

She started to run, but too late. Her embarrassment trying to explain to the woman of the house can be imagined.

Eddie's Bait.

CAPT. EDDIE RICKENBACKER, America's ace of aces, told a good one on Lieut. "Jimmy" Meisner, one of the crackerjack members of his squadron, to the members of the San Francisco Motor Dealers' Association luncheon while in that city.

"On four different occasions I downed Huns that were on Meisner's tail shooting him up," Rick said, "and the last time I got the Hun pursuing poor Jimmy, the fellows were congratulating me on saving his life, when he walked in. "Saved my life!" Jimmy snorted, "Huh, he wants to swell his number of victories and he's merely using me as bait."

Rick also told this one on himself.

"Before we entered the war," he said, "I went to England to buy two racing cars. Because of my Teutonic-sounding name, the Scotland Yard detectives shadowed me night and day, and when I was called back to Los Angeles suddenly, I noticed a familiar British face on the boat and train all the way to Los Angeles. A short time after I arrived back the same Englishman approached me. Before he could get a word in, I asked, with a little heat: 'Well, did you find out I wasn't the Crown Prince's personal representative in the United States?'

"'Lordy me, yes, Mr. Rickenbacker,' he replied, 'I just wanted to thank you for being the means of such a nice trip to California, doncha know.'"

Pro Rata.

IN ONE of the regiments the rats had become such a pest that the officers took drastic measures to get rid of them. An offer was made that to any of the boys twelve hours' liberty would be given every time they brought in a dead rat.

One day a soldier came into headquarters with a demand for five days' liberty. "Five days' liberty? Where do you get that stuff?" they howled at him. He produced a paper sack, which, on being opened, showed ten young rats which he had found in one nest.

The joke was on the officers, and the soldier got liberty.

CARE OF THE BODY

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D.

Income and Outgo.

IT is not so much what money you earn, but what you save, that contributes to wealth.

So it is not so much what vitality you accumulate, as what you conserve, that contributes to health.

When your income is larger than your outgo, you are happy—so far as money can make you happy. In regard to the functioning of the body, the reverse is true. When your intake of food is larger than your expenditure of energy, you are miserable, for then you are sick, and a sick man is never really happy.

Health depends on maintaining an even balance between alimentation and elimination—between the intake of bodily fuel, in the shape of food, and the expenditure of effort, in muscular or brain work, together with the maintenance of bodily heat. If there is a surplus, and you have—until you ruin it—a strong digestion, this surplus is stored up in the body as waste, the chief cause of disease. If, on the other hand your digestion is weak, the surplus ferments in the stomach and intestines, causing dyspepsia. Remember, it is not what you eat that nourishes you, but what you digest and assimilate.

Chemists estimate the value of foods in "calories," or heat units. This is misleading. Three-quarters of a pound of butter or a pound of sugar would furnish sufficient calories for twenty-four hours, but if you should attempt to live on such a diet, you would soon be a subject for the "funeral director."

The nourishment in food should be estimated by deducting the water and the small percentage of waste. There is a great difference in the amount of water contained in various foods. Oatmeal contains only 7 per cent. of water, rice 12 per cent., bread 36 per cent., beefsteak 70 per cent., eggs 75 per cent., tomatoes 94 per cent. Thus, as I recently showed, when you buy a pound of these foods you get only the following amount of nourishment: In oatmeal fifteen ounces, rice fourteen ounces, bread eleven ounces, beefsteak five ounces, tomatoes one ounce.

A great majority of people eat too much. They take in too much food and choke their furnaces with clinkers. Appetites are tempted with a variety of sauced and seasoned and sweetened foods, so that, after a man has eaten more than enough of meat, bread and potatoes, he proceeds to fill up on pie and ice cream. Nature can stand this for a time—perhaps for a long time, if the stomach is strong—but sooner or later the inevitable happens. The outraged digestive organs protest, and if the protest is disregarded, chronic sickness in various forms sets in. Whereupon dope and "remedies" of various kinds are used, impairing health, also efficiency and shortening life.

In Good Health J. H. Kellogg, M.D., writes:

"If a healthy man confines himself to a biologic diet, that is, a diet such as the higher apes adhere to in their native wilds—a diet of fruits, grains, nuts and succulent roots, with eggs in moderate amount and milk, avoiding hot irritating condiments—no doubt his gustatory sense and instinctive leadings might guide him fairly well in the straight and narrow path of dietetic rectitude. But it would be necessary for him to reform many of his vicious habits. For example, he must learn to chew his food properly, so as to give his gustatory nerves time to examine and appreciate the foods which he eats. Fast eating tends to overeating. An excess of food is swallowed before the body has time to signal 'enough' by taking away the relish for food.

"And, then, there are all the enticing arts of the cook. Our modern cookery is a grand conspiracy not against the stomach only, but also against the liver, the kidneys, the nerves, the heart, and the blood-vessels. Food is so piquant, so tempting in flavor and appearance, that to avoid overeating requires more force of character than the average individual possesses. Not only the viands themselves, but the tout enemble of the bill-of-fare, the order of the dishes, the setting of the meal; everything is made so enticing that the diner who arrives at table with no appetite, even with an instinctive loathing for food, soon finds an appetite created by the vivid stimulation of his senses; and the man who has already eaten quite enough is seduced into eating as much more by the compelling appeal of savory viands and palate-tickling sauces.

"And so the instinctive guides are smothered. In many cases the normal instincts have been so long abused and adumbrated that they have become depraved and make demands which are wholly antagonistic to the best interests of the body. Of this character is the craving for the after-dinner cigar or cigarette and the black coffee that goes with it."

To work off the effects of overeating, ancient Roman gluttons resorted to the "vomitorium." The Englishman takes a "constitutional." The American goes to a gymnasium. Great waste of time and effort. It is like trying to empty a bath tub while you let the water run from the faucet. If you eat only enough to furnish heat and energy, and replace waste, you need not exercise much to keep in good condition.

That bluff old English physician, Dr. Abernethy, told a wealthy patient, who suffered from gout: "Live on a sixpence a day and earn it."

The nearer you follow this advice, the healthier and more efficient will you be.

Prolongation of Life.

IN ONE of the scholarly editorials of John McGroarty, a feature of this magazine, he deplored the energy expended by chemists in finding new ways of destroying life in war, and suggested that science might rather devote itself to the prolongation of life.

Unfortunately, the work of medical scientists is as destructive as that of war chemists. By drugging, and serumizing, and cutting out necessary organs of the body, they shorten life instead of lengthening it. While the average mortality rate has declined, owing to preservation of the lives of infants—some of whom would better have died—statistics show and medical journals admit that mortality after middle age is steadily increasing. This is due partly to an unnatural hectic mode of living, partly to starvation "process" foods, and largely to the injection of decayed animal matter into the blood, in the shape of serums, to which is mainly due the rapid increase of cancer and tuberculosis in spite of millions of dollars spent in misguided efforts to "stamp out" the latter disease.

There is not, nor can ever be any "specific"—food, drug or operation—that will prolong life. All that is as vain as the search for the "Fountain of Youth." Alcohol was called an "elixir of life" when first introduced by an Italian physician, but we know it is not, and Dr. Brown-Sequard's extract of goats' testicles failed to make old men young.

It is not by "taking something" or "doing something" that you may acquire health and long life, but by ceasing to take and do those things that have made you sick.

Cornaro showed the way. Given up by his physicians at 40, after a dissolute life, he dismissed them, adopted a temperate mode of living, and died at the age of 103. And note this: "Temperance" does not mean abstaining from alcohol, and stuffing on fried chicken and pie. Cornaro drank, with his frugal meal, a pint of light wine.

There is only one way to attain old age. That is by living in accordance with the laws of nature. And there will never be any other way. Be sure of that.

Epilepsy.

J. H. TILDEN, M.D., of Denver has written a booklet on this subject. (Published by the author; price 50c.)

In regard to the cause of epilepsy, Dr. Tilden says:

"The commonest cause is poisoning by putrefaction. The putrefaction meant is that generated by gastro-intestinal decomposition, especially that caused by too much sugar and meat eating. Thousands eat too much sweets and protein; yet not many develop epilepsy. The reason should be obvious to those who are acquainted with my theory of causation.

"People will not take a disease for which they are not predisposed and systmatically prepared. If this is true (and it can be proved) then what becomes of the latest theory advanced—namely, that epilepsy is caused by the bacillus epilepticus? If the germ is the cause, what becomes of the proof, which is demonstrable, that epilepsy may be caused by mechanical irritation, alcoholics, excessive venery, septic or putrefactive poisoning, or anything capable of poisoning the blood or causing reflex irritation, in those of delicately poised, or unstable nervous systems, while those not so highly or delicately organized are not thrown into convulsions by these causes?"

For treatment, the author urges the importance of economizing nerve energy, and avoiding anything that brings discomfort, such as eating without hunger. Rest must be had as much as possible, and all excitement must be avoided. "The epileptic should not marry until positively cured. He should conserve his reproductive energy to cure himself."

"Some Popular Lies."

HALF a dozen correspondents have sent me a clipping from the American Magazine for June, and have asked me to comment on it.

If I should attempt to criticise half the fool articles on diet, written by physicians, I should have no space for anything else in the Care of the Body.

The article is entitled "Some Popular Lies About Eating" by Philip A. Hawk, Professor of Physiological Chemistry and Toxicology at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia. Introducing the article, the editor of the magazine says:

"The facts in the accompanying article were brought out by an elaborote investigation carried on by Prof. Hawk and his associates at the Jefferson Medical College, in Philadelphia. By the use of special instruments, it was possible to discover some of the things that are happening in the human stomach, especially the action of the gastric juice on different conditions. The result has been the conviction that some of the old theories about diet—theories which have been accepted and preached as 'gospel truth'—are no more reliable than so many fairy tales."

KNUDSEN'S LABORATORY,

THE VENGEANCE OF PARIS.

BY STERLING HEILIG.

PARIS, July 27, 1919.—I can tell you what they say will happen to the first German business house that sets up again, apparently as German, in the beautiful center of Paris.

A woman in black will be seen strolling back and forth on the sidewalk in front of the establishment. She will say nothing; but no French citizen can enter those German doors without seeing her. Her presence will be a mute reproach—and her looks yet more so.

Can the French government stop this picketing?

At need, they say, the woman in black will stay only ten minutes, saying to the policeman: "I am waiting for a friend," or "I am looking at the goods in the window." Another woman in black will arrive by chance, on time, to replace her. And so on. A very great society of women, they say, has made this plan with single-minded bitterness. The pickets will have mild stock phrases: "My husband was killed at Charleroi." "My brother was killed at Verdun!" to intersperse with quiet and dignified explanations: "I am waiting for the tram car."

Never a cry or incitement to violence.

But the woman in black will be there!

At the Grand Cafe, I asked Adolphe: "How will you treat the first German tourists?" "I won't treat them," answered Adolphe. Georges, Adolphe and Henri nodded grimly. "Neant—no movement!" was their explanation, French equivalent of "nothing doing." No words, no violence—but no service. "The patronne (boss) can wait on Germans, if she wants to!" Each of these men put in four years and more at the front.

How long will this sort of thing last?

The French Have Never Forgotten the War of 1870.

WHEN I came to Paris, in 1891, first traveled in Germany and made some German acquaintances. Later, when two such came to Paris, I went about with them. At the palatial Pousset Brasserie (beer taverns, called Belgian, Bavarian beer having come in strongly with the Exposition of 1889) we were conversing in German—why not, over German beer, sold and drunk by French folks? Yet at that late date (in 1892) a waiter interrupted us with great politeness: "Will the messieurs have the kindness to cease speaking German? It contraries our public!"

It was twenty years after the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-73 that such a thing could happen. Twenty years later still, in the spring of 1914 (when nobody in France dreamed of war,) I was so struck by the changed situation in my own time that I undertook an investigation of German prosperity in Paris.

It began at Spiess's Wiener Restauration, the highest class German public place in the French capital, much frequented by Parisians by curiosity of German wines and cookery—and the first establishment wrecked on mobilization night in August, 1914.

At Spiess's, then, at lunch, one of those happy days before the war, we watched two really beautiful German girls amid large family tourist parties, with young German men agog to show off. The German language was all over the place. Flushed with Burgundy, three young touristen began flinging words like "welsches" and "bildungsschwindel" in the direction of correct young Frenchmen eating duck-and-stewed-fruit as a foreign treat.

Not a French eye was lifted, not a French voice answered—such was the French dread to start an "incident;" and yet we know—the world knows, now—their courage. Such was German prestige in 1914, and such its response to the incitements of the "Tag" and other "hot-headed" Berlin organs, urging German tourists in Paris to "speak the maternal language highly, without fear or ceremony!"

Only Paid Agents Kept German Language Alive in Paris.

THEY did it intermittently—as an aggressive duty. Those who spoke the maternal language regularly in Paris were the 24,208 German nursery governesses, who were paid for doing it! The others preferred to practice French.

The front room in Spiess's Vienna Restaurant of Paris—the most expensive and first to be wrecked on mobilization night of August, 1914. Every one of these employees had already quit the French capital and the place was tight shut two days before declaration of war. This photograph was taken, without thought of its present use, at the very epoch, in the heyday of German prosperity in Paris.

[Copyright, Sterling Heilig.]

Two hundred thousand German tourists.

Plus 100,000 German population.

These were the right figures for Paris in 1914. The first is from the daily supplement of the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger and other papers like the Berlin Neueste Nachrichten, which ran series of triumphant editorials on the subject, at this epoch. In American cities, we do not have 200,000 well-to-do German tourists annually scattering gold in taxi-autos, betting on the races, buying in the big shops, dazzling the night resorts, do we? Paris did. And Paris accepted the money-burners. The humiliation of 1870 was forgotten, at last. . . .

These figures were confirmed to me by Julius Loeb, prosperous editor, up to August, 1914, of the Pariser Neitung, in person. In my then investigation, I asked him. "The actual figures of the Prefecture of Police give 103,000 resident Germans in Paris," he answered. "But the true number is considerably greater. We have only one German school in Paris, it is true—because parents will not send their children to it. They naturally want them to speak French fluently, as a business asset; so they send them to the French public schools."

The German Tourist Seemed to be Everywhere.

"AND German tourists?" I remember asking. "The Tag puts them at 200,000 annually. (All this, remember, was just a few months before the war.) The German editor in Paris laughed. "You'd be nearer if you put it at 300,000," he said. "Take merely the movement to and from the Riviera, where 60,000 Germans form, perhaps, the most important money-spending aggregate from Cannes to Toulon. Then calculate the daily through trains from the frontier of the East, pouring an average 100 Germans, each train, into Paris—just for Paris, Lyons, etc., business and pleasure. Multiply by 365. Then add the summer excursion movement, which is colossal. Your total will be away above 200,000."

"Have you any complaints of Germans being insulted?"

He threw up his arms in comic protest.

"You, too? An American in Paris! Surely you know better!" he said; and then he told me a lot of things. For instance, he mentioned the rich and active group who, twenty years previously, had laid hands on Franco-Spanish and Portuguese commerce. They were the famous German commission houses of the Rue Hauteville and Rue Bergere. In 1914, they had attracted around them, in the ninth and tenth wards, a German population that all but swamped the French. As early as 1903, they had equally centralized most of the exchanges between France and South America in their hands. They shipped anything on credit—paying cash, and creating a banking movement, rich, important.

Were these the important Germans of Paris? Not at all. "How's business?" he asked of a bounding German youth. "Just bounding!" answered the bounder. He gave (then) recent details of the Maggi Company, most colossal dairy supply of Paris, entirely German. He spoke of a bunch of palatial hotels, just consolidated in a German company. "All subscribed among friends!" he bragged. He told of immense German insurance interests; of German shipping, passenger and freight, dominating pools in the one case, handling French shipments, even, via Hamburg and Bremen in the other.

He told of French coal mines just bought up by Germans; of the Burgundy wine trade, become entirely German; and of the ready-made cloak, cheap cloth and general novelty supplies of the Paris department stores become so German that—"Listen!" he said. A German boy of his acquaintance had a great business of buying up the packing-cases in which such goods came to the Paris department stores. "Two-thirds of those boxes are German!" he laughed. "Paris stock from Saxony!"

German Commerce Preferred French Competitors.

HE TOLD me . . . He told me . . . He told me so many things that I exclaimed: "Why, soon you Germans will have taken over all Paris business!" "No," he answered happily, "France is a rich cheese. Personally, I prefer things as they are. Should Germany absorb all the trade, we would have German merchants to compete with. I prefer French—they're easier!"

That was in 1914.

Today, it is all different; and some Germans recognize the reasons. Among others, the courageous editor of the Volksblatt of Halle speaks frankly:

"It is quite understandable," says the Volksblatt (May 2) "that black hate should exist in France against the German army and German governments of yesterday and today. It must not be forgotten that it has been recognized that all the alarmist news spread broadcast over Germany in July, 1914—bombs of French avions on Nuremberg and Mannheim, aggressions against German frontier posts, etc., etc.—and which served as pretext for the declaration of war against France—were but old nurses' tales (Ammermaerchen.) It was no psychosis of war which called the French to arms, but invasion and hypocrisy of violated engagements!"

Speaking of atrocities and devastations in Belgium, this German editor admits that Belgium is a flourishing garden compared to what they did to North France. "Humiliations and cruelties are forgotten after a generation," he says, "but wounds made to the land do not heal so quickly; and the grandchildren of these French people will curse those who made them!"

"Concerning industry," he says courageously, "French competition annoyed the German factories. The war offered a unique opportunity to ruin the adversary on the economic ground. Under pretext of furnishing iron to German factories, regular commissions were charged with systematically carrying off all that could be utilized in the occupied territory. These commissions worked with such zeal that to take out a single iron bar, entire constructions were destroyed from top to bottom. Thus, it was hoped that French industry would be ruined after the war and that one could appropriate the exportation business."

Will Germans Begin at Once to Make Money in France?

THERE will be Germans in France, repairing devastations.

Will there be others—making money?

Yes, immediately. According to the records of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, there are currently about fifty demands for naturalization before its little Chamber of Deputies. Recently, the Journal of Esch analyzed forty-two such demands actually on the docket—one Belgium, five Alsatians and thirty-eight Prussians. Among the thirty-eight Prussians, quotes the Paris Matin, there is a Baron von Scherlemmer, related to the family of the recent Kaiser. "He certainly would not have become a Luxemburger if his country "had won," observes the Matin. There is also Auguste Schmidt, who wore the gray uniform at Noyon, and Auguste Charles Rother, who distinguished himself as a German lieutenant. Now he's coming to Paris as a Luxemburger."

German trade slips into France through French exchange and German indemnities. Because the mark has fallen so low, a French $20 bill will buy $45 worth of goods in Germany. It is a terrible temptation to the French commercial mind. The cutlery trade of Solingen is offering by mail, to French retailers, articles at $1.60 per dozen which French manufacturers cannot furnish under $4.80—thanks to the low rate of the mark. And—why, the very fact of German reparations demands that France should help Germans to enough prosperity to pay them! The billionaire German potash concerns of Alsace are being reorganized in francs. France recently refused American dyes—because she wants to buy German dyes, and pay by defalking, by consortiums.

But the first Germans to mix and mingle in the life of Paris, again? I think they will have to be, not so much courageous men as very, very patient and philosophical.

THE GOB AND THE MAN-O'-WAR.

BY ALBERT HOUGHTON.

AT FIVE-THIRTY in the morning if one is awake one may hear the beautiful tones of a naval bugle sounding the Reveille." This is the signal for the Jimmy-legs, otherwise known as the Master-of-arms, to lift his stentorian tones to the old yell of "Alright, hearties, rise and shine. Turn out. Lash and stow hammocks."

And the next fifteen minutes is more bustle than you ever saw before. In this short space of time one must arise, roll and lash his hammock (this with seven marline hitches) dress himself, stow his hammock, wash his face and be ready for work.

The hammocks are stowed in what are called hammock-nettings. In the old days they were actually nettings, similar to fishing nets. These were stowed alongside the bulwarks, but the ancient had to give way to the modern, so the nettings of today are large steel lockers with white painted canvas covers over the upper half.

When hammocks are stowed, many large pots of coffee are set down on deck, many enamel mugs are produced and the blue-jackets coffee-up. Then there is time for a cigarette for those who want one.

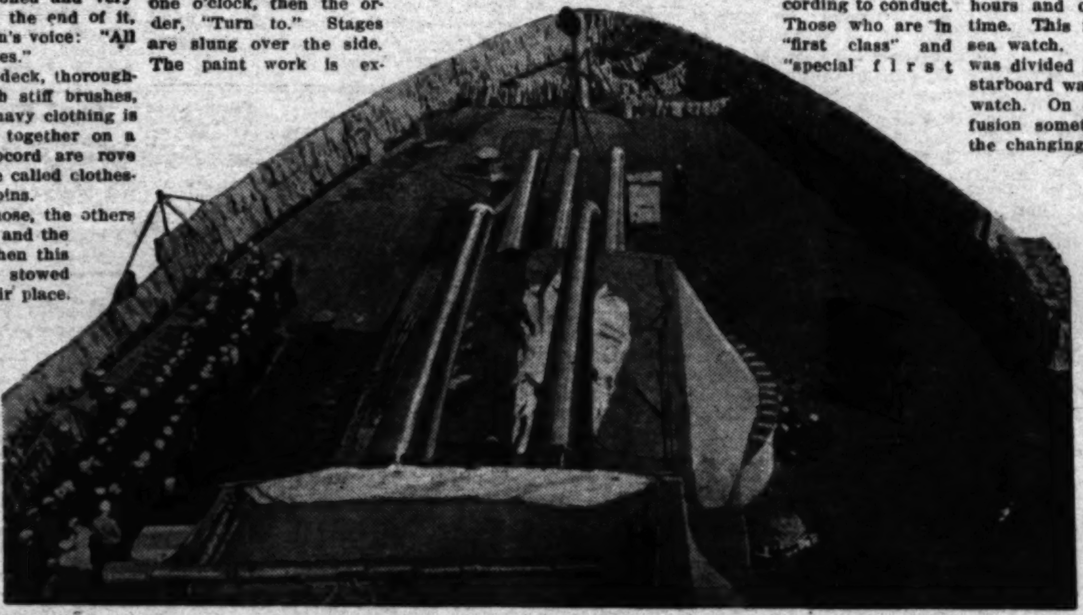
Only Fifteen Minutes Have Elapsed so Far.

AT FIVE FORTY-FIVE the boatswain's pipe, a peculiarly fashioned and very shrill whistle with a pea in the end of it, is heard. Then the boatswain's voice: "All hands scrub and wash clothes."

Soiled clothes are laid on deck, thoroughly soaped and scrubbed with stiff brushes, then hung on the line. All navy clothing is made with two holes close together on a seam, short pieces of whipcord are rove through these holes, they are called clothes-stops, and are naval clothespins.

Then one man mans the hose, the others arm themselves with brooms and the decks are washed down. When this is finished the brooms are stowed away and squegees take their place. The decks are dried as much as possible. Swabs are used to dry the paintwork. This continues until 7 o'clock when the bugler sounds "Mess-gear." Squegees and swabs are stowed away and fifteen minutes are spent in washing up and preparing for breakfast.

At 7:15 the bugler sounds "Mess call," the bugle is followed by the pipe. Then starts the Tables are suspended from stampede to the tables. the deck above by short sections of half-inch line or with folding legs and braces. When not in use they are stowed away overhead. Each man has a permanent seating place. Breakfast usually consists of stewed fruits, oatmeal mush, coffee and bread and butter. This may not sound very appetizing to a landsman, but the morning's exercise coupled with the exhilarating salt air gives it a relish that nothing ashore can compare with.



"Airing Day" on the U.S.S. Oklahoma.

At first glance this might seem to represent a camouflaged warship entering the "danger zone" during war times, but it is really a photograph, snapped from the fighting top of the U.S.S. Oklahoma, showing the "gobs" lined up for "bedding drill," while adorning the rail can be seen the bedding of the sailors, exposed to the pure fresh air of the river, while the sailors line up to the left of the photograph.

When breakfast is done with all hands loaf around the decks, smoking and chatting until 8 o'clock, when the boatswain's pipe is again heard, followed by the order, "Clean bright-work." The men form into little groups, each in charge of a petty officer, brass polish and waste are drawn from the boatswain's locker and all the brasswork is shined. One man in each group is furnished with a swab and a cake of sapolio. His task is to remove all spots from the paintwork.

At 8:30 or thereabouts all brasswork is shined, all paintwork is clean and the materials are turned in again. Then "sick call" is sounded. All sick, lame and lazy line up. They are examined by the surgeon and given the necessary treatments. The remainder of the men change into clean clothes and prepare for "Quarters," the naval Assembly. This occurs at 9:15. Each man is assigned to a division when joining a ship. These divisions are called powder division, navigator's division, gun division, etc. The remainder are in numerals. Each is in charge of a C.P.O. or chief petty officer. A commissioned officer is in full charge.

The bugle sounds "assembly." There is a shrill chorus of pipes. Another chorus of yells: "Fall in, the Powder Division." "Fall in, the Navigator's Division," and so forth. The men fall in double rank, facing inboard. "Attention, right-dress" is given. The roll is called by the C.P.O. The C.P.O. turns to the officer in charge and reports: "Powder Division, all present, sir." The officer returns the salute and reports to the ship's commander who gives him the drill order for the morning.

Then setting-up drill is done for fifteen or twenty minutes, followed by infantry drill, gun drill, battle stations or whatever may be the order of the day. This sometimes continues until 11 o'clock. Then "dismiss" is sounded. If the drill has been infantry, the rifles are now returned to the armory together with the belts and bayonets, and more relaxation follows until 11:45, when "mess gear" is sounded, the signal for again washing up and preparing for mess, which takes place at noon.

Dinner is usually of fresh meat, fresh vegetables, bread and butter, tea and dessert, the latter stewed prunes, rice pudding or something of that kind. Hardtack or ship's biscuit is practically unknown today as most of the ships have a modern bakery aboard. Fresh vegetables are carried in bins on deck where the wind can blow through them.

The boatswain's pipe is again heard at one o'clock, then the order, "Turn to." Stages are slung over the side. The paint work is examined. All suspicious spots are beaten with a chipping hammer, a hammer shaped like a chisel on each end. This removes all rust. Then red-lead is applied. When this dries the regular paint is applied. This job seems to be endless. One never realizes the expanse of free-goard, from the water-line to the gunwale, of a battle ship until one has been around the ship on a stage. White paint must continually be scrubbed and every day someone is at that.

Then there is "Boat Drill," the art of pulling an oar in unison with the remainder of the boat's crew; the proper length of stroke; the correct manner of feathering an oar, turning it astern after the stroke is finished, to lessen the wind resistance.

The number of drills in the navy is amazing and so large is the variety that it never becomes monotonous. A first-class man-of-warsman is taught almost everything in all branches of the army, with the exception of the cavalry, and in addition there are "Fire Drills," "Abandon Ship" drills, "Clearing for Action," "battle Stations," "Collision Drills," seemingly no end of them.

What a Gob May do After Four O'clock.

WHEN 4 o'clock comes it brings the end of the blue-jacket's day. There are boxing gloves, fencing foils, boat sailing, mending of clothes (each ship has a sewing machine and many of the sailors make their own clothes) a wrestling mat, in fact any kind of athletic diversion is encouraged and taught. Musical instruments are brought forth and each man does as he pleases. His time is his own until 5:30, when the evening colors are made, this is the naval retreat. The bugles sound off, followed by the band playing the "Star Spangled Banner." All hands stand at attention and salute, facing aft, and the colors are slowly hauled down, and stowed for the night.

Then "Mess Gear" is sounded, followed in fifteen minutes by "Mess Call." Supper is of the same quality as the preceding meals.

The next bugle call is heard at 7:30 o'clock, "Hammocks." All hands line up by their hammock nettings, facing aft. When all is ready the boatswain sounds his pipe and bellows his command, "Take hammocks."

Two men take the hammocks out of the nettings and call the numbers. Each man to whom it belongs answers: "Here," takes his hammock and hangs it on his hooks, which bear his number. He may turn in then if he so desires, or he may join in the games that are played until 9 o'clock when "Taps" is sounded.

You Have to Earn Your Liberty in the Navy.

LEAVE in the navy is called liberty. It is given in twenty-four and forty-eight hour doses. The blue-jackets are graded according to conduct. Those who are "in "first class" and "special first class" are eligible for liberty, the latter for "special liberty." First the uniform for the day is posted on the bulletin board together with the announcement that liberty will be given. Those desiring liberty put in a request for it. Their conduct ratings are looked up; if satisfactory they are notified. At the proper time the bugle is sounded, or the boatswain's pipe is heard, then the order, "Lay aft the liberty party." They fall in, double rank. The officer of the deck inspects them, seeing that clothes are properly worn and clean, then they are checked off and go ashore.

Upon enlisting, a man is issued a hammock, a sea-bag and enough clothing, if properly cared for, to last the term of his enlistment. With the hammock are two blankets, a thin but comfortable mattress and two mattress covers. These covers are regular bags into which the mattress is slipped. They take the place of sheets. At the end of two weeks hammocks, bags and mattress covers are scrubbed and clean ones issued. The clean ones are marked with the billet number and added to the man's collection.

EA bags contain all the clothing, with the exception of shoes, sea boots and oilskins, which are in designated lockers. All other clothing must be kept in the bag and bags must be lashed up to a rail made for that purpose. If any clothing is lying around loose the master-of-arms takes it. It is put into a large bag called the lucky-bag. At the end of the month the lucky-bag is broken out and the contents auctioned off. The proceeds go to the mess-fund. This is a polite manner of prohibiting clothing from littering up the ship.

Writing materials, toilet articles and other small stuff are kept in your ditty-box, a small wooden business about one foot by one foot by eighteen inches, with a hasp and lock.

On Friday the ship is prepared for Saturday inspection. Everything is cleaned and polished. The decks are holy-stoned. First they are thoroughly wetted; then sand is sprinkled over them; then comes the holy-stone, or bible as it is sometimes called, a soft limestone which is dragged or pushed over the deck wearing the surface perfectly white. Some stones have handles, like a broom. Others haven't, and to operate the latter it is necessary to assume an attitude of prayer, or in other words, to recline, gracefully or otherwise, on your marrow-bones. Hence the name, holy-stone.

When a ship is under way sea watches prevail. That is, sailors are on watch four hours and off watch the same length of time. This is called watch and watch, or sea watch. In the old days a ship's crew was divided into two groups. One was the starboard watch, the other was the larboard watch. On account of the similarity, confusion sometimes arose. The result was the changing of larboard to port.

Four o'clock in the afternoon starts the first dog watch which lasts until 6. The second dog watch is from 6 to 8. The object of the dog watches is to change the day watch. For instance we start with the first watch at 8 in the morning with the starboard watch on deck. Port watch comes on deck at 12 o'clock. Starboard again at 4 o'clock to 6, the first dog watch. Port watch at 6 o'clock to 8, the second dog watch. Then next day the port watch will be on deck from 8 in the morning until noon.

Ship's time changes every four hours with the watches. Eight bells are struck at 8, 12 and 4 o'clock. One bell is added for each half-hour until eight bells are made, then the entire procedure is repeated.

Seeing by Ear.

There is a machine, the invention of M. Fournier Dalbe, a French scientist, whereby blind persons are enabled to read an ordinary printed page of a book or a newspaper. The different letters are distinguished by the reader through a telephone receiver, which is attached to a little instrument that may be moved at will over the printed page.

The vital principle made use of in the construction of the instrument is the peculiar property of the metal selenium in strengthening or diminishing an electric current passing through it, according to the amount of light to which it is exposed.

The delicate adjustment of Prof. Dalbe's device allows of an easy differentiation of letters by the varying sounds in the telephone receiver as the detector is moved across a brightly illuminated page.
